LETTERS TO BEAR

Mostly Edited By Killer

SEARCHING FOR THE IDEAL

Let me start by saying I love BEAR. I have been a faithful BEAR reader for almost a year now and I find the articles and photos absolutely what I need to turn me on.

I find it hard to meet the type of man I like, rugged, football player type, body-builders and bears. I would love to find that perfect bear who has all of these traits. My goal is to find that bear and live in the forest. Just my man and me.

I could relate to the Bare Pause article by John Dibelka in #13. He sounds like what I am looking for and the article was very informative, full of insight and true to life. I will be a faithful reader of his column from now on. If at all possible, print a photo in an upcoming issue so I can see what he looks like.

Thanks for a most excellent publication. I'll let you know how my responses are to my ad.

M.E., Rhode Island

John is a real sweetheart who has worked with BEAR since it was a small-format fanzine. His insight is soul-baring and decidedly different than our editorial voice (although we do our share of gut-spilling, too). And he is a handsome one. We'd be glad to forward a letter from you to him if you put a stamp on it.

YAK YAK YAK

The hottest places I've seen bears are in Griff's in Los Angeles, the Eagle in Atlanta, and Jewell's and Rawhide in New Orleans. In my opinion, the dumbest bar is Mike's Corral in Long Beach.

You know what I really hate when I'm in a bar? When I see some really hot-looking men, they turn out to be a big clique, some attitudinous group of self-exclusive assholes who just happened to be really hot. What do you think?

F.C., Baton Rouge, LA

Hell, of course it pisses me off. It pisses me off whenever any group of people go to great lengths to limit contact to one of an exclusive nature. However, a part of me thinks that most anybody at a bar is open to meeting new folks, regardless of their association with an entourage. When you see someone you think is that cat's pajamas, it may be worth your while to swallow hard and introduce yourself. You certainly have nothing to lose.

So you like Griff's, huh? Chances are you've seen Furr, one of our fiction contributors, there. He often tells me stories of the place. I seem to recall his most recent one was about New Year's Eve and how all he had to drink were these little bitty glasses of Jack Daniel's. Model citizen that he is, he didn't want to drive while intoxicated, and chose to spend a good deal of time at an after-hours club, sucking dick until he sobered up. What a fine example for our youth.

YEAH, WE CAN DEAL WITH IT

Can you guys deal with another fan letter? A long one?

I called your toll-free number today and what began as an order for two more of your videos expanded to include a subscription and a third video. Your man on the line answered a question about your "Big Guys" video and even knew how much the big guys weighed. That cinched it. He was a pleasure to talk to and made parting with my money easier.

The main reason for this letter is to say a big thank you for dealing with the age-old issue of size in such a matter of fact way that it makes one wonder why it has ever been an issue. Thank you for showing me and all my brothers with less-than-gargantuan dicks just how flat-out sexy guys like us can be. It's about time especially big guys with

REPORT • OWEN DUBOSE • THE BRUIN REPORT • OWEN DUBOSE

This one's gonna be a bit different. Not long ago, my friend Stephen shared with me a book called The 100: A Ranking Of The Most Influential Persons In History. Being a history buff, I borrowed the book just to see who the author, Michael H. Hart, puts where and why. It's an interesting read, and I recommend the book to anyone who might be interested. Hart's reasons for putting certain people in certain places on the list are really surprising, as are certain omissions, which he confesses to and then explains why.

While looking through the book I discovered nine of the 100 people listed were bears. So, this column is a listing of the nine most important bears in history, via Michael Hart's book, filtered through my own rather skewed eyes and brain (may it rest in peace). I've arranged my listing in chronological order, just as added incentive for you guys to at least go to the library and find out where on Hart's list they can be found. I'm so sneaky.

Johann Gutenberg (1400-1468): The first important bear in history by date was this German. Pretty famous guy, actually. Gutenberg was not, as most people like to think, the inventor of printing. The Chinese did that. What Gutenberg did was invent moveable type. The ability to move type on a printing press allowed printers to increase production and diversify product (paving the way for such wild works as the Catholicon and bestselling authors like Mallory).

Galileo Galilei (1564-1642): Galileo was a busy guy. This Italian scientist is most responsible for the development of the scientific method, still used today. While dodging persecution (oh, those wacky popes), Galileo also discovered the mechanics of velocity and inertia, and invented the telescope.

Johannes Kepler (1571-1630): Another German (hmm) and the third most important bear on the list. Kepler is most known for discovering the laws of planetary motion. His research was influenced by Copernicus, whose findings Kepler eventually surpassed.

Karl Marx (1818-1883): Yet another German! Marx was, of course, the principle originator of "scientific socialism". He co-smaller dicks get exposure as objects of sexual fantasy. Our self-esteem suffers enough at the hands of homophobes without being ridiculed and rejected by our own brothers who've bought into the myth that the bigger you're hung, the more desirable you are.

Case in point: furry, beefy Tony Bruno in #13 has been a real creamer for me, especially that shot of him hunkered down, his dick straight out and hard as a diamond, and his balls drawn up tight at the base.

Then there's Kelly Gaynes. He's the first J/O in your Big Bad Bears video and he never fails to put me over the top every time. He should have been saved for the end of the video! Couldn't someone talk him out of that jacket? Use Kelly again, but show us more of his body, especially those tits he was working on. I've gotta say I really missed getting to hear him. For me, live sound is the best part of a video.

I get the impression that a current theme or maybe an editorial position is to equate "bears" with raunch. Since DRUMMER is already committed to cornering the market on greasy, smelly, filthy, heavy-duty man to man action, is there any chance that BEAR might occasionally run an article or story about good old-fashioned clean-smelling, heavy-hugging, deep-kissing, hot-loving bears?

And thanks to Andy Mangels for his Hirsute Heroes article in #12. I'm now hooked on fur-bearing comics and have the start of a nice little collection. I found a three-part story called "Soul Search" in which Superman grows a nice healthy stubble and in a fight that lasts all three issues, manages to expose a furry pee complete with an actual Superman nipple! Now if you can just get T.C. to draw his humpy touch customers once in a while as bears with pelts instead of just big men with beards. I hope you guys never lose sight of the fact that it's the fur that makes the bear and that's what you're all about.

In the same issue that you declined a reader's request for a bare BEAR staff pic, you ran a shot of your great-looking publisher-editor Richard Bulger and shot yourself in your collective foot. Besides, Mel Dahl has already proven photogenic. Sorry guys, but that excuse about being ugly didn't even make it out of the chute. Now, how 'bout that staff photo?

D.K., Portland, OR

Thank you for one of the most thought-provoking letters it has been my pleasure to receive. You bring up a number of interesting points, the least of which is dick size.

One of the things I've learned from being exposed to as many naked men as I am is that there is a wonderful range of dick size. What many men think of as a small dick is simply an average one, I guess because the dicks they've seen in their smut are enormous and seemingly everywhere. As far as I'm concerned there is no dick so small its load would not be as sweet as any other.

And as for raunch in BEAR. The stories that get printed are ones that are well-written and turn me on; if they contain some piss or spit or mud or whatever, no apologies. There's a story in #15 called Spring Again, about two guys who jack off and hug. It turned me on. It is well-written. I like it when there is emotion other than unrepentant lust in a dirty story; it's just that it's difficult to do well, and not many writers attempt it.

Now, about that staff photo: we're starting a contributor's page, with photos and little bios of the guys who create the stuff you see in the mag. If some of them want to be photographed, fine. We'll show them to you. If some don't, well, there you go. We tried. Some of the boys here at the shop, me included, are just too goddamn camera-shy for words.

SOME HA'E MEAT

(Grace, Robert Burns)

There is one thing I would love to see in your mag, and that is a pin-up page of old-fashioned portraits of cowboys and gamblers, except they're exposing themselves. In particular, I'd also like to see a furry-chested Scotsman with a beard, lifting his kilt to expose his genitals and hairy ass.

E.O.

I like your imagination, man. I've been intrigued by what a Highlander wears under his kilt. I get so fed up with formulaic fetishes. I've often thought about what man-loving was like with cowboys in the 1860s or the trappers and mountain men of the 1840s, and find a historical bent to my fantasies a lot of fun. In a class I had in college, on the history of the American West a book even stated that homosexual activity must have existed on the ranches and great cattle drives. I thought that was pretty damn decent of the author, to acknowledge it like that.

OH, MY PAPA

As a child, I remember seeing my father without his shirt. He was big and hairy from head to toe, front and back. I wrote with his pal Fred Engels "The Communist Manifesto," which basically put the spark to the fire of the Russian Revolution and all the brouhaha that followed. Thanks, guy.

THE BRUIN REPORT • OWEN DUBOSE • THE BRUIN REPORT •

Louis Pasteur (1822-1895): Not a German, but a Frenchman (whew), Pasteur was a chemist and a biologist, generally acknowledged to be the most important single figure in the history of medicine. He's most famous for his advocacy of the germ theory of disease and the development of preventative inoculation. We get the word "pasteurization" was his name. I guess Crab Louis comes from elsewhere.

James Clark Maxwell (1831-1879): The only Scotsman on the list, Maxwell was a physicist best known for his formulation of the set of four equations that express the basic laws of electricity and magnetism. Without him and his work, we would have no television. Eek.

Nikolaus August Otto (1832-1891): You guessed it, a German. We have Otto to blame for a lot of pollution problems, as well as traffic jams and the highway death toll. Well, maybe not directly, but Otto, in 1876, built the first 4-stroke combustion engine prototype, spawning the auto industry. And it's been downstream ever since.

Wilhelm Conrad Rontgen (1845-1923): The eighth most important bear on the list, and yet another German. If not for this guy, airport security would be even interesting than it is now, and doctors wouldn't be able to see through you to your wallet as well as they do. He discovered X-rays.

Alexander Graham Bell (1847-1922): The last on the list and the only American, we are all most familiar with Bell and his invention. It was while trying to find a way for deaf children to hear that Bell invented the telephone, and uttered those immortal words "Watson, come here. I want you." Lucky Watson.

That wraps up this issue's listing. Let me know if I've bored you. I thought it would be a nice change of pace to do this sort of thing every once in a while. Take it easy.

thought all men were like that. It certainly came as a shock to find out that there are more smoothies out there than hairies. It has been a real search to find those bears out there. Your mag is a real plus.

TELL US, TELL US

I could tell you why I need to get BEAR magazine. No place around Indiana gets it.

For my birthday I went to the baths to celebrate. I ended up getting jacked off by a dude who said that was all he did. He was great for an hour, but what the hell. Another guy watching sucked on it until he wore himself out, a real treat for my big dick. Then a Latino wanted me to fuck him and took it like a man but it was a job to fuck an asshole hungry for raw dick. Finally I went up on the roof and met a former prisoner who sucked on me. When I got him a room, he shaved my nuts and ass and really went to town. He's the one who said BEAR mag is where it's at. I want it.

J.H., Mt. Pleasant, IN

WANTS PRETTY MEN WITH BEARDS

I've been a subscriber of BEAR for over a year and I enjoy getting it in the mail. I am a bearded Italian, living in the Santa Cruz mountains and I'm not at all interested in smooth collegiate types featured in other magazines. I've enjoyed your magazine and I like the short fillers you put in. I also like the stories.

As for the guys, I like some of them. However, I notice that you seem to be leaning towards featuring husky men with round beards. I've liked a few of them, but I'm becoming less interested.

How about some photos of strikingly handsome men with beards? There are so many in San Francisco, you surely can find some. I'd be interested in some young, gorgeous kid with a beard. Or some guys with beards in semi-undress business suits.

Please don't let your magazine, becoming as it is, be a biker magazine with burly beer-gutted ZZ Top guys only. I see BEAR as featuring hairy men with beards, but I also like to jerk off to photos of really good-looking beards.

A personal fetish of mine is necks. Shoot your models looking up, showing the thick, bulging muscles of a man's

FAVORS US WITH HIS BUTTOCKS

I really like your magazine and am renewing my subscription. I wish in your tattoo section you could show more of the person. I know the point is to show the tattoos, but sometimes you can't even tell what part of the body you're looking at.

For bear watching in the southern Maine/New Hampshire coast area I recommend the Kittery Trading Post. It's a sporting goods store and some of the hottest looking guys are there looking at the equipment. The gun department always seems to be good, too. Another good place is at the annual motorcycle run in Laconia, NH. Enclosed is a photo of me taken by my old man. Feel free to use it.

J.R., Danvers, MA

You know, one of my favorite games to play with photographs of tattoos is Guess The Body Part. We get the newsletter from Illustrated Men and are occupied for hours on end trying to envision the camera angle, much less where a tattoo is located on some guy. But your point is well taken and we'll try to be less tattoo-objective in future Skin Art photo sections.

Our publisher is from this neck of the woods and additionally he recommends Dysart's Truck Stop in Bangor, L.L. Beans in Freeport (watch out for the yuppies), and the rest areas outside of Augusta (watch out for the cops).

neck. Also, letting the neck stubble show on a neck is a real turn-on.

You are to be commended for giving us a glimpse at the diversity of tastes and styles which make us unique. Keep up the good work.

T.H., Santa Cruz, CA

Receiving your letter sort of balances the letters which state that we're only featuring good-looking, in-shape bearded men. I have a funny suspicion that people see what they want to see in BEAR, depending on their powers of observation at their point of viewing.

THE MIND AS A MARITAL AID

Issue 14's Bruin Report told its readers of Pappa Bear Robert Fulghum. I was introduced to Fulghum's work through the Unitarian Universalist Church, to which I belong. Fulghum is a Unitarian Universalist minister. The church is not a Christian church, but is a liberal, humanistic faith. People of all sexualities are fully accepted and are ordained as ministers. My sexuality and identity are known and acknowledged. Our minister is an honorary bear! His stocky, hirsute frame is topped by a lush, dark brown, full beard. I often leave church with a throbbing bear-cock and sweaty palms.

Another bear-in-hiding is Norm Abram, master carpenter of PBS' This Old House show. He also hosts the New Yankee Workshop. My old man and I saw him in person at a local home-building show. After his talk I shook his hand and was so fucking hot we went back to our truck and I gushed my juice down my dad's throat. We often fantasize that Norm is with us.

Your magazine is great. As we read each new issue, my daddy always lets me fuck him. It's better, while plowing his furry, big bear-hole, to keep the new bears I've just read about in mind. Keep it up and we won't miss an issue!

R.T., Jacksonville, FL

My god, sometimes I wonder who let you guys loose in the world, what with all your hormones on the rampage! I'm happy to hear that BEAR enhances your sex life. It seems that you and your old man have already hit upon one of the best things to perk up a libido, and that's your imagination. Be-

OH NO, NOT ANOTHER POLICY QUESTION

Got a question for you. What's the deal with your policy of only running a photo with an ad once? I noticed in previous issues that there were some guys who had photos with their ads more than once. What gives? If there's an explanation, I'd be happy to hear it.

Here's a photo of the recently established executive board for our club Bear Paws of Iowa. We were formed in November of 1990 and are affiliated with the Mid-American Conference of Levi-Leather Clubs. We can be contacted at PO Box 2774(B), Iowa City, IA 52244.

D.A., Des Moines, IA

Well, guy, if we have new photos on hand of a guy we've already published in the classifieds and we need something to take up the space, we'll run the photo. It can be tricky to tell what's going to fit and what isn't. Don't take it personally.

I recently read a copy of your newsletter. Nice little piece of work. I was amazed at the range of topics covered - everything from BBS's to wrestling and photos of members. I wish you boys nothing but the best.

sides, you can run up a helluva bill with all these high-priced sex-toys and gimmicks and shit around. I've gotten more mileage out of a simple $12.00 set of spurs and a beat-up work shirt than all the porno videos, dildos, tit clamps and leather I've owned.

CANADIAN KUDOS

Hey, man, Canadian Customs must be crazy. BEAR is really quality smut, so please, keep it and me coming.

Issue #14 arrived on a frigid day with the temp at -38° C. with a windchill of -48. BEAR did much to keep me warm in a climate that encourages hairy, hairy balls just for survival (not that mine are exposed much in these temps; they are best served steamed at the local YMCA until they can venture out in a summer breeze at the local bare butt beach.

I did a fine warm-up studying Wild-card. His protruding hard nipples really heated me up and a couple of those guys in "Bears in Heat" could give me terminal inner (and outer) glow. I love your mag in black and white and my imagination colors it up just fine.

THE REALITY BEHIND THE HARLEY MYTH

Joe Banks' article "Holy Harley..." was on the right track, even for the Boston area. There are Harleys and there are cycles, and a ten lane highway with a median strip divides them. And in the break-down lane, bikers stop for bikers, Harleys stop for Harleys. BMW's are in a world unto themselves. But Harley riders unto themselves are really down to earth if you reach out and go the extra length. Down to earth without being condescending as a rule (at least in my experience). What I've discovered with some amusement at times is that Harley owners could really care less if you're gay or not. Owning and caring for your hawg are of more importance. You care for your hawg and these guys will care for you. Even those beefy out-of-uniform cops can be friendly and give a hand to a Harley driver resting in a rest area.

And Steve Kasper's shot at the wall has to be the best of the lot, rivalling the bare-ass sequence in the movie Never Cry Wolf.

G.M., Dorchester, MA

Some of you guys actually read this magazine? Thank you. It's always a bit of a risk running non-fiction articles. None of us here were really sure what the response would be; I'm happy to say that it's been positive. Having those photos of Steve handy just happened to be gravy.

THUMBS UP

I just finished watching your video Prime Meat. It is the best X-rated tape I've seen in a long time. Most of the new tapes are full of smooth bodied, just barely over 18 boys. But Prime Meat lives up to its name. These guys are definitely mature.

J.J. Montana (the cowboy) is a dream come true. It's obvious you saved the best for last. He's got the warmest, friendliest smile. You can almost see the devilment in his eyes. And when he flicks his tongue, God, he takes my breath away.

He's the real reason I'm writing. If you can get a great looking man like him to get naked and beat off in front of a video camera, why can't you get him to do some nude photos for BEAR? You mentioned in past issues that BEAR's models like fan mail. If I send J.J. a letter in care of COA, would you see that he gets it?

Also, Bijou Video is selling a tape called Big Bear Men. I wonder if you could give us a review of this and similar bear related tapes in future issues. The ad I saw mentions the Daddy Bears. If it's worth the effort, why not add it to your video price list?

I wholeheartedly agree with C.D.'s letter to BEAR. A staff portrait is most definitely in order. If you're all too shy for the "with dick" request, how about in bathrobes?

B.W., Selingsgrove, PA

BIG BEAR MEN is a movie of ours that Bijou bought and added a few scenes to. We market it as LIVE BEAR. Occasionally we review dirty movies. We just don't see that many worth mentioning.

A staff photo in bathrobes? That would be even scarier than seeing us nude.

OUR CONTENT QUESTIONED

I love the magazine. But is it really for me? I am 59, 6'4", 200 lbs., partially bald, white-haired and hirsute. I have no desire for rough sex, for alcohol, for hanging around with pot-bellied, anti-intellectual people who don't shower, bathe, wear clean clothes or take pride in their personal appearance. I like classical music (live at LA Philharmonic, radio, or CD), Fitzgerald and Faulkner novels, and Eddie Bauer-type clothes. Is this incompatible with being a "bear?"

C.S., Rancho Palos Verdes, CA
Anti-intellectual? This is news to me. In issue #15, was there not sufficient intellectual content in a music column which discussed works by Messiaen, Crumb, Hanson, and Harrison? Rough sex? Gosh, the stories are many and varied, and while the characters in them might not be as memorable as Floyd Snopes or Dick Diver, the stories serve their purpose. Don't shower, bathe, or wear clean clothes? Just who are you impugning? The staff which serves this fine publication? Shit, we all bathe on a regular basis, whether it be once a day or once a year. As for clean clothes, it depends on what sort of requests we get. I've been wearing the same jockstrap for a little over five months. Luke changes his shirt every day, more or less. Tom...well, we think Tom wears clean underwear. Gene has dreadlocks in his pubes. Mark wears his underwear outside his pants. Richard doesn't wear anything under his. It's just one of the things we do to please those we love.

Eddie Bauer-type clothes? What about the kind of clothes you were raised in? In my case, it's boots, jeans and T-shirts. I'd say it is only as incompatible as you think it is.

SO TERRIBLY SHY

Hello guys. This is no-name Bill that came in and got all flustered when introduced to Mike Kane.

You men are really nice (sorry, but what else applies? Kind, gentle, sweet, friendly) and going to your shop was a really scary experience. I was scared you people would rob me. Well, robbery like Nordstrom's.

The writing in the magazine is great, smart, funny, caring and honest. I wonder if I made a fool of myself, but I am anonymous so I can afford to say thank you and I'd like to hug you, one and all.

Be good to yourselves.

B., San Francisco, CA

A little background. Mr. B. came in a while back, looking pale and acting very nervous, as though it was his first time shopping for erotica. He didn't even want to give us his first name, so we called him Bill. Generally speaking, when men (and the occasional woman) come through our doors, they know why they're here, we know why they're here, and I figure we might as well have a little fun with it. Some people you need to coax a little. Much like the guy who wrote this letter. Mike Kane, featured in issue #12, happened to be hanging out, so we introduced him.

Mr. B., you make me blush. Forgive me. Sometimes I don't take compliments well; I like to think of the things I do here as simply my job. The thing is I want the guys who come in here to feel good about themselves and comfortable about what they want. I'm happy to hear all the kind things you have to say about the shop and those who staff it.

Writers, for some reason, are expected to have all the answers. This is bullshit. Speaking strictly for myself, all I have is opinions, and even those change with my experience and interests. Yet people want to hear them, which is why I recently spent a Friday evening with a couple of friends, sitting in front of about thirty very serious young men and talking about my sex life.

The topic was "Leather and SM." The people we talked to, whose questions we answered as thoroughly and honestly as possible, were all between 18 and 24. They reminded me of myself at their age: desperate to learn but anxious not to be laughed at; ready to grow if they could just overcome their fear of change; fascinated and repulsed. Other than that I know little about them. The other two people on the panel were Wendy Sue, a lesbian dominatrix who has been known to humiliate men for their pleasure and a fee, and Mark, a local former Mr. Leather who made his living for many years by turning cow hides into fantasies. I'm still not sure what I was doing there, except that I sometimes wear leather and I am always a writer.

The three of us worked well together.

The questions were pretty predictable, considering their source. Wendy Sue gave most of the SM answers, teaching me a thing or two along the way. Mark had brought some toys and a few items of clothing and gave a gentle lecture against playing on drugs. I wound up talking about feelings and attitudes.

"Why would anyone," I was asked when we got around to fist fucking, "want to have a hand inserted into his rectum?" I answered that no one can answer that. If the idea doesn't excite you, forget the whole thing. If it does, even a little bit, find someone you trust who knows how to do it and give it a try. Sex is all about fun, and fun comes from the most unexpected places.

I didn't always feel this way, but I have learned to adapt, and my opinions and experience were what they had asked me there to hear.

"But isn't it all about pain and humiliation?" someone else asked. "What is the handkerchief code?" and "What about scenes? Who decides who's going to do what?" I answered these questions (we all did, as well as we could), but I felt like yelling, lighten up! Be spontaneous! The best way to screw up a good time with someone is to try to plan it all out in advance. In this case it is all about intense sensation and a type of shared experience most people don't find in other ways. Those things just don't come out of scripts.

"Well, didn't it hurt to have your tits pierced?" someone asked, doubtfully. Not at all, I replied. I did them myself, and I loved it. But then I had to laugh. But having my dick pierced just about killed me, I told them. Everyone out in the audience cringed.

I looked over at Mark and he smiled. My Prince Albert is his work, and although he'd been performing other types of piercings for years, it was the first one of these he'd done. He did an excellent job. It's perfect. It's just that neither of us had known what to expect at the time. For a while it seemed like we were in a race to see which of us was going to throw up or pass out first. Still, it was something I wanted and something he wanted to do and the two of us got through it together. I could never have done it without him.

In a very real sense, it was Mark who brought me out. He didn't pop my cherry. Instead, he did for me what he and Wendy Sue and I were doing for these younger men; he answered my questions and gave me more to ask. He encouraged me to think about what I wanted and to go after it. He never once laughed at me for being inexperienced. Mark was the first person I ever met who treated this side of me with respect.

When I came out I was older than any of the young men we were talking to, but I was no less naive. I'd been married and divorced and gone through it pretty much on my own. I was nearly thirty before I screwed up my courage and walked into a bar where the men smoked cigars and there wasn't a sweater or tennis shoe in sight. That was where I met Mark and it was Mark's lessons to me that I was trying to pass on to these fellows that Friday night.

The last question was my favorite. "What do you do if you've started to have sex and it's just not working out?" Stop. Immediately. Sex is the one thing in life you should never have to work at. That's why we call it 'playing.' Have a good time. Just remember two things: how to say 'no' when you need to, and how to say 'yes' when you want to, especially to the unexpected. Adapt.

I think we did a lot of good. I have never been a parent, but now I know a little of what it feels like to be a daddy. I like it.

Unfortunately, I didn't think of one of my favorite anecdotes until I was on my way home. It would have made the perfect illustration.

When Mark was on stage being judged for his title, he was asked what I guess was supposed to be a killer question. "Suppose," said the MC, "you've met a man with shoulders out to here," (envision a linebacker by way of King Kong) "and a chest out to here," (think of an XXL shirt being burst at the seams) "and arms out to here," (picture some bowling ball biceps) "who is the hottest thing you've ever seen, and he wants you." The MC paused here, to let Mark and the judges catch their breath and the rest of us wipe the drool off our chins. Then came the punch line. "But you find out he's got a dick out to here" (imagine a microscope slide). "What," asks Our Host, "would you do?"

There was a short, but silent, pause while Mark thought about the question. Then he broke out one of the nastiest smiles I have ever seen on any face. Lifting one fist, he wrapped his other hand around it and slid that hand down to the elbow.

"I'd sit on him," Mark said, "up to here."

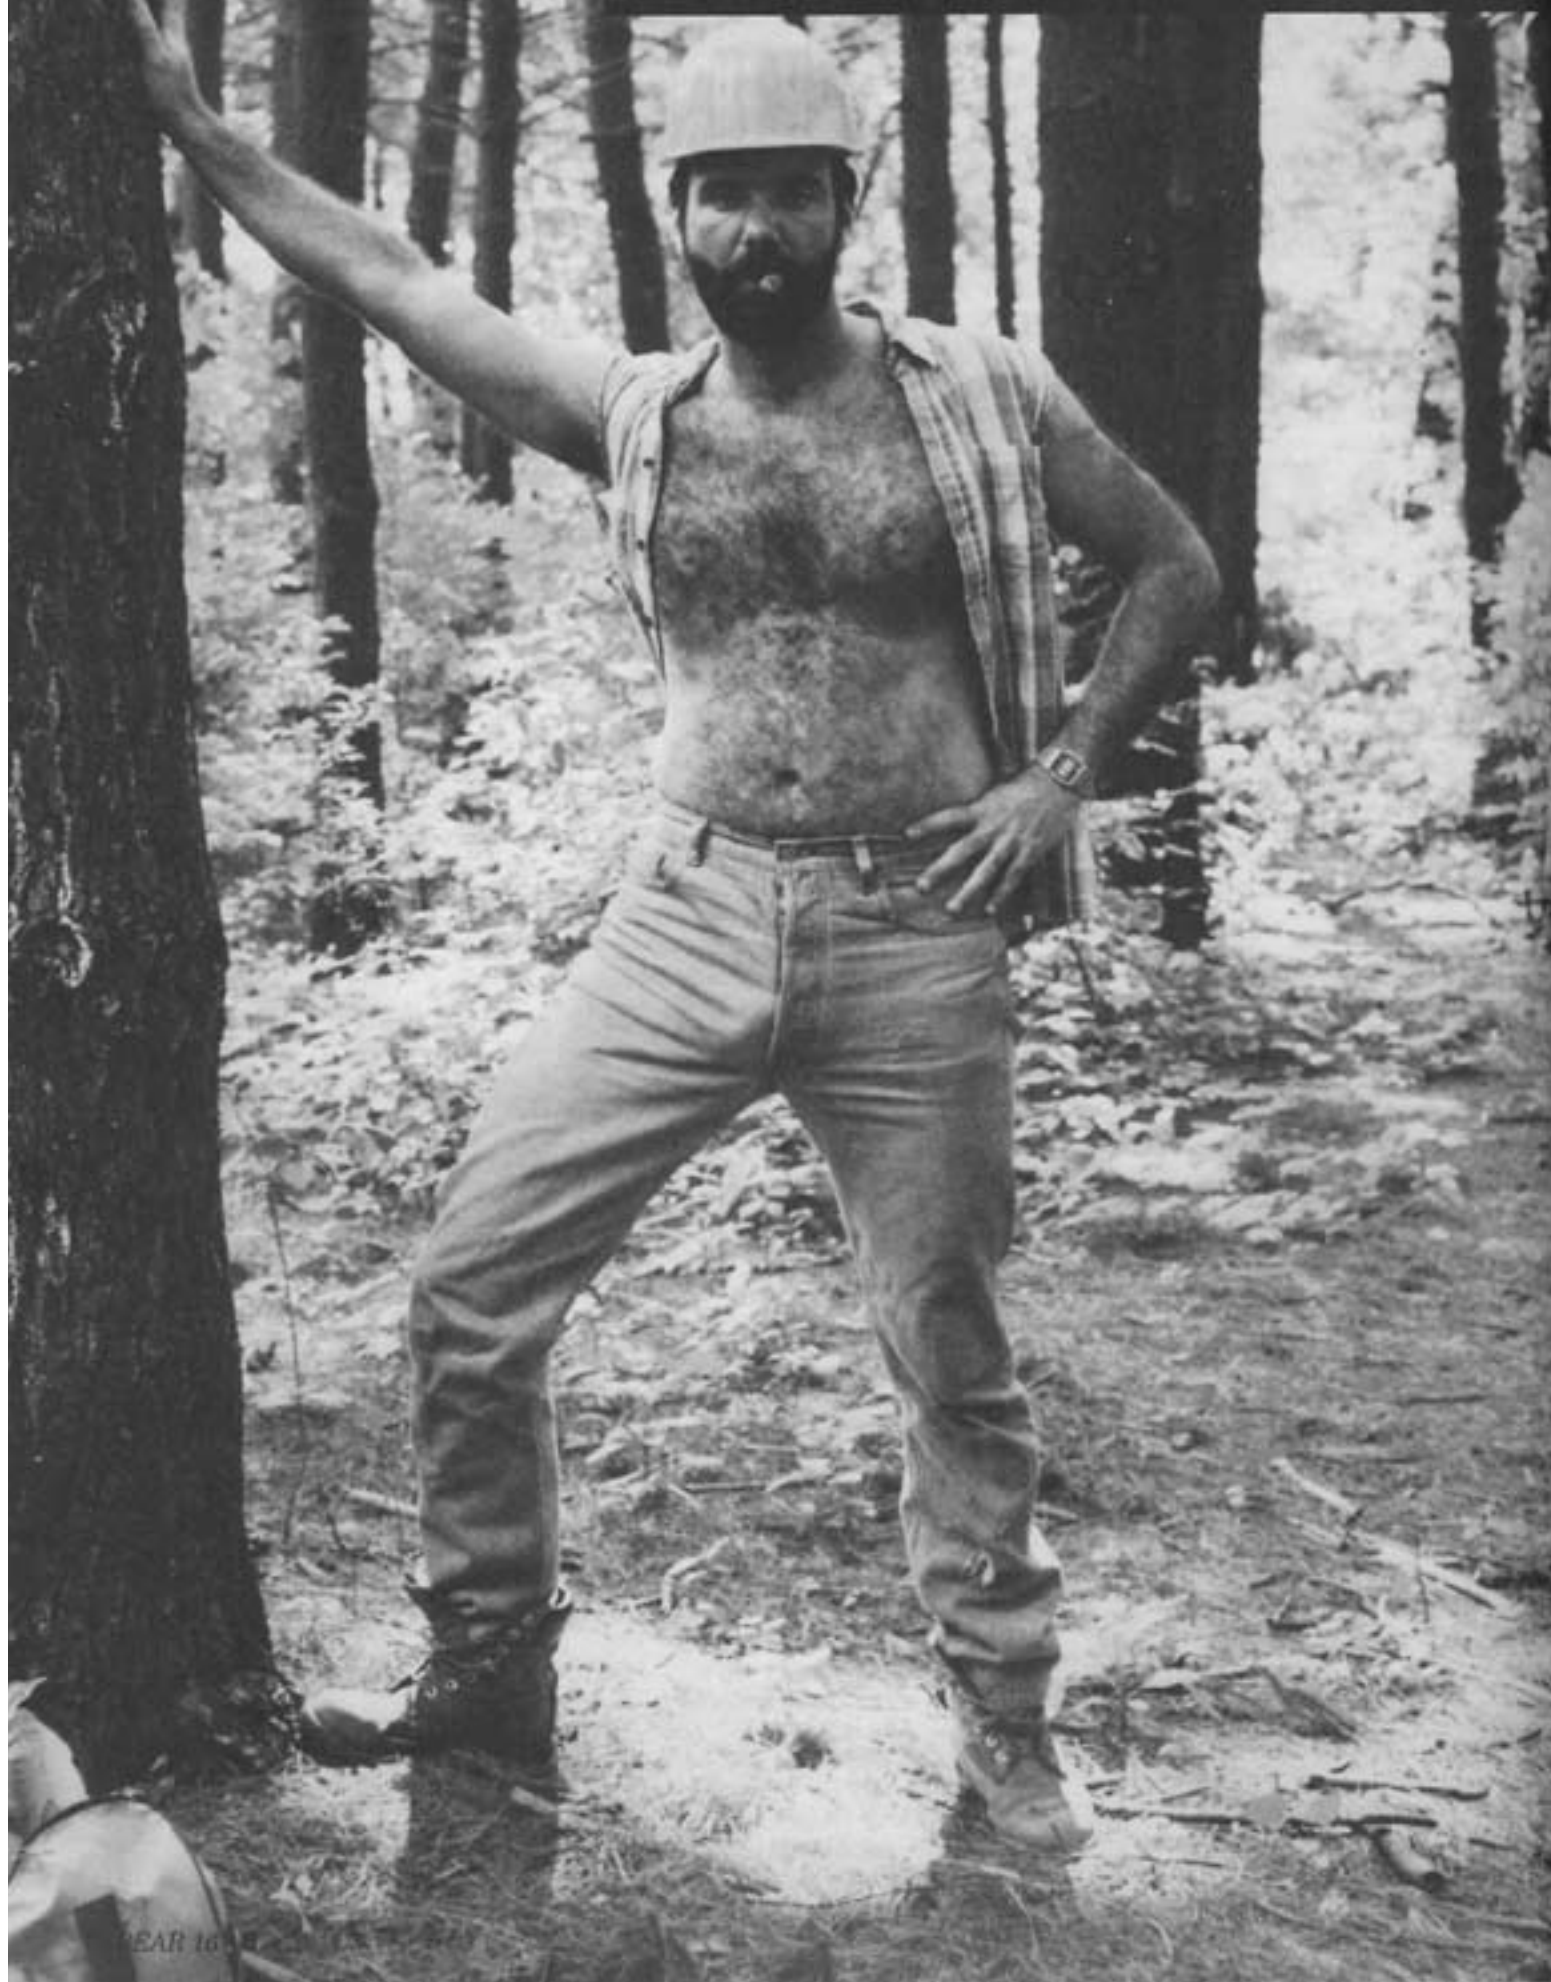

It brought down the house.

And that's it, in my opinion. If it doesn't excite you, forget the whole thing. If it does? Go for it, balls out, and take it as it comes.

Adapt, my friends.

Enjoy.

DENNIS THOMPSON · A BEAR READER'S SELF-PORTRAIT

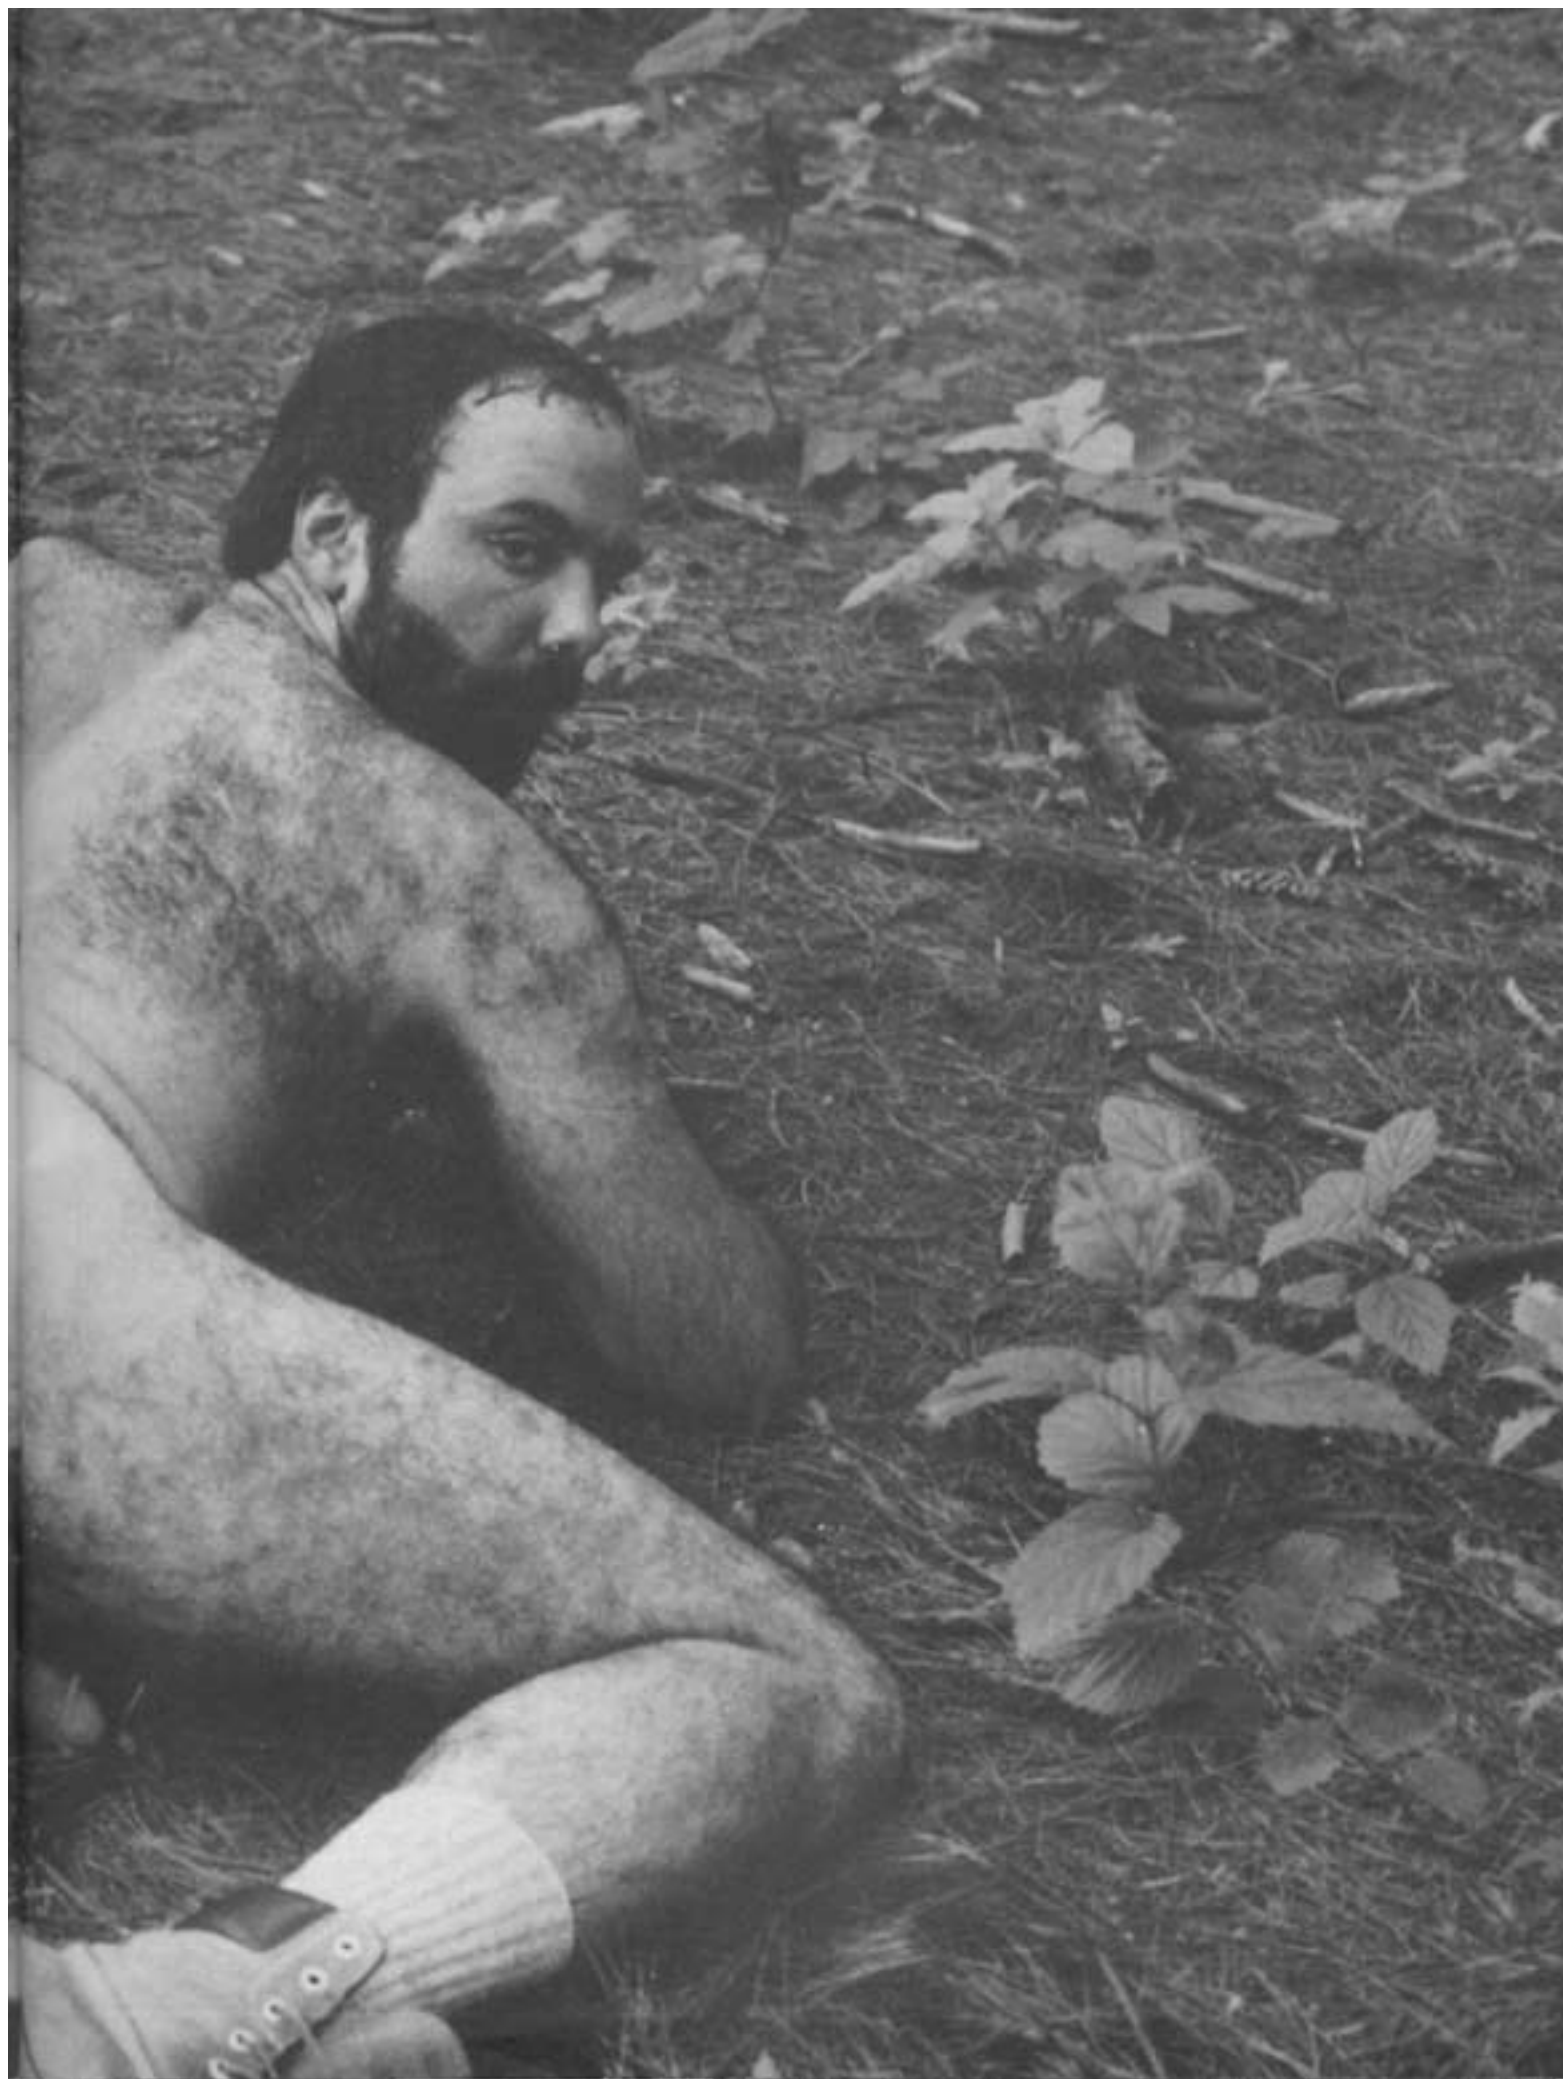

Being ten was a big deal for me. A lot of heavy shit started coming down on me when I was ten. That was when my great big hairy cousin Jimmy started cramming his dick down my throat every chance he got. Jim was a high-school dropout and he had the biggest dick I'd ever seen. He liked getting his dick sucked as much as I liked sucking it. He was my idea of a man.

Luke, one of his younger brothers, joined us sometimes. But Luke was more gun-shy than Jim, a year older than me, and he could already get himself to cum. He felt safer in the toilet stalls at a local bowling alley. So I usually gave him head there.

It was in the autumn of that same year my best friend at school called me a "sissy" (in a big way) while we were walking home from school. I'd been in a playground fight once before I punched him in the gut and knocked him on the ground. I kicked him in the face and I bloodied his nose.

I cried all the way home.

I had lost my best friend. I had killed pigeons for him, and a cat, and tore bugs apart—partly because I liked doing it and partly because at ten how else does a budding faggot express his love another boy? Still, Roger had called me a "sissy." I didn't know what it meant, but I knew I hated it.

That was the day I became a rebel.

I have found that each man with scars has one under his chin. I was standing on line one Saturday midnight when I got mine, waiting to see "Rocky Horror." I lost a front tooth in the process as well. The man I was living, fighting, and fucking with at the time and I were pretty fucked up. We were bathed in acid dreams and I felt just like Jesus, glowing with an MDA halo. We were invincible right there on Market Street, San Francisco. And we were going to the best sleaze show in history.

I fell flat on my face waiting to get into the Strand. I couldn't get my hands out of the pockets of my leather jacket in time to brace the fall. So I just lay there and watched my tooth fly across the pavement, out of sight. The guy I was with freaked out and started yelling that he had to take me to the emergency room. I started yelling back at him before I could even get up again. I already had my ticket and "Rocky" was going to start in about two minutes.

It was a great show. Like always, we sat in the front row of the balcony and yelled at the movie screen. And, like always, I could never figure the plot. That was what made the acid and MDA so special. Everything just felt good without having to make sense.

Next day I woke up and found myself, my shirt, and my jeans all caked in blood. I only remembered having a fucking outrageous good time at the movies.

The Strand used to have gay porno night on Thursday. Some of the sleaziest cruising in town went on here—in the bathroom, on the mezzanine, in the shadows of the sticky-carpeted balcony. Sometimes they had John Waters revivals, sometimes slasher flicks. And every Saturday night was "Rocky Horror" night. Hundreds and thousands of fucked up (and clear-eyed, stone sober) people all over America have danced this ritual. (Where were you the first time you saw "Rocky Horror"?)

After the quake of '89 closed down the Embassy next door (it was a straight sleazy movie palace), the Strand changed, sadly for the worse. On a Saturday afternoon not too long ago, I caught the bus downtown to go see "Total Recall," part of a triple feature at the Strand. That is, me and a couple dozen homeless men who live in the huge public fountain directly across the street from the theater. This is a great film to see with a bunch of socially dispossessed friends.

In "Total Recall" Schwarzenegger goes on the mindfuck trip of a lifetime. He seems to be a jack hammer operator with wild daydreams of taking a vacation on Mars. Mars seems to be a frontier kind of town. But, it seems, he can only afford memory implants of a Club Mars vacation and not the real thing. The question the movie asks, again and again, is—what is the Real Thing? Does it matter whether you really went to Baghdad or is it about having an album full of pictures you took yourself? I asked myself this same question sitting in the darkness, eyeballing a 'Nam vet who was covered in tattoos. He was standing in the aisle about six feet from my seat, and kept shifting his weight from one foot to the other. All the seat covers and the carpeting in the place smelled "funny." The biting smell of alcohol-saturated bodies hung in the air, mixed with the smell of greasy sweat.

I used to jack off in the Strand up in the balcony on porn nights and cruise the toilets. But nothing doing this afternoon. The guys hanging out around the bathroom today look pretty scary to me, like escaped prisoners from the movie. Speaking of which, there's this great scene in the Mutantville saloon where we get to see a bunch of mutants, a three-breasted whore, and some biker-type bears. Of course, Schwarzenegger plays his usual cocktease: he never shows any asshole or crotch. Instead of showing us anything someone might want to bury their face in, he acts like the world's biggest dickless wonder: Frankenstein's brain meets Ken at Gold's gym.

The dickless wonder Doug is married to a blonde bimbo who wants him to go to Jupiter on his vacation. Wives of construction workers don't seem to take vacations with their husbands here. But Doug opts for a James-Bond type double-agent fantasy vacation. (Right, you get to choose who you are as well as where you're going.) It seems that in real life settlers on Mars are being ruthlessly exploited by a capitalist pig who owns the means of producing oxygen for the whole planet.

While vacationing in this cheery manner at the implant store, the film implies, Doug suffers a psychotic embolism (it means he turns paranoid-schizophrenic). He actually believes he is a secret agent. Wow! Or maybe these really are real memories! Did Doug really leave himself videotaped messages to save his real memory in case it got erased? Why does Schwarzenegger's memory look like a pirate videotape bought off a street hustler? Just what is going on down there in Mutantville? Who's being set up in this movie anyway? Hunh?

This movie starts out as a sci-fi thriller, but it's really future-retro film noir. And American film noir is all about setting: it's about telling real stories about the Real Thing. It's about the profoundly evil nature of the world we live in and how those of us who wake up to this are confronted with our freedom to choose.

While "Total Recall" suggests these decisions are not our own to make even in the privacy of our own memories, the next film, "Last Exit to Brooklyn," takes a look at the Real World. Brooklyn in 1950 is an industrial wasteland of warehouses and train yards and weary-boned, silenced, working-class people somehow surviving in a menacing world. The film version of Hubert Selby's novel, Last Exit to Brooklyn, has authenticity, it has real people grappling with real problems, making real-life choices. When a married union official falls in love with a gay, dope-fiend hustler, he abandons wife and child, embezzles union money to shower on his hustler boyfriend, and discovers that he is a homosexual in 1950 America. The local toughs hang out at the corner diner just outside the shipyard gates; they are all "juvenile delinquents," their reality has nothing to do with suburbia, everything to do with the impending strike against the shipworks and the military call-up to Korea. The teenaged hooker, a Lolita of the shipyards, is the linchpin of the local boys' scam. She leads sailors expecting a blowjob off to an abandoned car in a junkyard, but instead they are relieved of cash and consciousness.

It's a sleazy picture all right. The hooker takes advantage of everyone because it's all she's been taught. The neighborhood toughs don't know anything else, and never expect anything else. The good Italian father forces a gunshot wedding to save his daughter's honor. The hustler only "loves" the union man as long as there are flowers, money, and drugs. The union man abandons his wife and child and embezzles the petty cash to woo his young man, only to end up impaled on a fence post. Taken individually, these are all small evils, but taken together they suffocate us and feed Mammon, the evil spirit of this place. These are innocents surviving in a terrible world, unaware of the enormity of the evil of this place. It could be a Paul Cadmus painting.

I could relate to the Brooklyn of 1950. I grew up in the 'fifties in a Cadmus painting called Syracuse, New York, a block from the main switching yards of the New York Central Railroad. The houses were all weather-worn or asbestos-shingled browns and grays, window frames rotting and back porches hanging off the railroad flats. Itinerant railroad workers lived at the local YMCA, and we kids were constantly yelled at for playing near the tracks or breaking into parked cars. My grandparents used to baby-sit me when I was little. They'd plunk me down at the middle of the bar at Sadie's Bar and Grill to watch "Rawhide" while they played poker with their friends. I'd watch wagonmaster Ward Bond, with passionate but vague ideas about riding in his wagon.

I have always been at home in sleazy surroundings. But sleaze is more than a working-class look, it's more than indulging prurient desires, it is a matter of embracing the world-as-it-is and accepting the serendipitous gifts that come with acceptance. Amid the violence and depravity, I have found men, beautiful, strong, lusty men, with hearts and holes and dicks and brains and souls, who love men as I do.

Travis Bickle, Robert DeNiro's character in "Taxi Driver," epitomizes this sense of sleaze. A reclusive, poorly educated ex-marine, Travis begins his odyssey through the world-as-it-is when he takes Sybil Shepherd to a dirty movie for their first date. He doesn't know respectable girls don't go to dirty movies, nor does he know that "girls" are, by definition, "respectable." (Sleaze sees respectability for the pose that it is.) In time Bickle comes to see the evil in the world—first, in the insincerity of the respectable woman's rebuffs to his advances and, then, by witnessing teen-aged hooker Jodie Foster's determination to survive on the streets of New York.

DeNiro's grand illusion, believing that he can live in the world of evil without being of it, is reinforced, in the end, by the randomness of fate. Caught in the moment before he would have pulled the trigger and killed a politician, he flees the scene and rushes to rescue Jodie Foster who is servicing a customer. DeNiro blows everyone at the brothel away in an orgy of violence and murder (carefully prepared by the narration). The media declare him a hero. Both he and the world see him as an avenging angel. Only we are the moral witnesses to the ambivalence of the real thing. "I'm a prophet and a pusher, half truth, half fiction," says DeNiro.

If you have a rich soul, then feed it with your mind and your body, feed it with your cock and asshole, and tits and face and toys and scars. As DeNiro says "You're only as healthy as you feel."

I identify with the rage in these films and with the desire to destroy evil. But evil lurks in deep waters, feeding on itself. The murkiness of these waters is intoxicating. The world is full of evil, some of it can be chosen, but much of it is random. Modern materialist values are a dead end; we must create anew our rituals and myths. Sleaze lays bare our modern rage and shows us a way to the other side of "respectability." Hollywood sleaze is about money, not the spiritual journey through rage. Real sleaze makes sense of and honors the scars life has given us.

Our scars speak loudest, so obey their message.

A couple years after I gave Luke blowjobs at the bowling alley, things started getting a little out of hand in my life. Just a few blocks away, at a family Christmas party at my other grandmother's apartment, I was discovered in the attic jamming candles up my ten-year-old cousin's butthole. We were marched downstairs and lined up in front of the whole family. Crazy Aunt Gerry tore us limb from limb, just using words, but words more horrible than any I could imagine. Geraldine was a respectable woman, and we were evil, perverted children, just like Jody Foster.

Although I could never make the connection, that day I realized there was a very important one. It is the connection between pine trees loaded down with glass ornaments in stuffy winter apartments and a beautiful naked man in a white loincloth; more to the point, this man always has blood streaming down his arms and feet and hangs off some wooden boards he's been nailed to. Sex and violence are respectable mindfucks: only sleazy people actually do these things.

When I left the Strand I had that weird sensation of stepping out of a film and back into reality, and realizing that life imitates virtual reality. But I don't mind today. I am a dog in heat, my whole body is throbbing inwardly. I can rub up against almost anything.

My brain has a raging hard-on.

A tingle of anticipation ran through my crotch as I rang the super's buzzer. The broad-shouldered brute answered the door wearing a yellow sleeveless T-shirt and a pair of grease-stained khaki slacks. His unshaven face had him looking forty instead of thirty. An unlit cigarette dangled between his taut, masculine lips. A fire started smoldering at the bottom of my balls.

"Been screwing around with the sink," he mumbled. "Come on in. Ya got the rent?" He started walking towards his kitchen. I followed along. "Well?" he asked, tossing the words over his right shoulder, "ya got it?"

"I got it," I said, stopping in the kitchen doorway.

"Hmmm, good. Put it on the table, 'kay?"

I pulled a week's rent out of my wallet, counted it slowly, and laid it on the kitchen table. I could see he had just finished lunch: two cans of beer and a medium-sized bag of pretzels. After lighting his cigarette with a wooden match, he leaned his elbows on the counter and solemnly studied the sink. Several tools and chunks of aluminum pipe were lying all over the place.

"Damn thing needs a good overhauling," he said, keeping his back to me.

"Well, you can do it, sir."

"Nah," he said. "I ain't got a rooter. You got a rooter?"

"Uh...well..." I glanced around the room. Hanging just below the wall clock was this year's best-selling jock calendar. June of '91 had a phenomenal chest. His hard-on was kind of hot, too.

"That's what it's gonna take," the super said. "A fucking rooter. Probably a long one."

I glanced away from the calendar. My heart thumped giddily in my chest. My own cock was fully erect. "Sure," I said. "I got a rooter."

The super fumbled with his pants a moment, then they were lying around his ankles, exposing tan boxer shorts patterned with dark brown polka dots. His legs were thick and meaty, his thighs covered with long curly hair. He propped his elbows back on the counter as I stepped up behind him and pulled his shorts down to his ankles.

"What kinda rooter you got?" he asked.

I stood up and probed his asshole with my finger. He never moved a muscle. "A new kind," I said. "Runs on body heat." I unzipped my fly and pulled out my cock. The super plucked his cigarette out of his mouth and tossed it in the sink. It sizzled and hissed, then died.

"How long's it gonna take?" he asked.

"Uh... you can set your own pace."

The super bent his knees and spread his legs as much as the pants and boxer shorts around his ankles would let him. "Okay, bub. Fix the damn thing."

I used some butter from the kitchen table to lube my cock. He gasped when the head slithered inside his crack.

"Jesus!" He said. "Damn thing stings, don't it?"

I wedged three or four inches of meat in his asshole. He relaxed and pushed his ass against my tool. I went all the way.

"Ahhhh, boy!" he said. "That's a good rooter! Warm, too!"

I fucked him slowly, holding on to his hips, listening for his signals. In a minute or so he was breathing heavily. My cock kept a steady rhythm in his ass, plunging forward, pulling back. His hole was tight, gripping my hard-on with liquid heat. I ground my hips in a slow, circular motion, rooting out his asshole.

"Hot damn!" he said. "I think you're getting it!" He lowered his head on the counter and wriggled his ass. I leaned forward and rested my chin on his back. His asshole clutched my cock. Animal noises came from his throat. My right hand slid around to his crotch and started fondling his thick erection. His powerful fists hammered the counter, rattling pipes and tools while I fucked him and jacked him. When his cock started filling my hand with hot semen, I went up on my toes and shot my own load in his ass.

"Ahhh!" he grunted. "Root it! Root it!"

My body trembled on top of his.

"Uhhn!" he grunted. "Uhhn!" His asshole sucked my cock, pulling it and milking it. My legs wobbled. His come was slick and creamy in my hand. Finally, we were both drained.

"Leave it," he said.

"Huh?"

"Let it soak, bub."

I kept my chin on his back and wiped my come-filled hand across the front of his T-shirt. I could feel his body heat warming my face. I could feel his asshole pulsing and throbbing around my cock, his warm butt-muscles twitching and fluttering as he tried desperately to keep me inside him. But in a minute or so I began to soften and slip away. He sighed contentedly as I popped out of him.

"Pretty good rooter," he said without moving. I stepped over to the kitchen table and started wiping off my cock with a hand towel.

"Yep," he said again, "pretty good rooter, bub." He turned around and pulled up his shorts and pants. I stuffed my cock in my jeans and waited. When the super had his clothes on, he went to the table and picked up the rent money.

"Hey, ya gimme too much," he said, rifling his fingers through the bills.

"I did?"

He plucked several bills from the wad of money and handed them to me. "Yeah, ya did."

I stuck the money in my jeans and watched the super walk back to the sink and pick up a large Stilson wrench. "I gotta get this fucking thing fixed," he said over his shoulder. "See ya next Saturday, 'kay, bub?"

I jogged down to the garage, fired up my two-year-old Dodge Dart, and headed across town for Starkey's. The little sports car zoomed along smoothly, purring like a kitten. At Seventh and Winkler, Big Bob Bascomb was standing in front of Bob's Dodges, his cowboy hat cocked back on his head, a large cigar smoldering between his full, thick lips. He was in animated conversation with a middle-aged couple, obviously trying to sell them a large white Chrysler the three of them had surrounded in the front lot. I honked and drove on by.

Starkey's was cool and quiet, except for a mellow instrumental oozing out of the jukebox next to the bandstand. In the rear booth a couple of guys were drinking and cuddling. The bar had only one customer, a large black guy in a tan suit nursing a tall drink in a frosted green glass. Other than that, Starkey and I had the place to ourselves.

I climbed up on the stool in front of him. "Kind of quiet, isn't it?" I asked.

"You're early," he said, pouring me a draft. He slopped it in front of me and quickly wiped up what he had spilled. His hands were long and strong, like his cock. His piercing black eyes seemed tense.

"Yeah, I know," I said, "just one of those things." I drank half my beer and looked at him over the rim of the mug. Although I had never seen him wearing anything but a white shirt and black bow tie, his tanned, handsome face always reminded me of the rugged college athletes I had known in my school days. In fact, that was the crux of our particular game.

"What's the matter?" he asked.

"Huh? Oh, nothing. You...you caught me thinking about something."

He started wiping a spot on the counter that didn't need wiping. "Yeah? What might that be?"

"Uh...college. And the guys I used to suck."

Starkey looked around nervously. The big black guy at the end of the bar was lost in his own fantasy. The two guys in the booth were having a treasure hunt. Starkey leaned close to me and whispered, "You used to suck off guys in college?" His eyes were aglow with excitement.

I drained my beer, licked my lips and nodded. "Sure did. High school, too. Big ones, long ones. Hot ones. Automatics. Circumcised. Un."

"Automatics?"

I pushed my glass at him, then made a gun out of my thumb and forefinger. "Yeah. That's the kind that keeps on shooting. You know, rat-a-tat-tat. Rat-a-tat-tat."

"In your mouth?"

"Well, sometimes on my face and neck. Or my chest. And in my ear a couple of times. But yeah, mostly in my mouth."

"D-did you lick their nuts?"

"Sure. That was the best part, sometimes. The football players use to let me do it before they showered. Man, I loved all that sweat and salt. A couple of times I came in my pants while I was down on my knees licking their nuts. 'Course, I never said nothing. I just licked 'em and sucked 'em, and they shot their wads whenever they wanted to. The really great times were when I'd crouch down behind the back row of lockers and lick their dicks and nuts before they got in the showers. It was quite a thrill, rubbing my hands up and down their steely thighs, feeling their fat cocks growing against the side of my face. Sometimes they'd shoot off before I could get 'em in my mouth. But I didn't care. It was exciting both ways."

"D-did you do all of them?"

I shook my head. "Nah, just the ones who liked it. Usually that would be about four or five guys on the team. But one time I did six. Five players and the assistant coach. He was a real screamer, too. I had to stick my fingers in my ears when he was coming in my mouth."

"Ever see those guys anymore?"

At that moment Billy Simpson came prancing through the front door, hands flapping excitedly as he skitter-hopped across the floor. He was a big shaggy-haired blond with a too wide neck and a gold penis earring in his left ear.

"Sorry I'm late," he lisped, scuttling behind the bar and grabbing up an apron. "There was this bejesus of a traffic jam on Fulton, and would you know it, I got stuck at a red light next to some bitch in a silver Porsche. He just couldn't keep his eyes off me. Well, you know how that is, people in Porsches do have good taste. But he was so dweeby. Little criminal-type moustache and cold beady eyes. Tacky hair transplant, too. Gorgeous mauve shirt, though. I know he was doing it to himself while he was looking at me. But like I said—"

"People in Porsches do have good taste," we all three voiced at the same time.

Billy gawked at us like we flubbed our lines at a key moment in a very important soap opera, then he floated down to the Budweiser beer box and started checking the stock. Starkey took off his apron, microwaved two hamburgers and casually stepped into the rear storeroom. A moment later I stepped in behind him and locked the door.

"That Billy's a card, huh?" I said.

Starkey had his back to me. He laid his hamburgers on a small formica table and turned around. A very impressive hard-on was sticking out of his trousers.

"Something I said?" I asked.

"I was a college athlete," he said.

I looked at his cock. "Pole vaulting?"

"Nobody ever licked my balls."

I licked my lips. "Did you put an ad in the papers?"

"Nobody ever sucked my cock."

I shrugged. "Well, maybe you went to the wrong school."

Starkey picked up one of the hamburgers and stared at it. "I always wondered what it would be like."

"What what would be like?"

"Getting eaten," Starkey said, and sank his teeth in his hamburger.

I walked over and knelt down in front of him. "Close your eyes," I told him. "Just pretend I'm not here."

I leaned forward and slipped the head of his cock in my mouth. He came instantly, filling me with a rich thick cream that was warm and exciting as it flooded my tongue. I hooked my fingers in his back pockets and sucked him slowly, gradually draining the jism from his warm, fleshy tool. When I was finished, I looked up with his erection still in my mouth. He was unwrapping his second hamburger.

I watched him for a second, his eyes glazed with ecstasy, his mind off in another world, playing its own game by its own rules, then I went back to work on the spicy cock throbbing on my tongue. Once again, I sucked slowly, relishing the feel of his hard meat pulsing between my lips. My hands squeezed his ass and fondled his thighs. His cock stretched and grew in my mouth. My chest ached with pleasure. I slid one hand down to my crotch and began massaging my hard-on through my trousers. By careful timing, I had us both coming at the same time, him in my mouth and me in my shorts. My thighs trembled weakly as the last of his jism oozed onto my tongue. I swallowed slowly and kept him inside me until he began to soften. Then I began sucking him again, running my lips back and forth along the half-hard organ, kissing and licking the head, sliding my nose over the stalk, and inhaling his masculine aroma. His body shuddered a couple of times as his cock tried to rise to the occasion. But we both knew it was over. I popped him out of my mouth and started wiping him with my handkerchief. His lengthy tool was quite limp and exhausted when I kissed the bulbous red head, tucked it inside his trousers, and zipped him up.

"I won't be back until about nine-thirty tonight," he said. "Why don't you stop by a little after?"

I got to my feet and put away my handkerchief. "I'll be here," I said.

"Good. We can talk about nut-licking."

"Okay."

"And that screamer. The coach that made you stick your fingers in your ears when he was coming in your mouth? I'd like to see you do that."

"Okay."

Starkey went to the storeroom door and unlocked it. "When I get back tonight I'll square up your tab and spot you some extra credit on the books."

I gave him a full minute, then went to the men's room and shucked my shorts. When I got back to the bar Billy was alone, polishing the counter with a can of lemon spray. The juke box was silent. I put the neatly folded shorts on top of the bar and Billy quickly exchanged them for a twenty dollar bill.

"Jazzy color," he said, stashing the shorts under the counter. "I'm simply dotty about burgundy."

"How are you with chartreuse?"

He grinned radiantly. "Mercy! I love it! And heliotrope! I could orgasm forever with heliotrope!"

"I'll be sure and remember that," I said, wondering where in the world I might find a store that sold heliotrope shorts.

Back in my car I pushed a tape of piano waltzes in the cassette deck and drove around the city for a while. The little Dart glided through traffic like a trained pro. Around dusk, I cruised Bob's Dodge and saw that the place was buzzing. String lights were lit up everywhere, and Big Bob himself and several other salesmen were busy working the customers scattered around the lot. But I knew the place would be closed in another hour.

I drove across town to Riley's Charcoal Broiler and ate a hot roast beef sandwich and killed some time sipping a second cup of coffee. When I got back to Bob's Dodge, the place was dark and lonesome looking. I drove up on the lot and parked beside the custom-made limousine sitting in front of the trailer Big Bob used as his office. I knew Big Bob would be inside the trailer, naked as a jaybird, except for his boots and hat, and a half-chewed cigar clamped between his teeth. He'd be sitting on his fancy imported leather couch with a vodka collins in his right hand, his Stetson tilted back revealing his dark curly locks and a Texas-sized hard-on sticking up between his legs. We'd talk awhile about the length of his cock, and the thick knobby head, then I'd touch it with my fingertips, play with it a couple of minutes, and finally get down on my knees and jack the velvety stalk until he shot off, his come dribbling down on my hand while I acted like nothing that exciting had ever happened to me before. And when he was ready go again, I'd come up with the bright idea of getting fucked with that wonderful organ. Big Bob would pretend to be disinterested until I assured him I had never done that sort of thing, but would certainly like for him to be the first. At that point, I'd drop my pants around my ankles and he'd dog-fuck me on the fancy leather couch, gasping and grunting with excitement while he came in my ass, his giant tool throbbing like an oversized heart as it jerked and sputtered its seed in my hole.

Well, it wasn't the most original game in town. But it was a living. And it paid the rent.

Or, in this case, it made a car payment.

In this issue, we embark for new horizons of curious customs and questionable practices. This, the recipe for yet another method of taking it up the butt, comes to us from the man some call the Love Bandit of Berry Creek, T.C., and he calls it....

SPRING WORKOUTS

Winter's over, mutha fuckers, and time to put that old workout bench to good use. If you got one of those incline benches setting over in the corner collecting all your sweat-drenched socks and smelly jocks, drag it out and use it. I found it gets more use not by pumping iron, but pumping butt for hours on end. Use some rope tied to the barbell rack with loops at the other end for stirrups. If you want, take a pole and attach it to the rack for a better spread. It's the same principal as the stirrups on a sling. Call a bro over 'cause as we all know, there's nothing like working out with a buddy. There's nothing like it when that naugahyde gets hot and greasy under you. Makes for a nice, easy sliding motion for the dude pumping. I like the incline best 'cause I can sit there and watch what's sliding. Use your imagination and get in shape for summer.

Hey! You!!

Are you one of those kind of guys whose dick gets hard at the sound of a Harley & ZZ Top? The smell and feel of greasy levis and lived-in leathers? Does the idea of these things and the men who live it make your nuts ache? Me too! That's why I draw them!

I think you'd be interested in the kind of work I do. For three bucks, you'll get my brochures. Ten bucks gets you my fully illustrated catalog. Tell me you're of legal age. Fly me a kite.

ABOUT DICKS AND DUDES

by Joe Banks

I'll admit my own prejudice right up front. It's always seemed weird to me. This thing about big cocks. I guess because my own is just average. Seven inches. Hard. That's always seemed like enough to me.

And there was that guy I knew back in Georgia. Big man with thick hands. I'll call him Bud. Bud tended gardens most of the time. Me, I was a carpenter. In Fall and Winter we both worked at the same fancy restaurant. Bud had a sweet, quiet smile and just turned red if he got mad. He'd watch me pound cheap meat into patties while I listened to The Stranglers on my tape player. One night we went home together. We sat in his yard and talked about plants and families. Later we got naked. Bud was nervous and kept his hands over his cock and balls while I screwed him. We sat in bed the next morning.

He said to me, "Years ago I went home with a guy and he was all excited until I got my pants off. Then he saw how small my dick is. He said it looked like it belonged on somebody else's body. I guess I'll never forget that." So I sort of knew what made Bud so shy, I think. It's weird what people latch on to. But then again, there's usually some hidden reason for things.

It's a few weeks back. My buddy Mike and I are doing some work on a friend's cabin. One rainy evening, we sit around staring at the trees.

"Do you think most guys are concerned about the size of their dicks?" I ask suddenly.

Mike looks surprised. "Of course. Everyone is! I don't think anybody isn't."

"Why?"

"Why?...Well, that's a hard one. No pun intended. Lemme see. Well, it's because society puts such a premium on penis size. Yeah."

"Society, huh?"

"Yeah. A big dick represents power in America. Bigness in general means power. Right? Big cars. Big houses. A big fortune. You have the biggest dick, you're number one. And everybody wants to be number one, right? The biggest guy wins the trophy, whether the trophy's a pussy or an asshole. Does that make sense to you?"

"Uh-huh. So you think a big dick's pretty important? I mean to you personally."

"It depends on my mood. It's like wanting a piece of chocolate cake or something. For me, if I go out looking for a big one it's more a matter of seeing whether I can handle it. It's a conquest thing. In a capitalist society...not that there's anything wrong with capitalism per se...but in a capitalist, competitive society, biggest is best. Where do you think the phrase 'top dog' came from? It means the dog with the bigger dick is on top fucking the other one."

Now I feel like we might be onto something. "But what about skill?" I ask.

"Skill's not what we're talking about here. It's not a matter of quality. Or who's better. It's a matter of biggest. And then you're getting into lovemaking versus sex. I mean lovemaking is more about thinking with your upper head as well as your lower head, about getting the other guy off too. Sex is just about getting yourself off. And I don't think most of these big dicks are too concerned about getting the other guy off. After all, they've been told they're the best all their lives just by virtue of having a big dick."

"And what about women? Is size as much a concern with them as it is with guys?"

"With lesbians no."

I shake my head. "That's not what I mean, Mike."

"Okay. Well, the straight women I know...I think about two-thirds of them would say it's pretty important."

"What about growing up with a small dick? You think that affects a guy's personality?"

"Well. Maybe when you're a little kid you might get teased, but you grow out of all that eventually...don't you think? What you get, especially in the gay world, is these guys with the big dicks who don't seem to have developed a personality of any kind at all. And why should they? They can get anything they want just from showing that big dick. It's sort of like being born with a silver spoon in your mouth."

In anthropology, a man's organ as a symbol is called the "phallus". That's what we're talking about. A man's dick as a thing with meanings outside itself.

Let's look back about twenty seven centuries. A Greek nobleman passes his manhood on to a boy. By making love. There's the fuck and cum of it, of course. But even more, there's a sense of fire and ritual. All the strength, eloquence, cleverness, generosity, and courage of this man are held in and transmitted through his "phallus". This is something the Greeks really believed in. As clearly as we believe that a telephone transmits sound.

In New Guinea, a Kiwai tribesman will select a tree for carving a harpoon. He'll press his hard cock against the tree's trunk. And the harpoon will be straight, strong, and penetrate deeply. By the power of his organ, as a magical thing ght down from the gods, he's passed on to the tree the best of himself.

So what does a guy's cock symbolize to us? When a man or woman says, "I'm after a really big dick tonight," what does that actually mean?

On Friday nights I sit around with two buddies of mine and drink beer and watch baseball or Jeopardy. I'll call these guys Hugo and Pete. Reaching for a Moosehead, I bring up the cock question.

Pete frowns. "When a kid's growing up and taught to be straight and all, he learns that the whole purpose of his cock is to penetrate a girl's cunt. Right? So when you're eight or nine you learn that the size means how good you can fuck. I started thinking when I was in second grade even that I wasn't adequate for that. I also started noticing that fat guys had smaller dicks than skinny guys, so I thought...well... maybe if I lose some weight my dick'll get bigger and I can fuck better!" He laughs. "I work with this Italian guy who's got a really big one and he's ashamed of it. I think it's sort of a racial thing."

"Huh?"

"Well, he doesn't like black people. And black guys are supposed to have big ones. He doesn't want to be identified with anything that might make him seem black. I used to think black guys had bigger dicks, but I've seen just as many white guys with big ones. But the white guys are more likely to be showing them off than black guys, you know?"

I try to shrug this one off, getting uncomfortable. "A man's cock is usually kept pretty well hidden in our culture."

"Oh yeah? Well I don't keep mine hidden. I'll make sure there's at least some air in the crotch of my pants so it'll look a little bigger than it is!"

Hugo chuckles, eyeing Pete sideways. "I think showing your cock off is considered gay in this country. In the tight-assed Fifties, women's tits were everywhere. But you never saw a man's crotch. It's still that way, and I think it's mainly a power trip on the part of straight men. They tend to look on women as the sexual object, whereas if they themselves were focused on as sex objects, there might be some kind of role reversal. But yeah, the size of a guy's dick definitely does symbolize something. Personally, I like a big one. Fat and at least eight inches long. Something you can just get down on your knees and go to town on. I get into the domination aspect of sex. I really like to get down on my knees and grovel in front of a big one. A smaller one just doesn't do it for me. To me, sex is about domination and submission. That's just the way it is."

"I fantasize about big dicks too," Pete nods. "When I first meet somebody, the first thing I do is try and picture them naked and try and figure out the size of their dick."

Hugo turns the sound down on the TV. "Also, I think Americans are more fixated on size than Europeans. We're more vulgar, more into exaggeration. Everything's exaggerated here. Tall buildings. Big cars. I do think there's an actual racial difference too. My personal experience is that Asians have smaller ones, while pure blacks have bigger ones. I really do think it's a genetic thing. That's just the way it is."

I sip my beer.

Pete frowns. "I've always thought Mexicans had bigger ones myself."

Hugo gets up and shuts the TV off. "But I don't think size is as important to women. Women relate more to the whole person, but with men, especially gay men, it's more of a fixation thing. With a lot of gay men it really gets down to the organ level. I mean think about the whole concept of glory holes. The body becomes irrelevant. The man turns into just an organ shoved through a hole. I can't imagine women getting into that kind of thing, can you?"

There's an old Norse story called "The Song of Volse". It's about a peasant and his family living on a farm in the sticks. Their stallion dies. The son cuts off it's dick. The wife wraps the dick in onions and herbs and puts it in her hopechest. Every evening she takes it out and worships it. The Christianized version of the story goes "the devil made it swell and become stiff, so that it could stand with the woman as often as she wanted..." At supper time, it's passed around the table, from wife to husband to son to daughter. After dinner, songs and poems were recited to it.

Judy's from Santa Fe. A few months back, she got married. "Men are obsessed with the size of their penises," she says. "You can tell by the way they hold their bodies."

"You're kidding."

"No, really. We all have different ways of holding our bodies that show what we're about. Like a woman with big tits will walk straight and hold them out. Guys do the same kind of thing with their crotches. Personally, I do think size is important in a man. If they don't know what to do with it and there's some size there they have more of a chance of pleasing a woman than if they don't know what to do and there's not a whole lot there. Most women tend to think a larger penis provides more pleasure. A lot of that has to do with us being led to believe that's the case. But size has a lot of symbolic meanings, too. About station in society and all. Here, since the liberation of women, men seem to have a hard time knowing what their role is. They're not strictly the hunters and tribal leaders anymore so it gets down to the sexual definition. Our sexuality has a lot to do with our sense of well-being, man or woman, so we tend to fall back on that. Really that's the only difference between us, is that they have a penis and we don't. Most people are so darned uptight about their sexuality. I mean in a way a man's penis robs him of a certain type of power. It makes his feelings obvious. Think about it. If you're on a nude beach and a girl gets turned-on, you'll never know it from looking at her, whereas if a guy gets excited he's gonna get an erection. I think it makes a man feel more vulnerable. And men are told that if no one knows what you're feeling no one has control over you. But it's just an automatic response. I mean why the hell people are so uptight about their bodies is beyond me."

In their rock paintings, the tiny Bushmen of South Africa always draw themselves with hard cocks. It seems that many are in a state of erection all day long. There's no physical basis for this. Maybe it's more like when you wake up hard for no reason at all. Receiving messages from some inside world of feeling and sound. These little guys have always been known as proud, self-assured. Is this because they stay connected to the spirit in their cocks? Is it the other way around? Maybe the cock isn't a separate thing at all, but something connected to every other thing. To the mind, eye, hand, and clouds.

Bear is a friend of mine who likes to restore bikes and watch nature up close.

"Have we really come that far since the one-celled animals?" he muses. "Our mindset hasn't changed much at all, I'm afraid. As long as there's some other sentient being that we can compare ourselves with, we'll always play games to try and knock that other being. And this dick size thing has its foundation in that. It's a matter of establishing a pecking order. You know... a person's endowment is one of the few things that nature gave them that that person can do absolutely nothing about. I mean whether it's large or small or grossly large, it's still connected to a real person. So I'm more concerned with who's attached to the thing. But yeah, most guys are terribly obsessed with it, one way or another. I guess it begins when we're young, sparring for position with our peers. And certainly one of the things we can use is our endowment. As we get older that idea becomes totally absurd. At least you'd think so. But then it turns into this false sense of masculinity. And...well, it doesn't mean shit actually! It's just one more thing we tease ourselves with to no end. And once you get something going that has no logical foundation it'll probably have no logical conclusion. It's funny..." He pauses. "Prejudice takes on many forms."

There have been studies. And stories about how little boys are intrigued by cocks. Especially the strange, hanging cocks of grown men. I remember being a kid. Undressing with our basketball coach, my uncle, or my dad. Stealing glances at those great, heavy things with their fat heads buried in those mounds of fur. How different they were from my own. And how I wished that I was a man. So that mine could hang like that. That I might be more like my dad. Might drive the truck to the lake and catch bigger fish on weekends. And decide which show we'd all watch on TV after supper.

Warren is young and smart and lives in the city.

"It depends on the man," he says. "If it's just a sexual encounter, I think I prefer a large penis, but in a serious relationship, it doesn't seem to matter. I mean I am part of this culture and I've been brainwashed to think that a large penis is attractive just like everybody else. It really is more a psychological thing, I imagine. Actually a smaller dick is probably physically more enjoyable."

Shawn is also young. He lives on a farm with two older men. And comes into the city to sell his wood carvings.

"I do prefer a big dick," he says. "Mainly I think because I like to see myself more as the little boy. A man with a big dick is more like the daddy, which is what I want. I'm used to big ones. There's this point in getting fucked that you reach. I guess you could call it a button. The bigger the dick is, the further up the button seems to go. But in a lot of ways I'm sort of trying to get away from that. I feel like it's sort of spoiled my getting fucked by a smaller dick I think. So I'm not doing anything at all right now. Trying to get the button back to where it originally was I guess. I also think that men with a big dick are more successful. Financially and in life in general. I think they feel more confident about themselves maybe. I usually tend to think of rich men as having bigger dicks."

Viking graves can still be found. They're marked by cock-shaped stones. With Vikings, inserting yourself into another man's rear was a way of marking conquest. The bottom man became "argr". He lost his power as conqueror, warrior, explorer. In essence, he lost his manhood. The cock-shaped stones that mark old Viking graves were covered with gifts and given names like "The Man", "The Sword" or "The Arrow". In carvings, these guys usually showed themselves with hard-ons. Whether they were hunting, fishing, sailing, making speeches, or killing enemies. The hard-on held the spirit that made the man invincible and wise. It expressed power and personal greatness. And all things holy and sublime.

Richard publishes a magazine about regular guys doing regular things. I'm writing this article for that magazine, so I thought I'd ask his opinion.

"I think," he says, "that dick size is something that most guys think about whether they want to or not. But the most important thing to me personally is whether or not it works. I'm not particularly into dicks, be they big or little. I mean what I love is talking dirty to somebody and seeing them get excited. And usually a hard cock indicates a level of arousal. That's much more important to me."

"Where do you think all the racial stereotypes about dick size came from?" I ask, thinking back on my buddies Hugo and Pete.

Richard drums his fingers on the desk. "I'm not sure really. I mean when you go to Europe where race isn't such a big issue, it becomes more a matter of Italians having bigger ones than Germans or vice-versa and the English having long, slender ones or whatever. Really I think it's probably just a case of the other man's grass is always greener."

He pauses.

"But this whole thing gets down to that, I think. To a matter of self-image and how a man feels about himself. You can sit down and talk to a man and think to yourself 'This guy's a real, real handsome man' but most of the time the guy won't even know it. We're always taught that we're never good enough. And it's not until later that you tend to settle down and take a look at yourself and become comfortable with the fact that you are what you are. To sit back and smile and say 'Hey, look at me' instead of having all the anxiety that's there when you're younger. There's a certain sense of self-satisfaction that comes with growing up and becoming a man."

Although the Vikings saw the act of getting screwed by another man's dick as giving up, is that what the act implies in itself? Around the world, there's always been the cult of blood-brothers. The sharing of sweat and power and (the more plain-speaking scholars will admit) love and cum and spit. To surrender and to retain your manhood is a tricky thing. A balancing act. Blood brothers, in stories, often fought and killed each other over glory and power. A brotherhood that works is something democratic. More modern American than ancient anything. The act of receiving holds inside it the act of taking into possession. So that the dick, seen from behind, becomes the ass. And the act of two men making love becomes a circle. Emission and submission. And the circle turns again.

COMPETITION AT THE DRAGSTRIP

Fiction

The first time I ever saw the scrofabitch was at the dragstrip. I wasn't even there looking for male meat, I was there to run my car through the traps a couple of times; I had just put in a new cam and a Holley double-pumper carb. I got to the strip a little early, and I was one of the first to set up. My place in the pits was right next to his.

God, what a hairy bastard he was! He was bent over his T-bucket, and he looked like a bear wearing a pair of Levi's was invading a car. His back was covered with coarse fur, as were his arms. When he stood up, I could see he had shoulder-length hair and a full beard and moustache. He looked to be about 25 or so and he was built like a brick shit-house. I ceased tinkering with my deuce coupe for a moment to check him out.

He stood about 6'3" and I guessed his weight at about 250. He either lifted weights or pulled the engine out of his car without a hoist, because underneath the dark brown shag rug that covered his whole body was a physique that made my mouth water. He had huge shoulders, rolling like mountains. His biceps looked like any other man's thighs and he had forearms to match. His chest was a great fortress of muscle camouflaged by coarse brown foliage. Nature's erotic touch was that his hair grew in great whorls around his nipples, swept together into a great seam between his pecks and continued down in a hairy continental rift down across his cast-iron belly to his navel.

In my long look I saw that his hair got even thicker below his belly-button, but goddammit, he was wearing a pair of pants. I sure would have liked to see him naked. I looked hard at his crotch. Sure enough, the blue Levi's had faded in a large circle where something inside was stretching them out taut between his legs. I was impressed. As busy as he was with his car, he couldn't have had a hard-on (unless he had a hot rod fetish). All that bulge probably came from his soft dick.

When I looked up, I was startled to see that he was looking back at me! I quickly looked away, but not before I saw him give me a smirking smile. No doubt figuring he's just spotted a queer, I thought. I've gotta be cool about this; I don't want to end my visit to the dragstrip with a wrench in the back of the head. I went back to work.

But looking at that hairy Paul Bunyan had done it to me: I was horny. I replayed my examination of the grizzled hunk, and I wondered if maybe his smile hadn't been friendly rather than aggressive. If he had observed me positively,

I wanted to exploit it. So I took my shirt off. Show him a little skin.

I'm in pretty good shape; I'm 22, go jogging every morning, do pushups and pull-ups, go surfing once or twice a week. I've got a good right arm because I jack off at least once a day, usually in the mornings when I wake up.

But there was nothing. No reaction from the next pit. Finally, I gave up on it and decided that later I would treat myself to beating off in the restroom.

About then I noticed I had some problem with the shift linkage. My car uses the suspension from a Mustang II, including the steering box. That enables me to use a modern steering column, and mine was a tilting, telescoping model from a Thunderbird. Rather than the old-fashioned floor-shift, my transmission was controlled from the T-Bird column's shift lever. And it was hanging up somewhere.

I dropped onto my back and slid under the car. My car is so low, I can barely crawl under it. My chest pressed up against the frame rails when I passed under them. When I reached my destination, I was severely hampered by the close quarters, but I reached my arm up over my head and turned my wrist so my hand could adjust the loose bolt.

Suddenly I heard a deep, bass voice. "Hey, dude, what is in this big tool box you left out here?" A hand pressed against my crotch, fondling my cock and balls through my pants!

I leaped in astonishment, but I had nowhere to go. I was trapped underneath the car. I couldn't even close my legs. Whoever it was had stopped between my legs. I lay fumbling with the shift linkage, and now he spread his feet apart, forcing my legs out. I couldn't even draw them up - my knees were under the runningboard! He spread my legs apart, and then I felt two hands massaging my crotch.

"Who zzat?" I yelled.

"Just a friend," said the voice, "a friend who wants to help you with this swelling here..."

Goddamn. I was getting a hard-on. "Take your hands off me, you bastard," I yelled. I was in the grip of a real get-hard-quick and I squirmed as my dick straightened out inside my pants.

"No, I don't think you want me to, not the way this thing is growing," he said with a chuckle. He started to stroke my cock through my pants. In spite of my consternation, I wished I could somehow get him through the layers of cloth to my anxious flesh.

I lowered my voice. "Goddamn it, somebody's going to see us!"

"You see, man," he continued in that deep voice, "you're already thinking of this as 'us,' not 'me.'" Then he took his hands off me and I felt his feet move from between my legs.

I scrambled out from under the car. But when I stood up, no one was near. The hairy monster was facing away from me, leaning over his car, looking at something with a drop-light, torquing down something with a wrench. Some guys were walking by, some in the distance as if they had passed by here a few seconds ago.

In other words, I didn't know who had just groped me. I had a real strong suspicion it was the grizzly bear, but when King Kong rose up from his engine, he glanced my way only momentarily. I caught his glance. He casually looked away. No confirmation.

Damn, I was frustrated! What could I say? "Hey, did you just grab my cock?" If the answer was yes, then fine, but a no probably would be expressed by a fist to my jaw.

I was frustrated. But all the anger I felt when first I felt myself taken advantage of had dissipated in waves of sexual heat from my balls. I was raging horny now, and I wanted to finish what of Two-Hands had started. I was pretty sure it was my next-pit neighbor. I realized that my only chance was to set up the situation again.

But I decided to up the ante. I stepped behind my car where people couldn't see very well, and I pulled off my pants. I stripped off my jockey shorts, then quickly slipped into a pair of blue shorts I brought if the weather got too hot, which it suddenly had. Then I sauntered back to the side of the car, dropped onto my back and slid up underneath again.

Sure enough, I felt two feet step between my legs, and the hands started massaging my cock again. "Yeah, you got it, dude," said the bass voice. "Let's continue!"

As I hoped, I felt one of the hands slide up under the leg of my shorts. I heard him catch his breath. "No underwear," he said softly. "You one horny fucker." His invading hand cupped my balls, and my legs and torso stiffened at his touch. "Yeah, you like it, don't you, motor-dick?"

"Yeah," I grunted.

Then his hand slid up farther and grasped my aching dong. God, it felt wonderful! Something about being horny to begin with, then being completely trapped, not knowing really who my J/O buddy was, and his talented, powerful hand on my throbbing tube just set my aflame! He stroked me only five or six times, and I felt an orgasm start to build in my balls.

I felt the zipper on my shorts come down! "No, man, don't," I hissed. "Somebody will see us!" But I felt his hand withdraw back down the leg of my shorts, and my cock was grabbed and pulled out into the open air! God, I was horny! I was being jacked off right in the dragstrip pits, right in the vision of anybody who walked by! On one hand I was scared, but on the other I had never been so turned on in my life.

When I felt his hot, wet, sucking lips slide down over the baking meat of my cockhead, slip tightly around its flare and then slide down the sweating shaft, I fucking lost it! Cum by the trailerload came rocketing up from my balls, and I was hit by a jolt of rapture so strong my body writhed in ecstasy, and I groaned, my mouth open and panting, slaverling, licking the steel above me, out of my mind with lust.

With every blast of jism out of my cock, an explosion of sweet, delicious pleasure rocked my torso. Whoever he was, he swallowed every drop. I didn't feel his sucking mouth leave my climaxing dong for a second. God, it was great! I had never had such a totally consuming orgasm. He kept at me until the fires burned lower, and I began to relax.

I felt his mouth back off my softening but still smoldering prick, and his hands and feet stopped touching me. He was gone.

Again, I scrambled out from under the car, and I quickly tucked myself in and zipped up. Yogi Bear was working at his car, not looking at me. I knew it was him; he had to have seen what went on even if he wore my wonderful cockcover. I looked hard at him. He was standing on the other side of his car from me, looking down into the engine compartment.

Finally he looked up at me. He looked into my eyes for a moment, then opened his mouth and a long string of something white and sticky dribbled out, looping down onto his beard. It was cum. My cum. He smiled.

"Man, that was the best blowjob I have ever had," I said, also smiling. Now I had a new hunger. "You've gotta let me return the favor. Where can we go?"

"Let's go over into that orchard," he said quietly in that familiar bass voice. We both dropped our wrenches and began walking quickly to the grove of trees. I was instantly horny again. I had a little trouble walking with the monster hard-on struggling in my shorts.

"Goddamn, you're good," I repeated as we walked along. "My name's Bob, what's yours?"

"Just call me Hoss," he said. "I knew you wanted it and when I saw you down there, I couldn't resist."

When we got to where no one could see us, he quickly kicked off his boots and pulled down his pants. I shucked off my shorts and shoes. We were both buck naked. God, he was a hairy fucker! He also had a titanic cock; at least 10 inches of solid, heavy, thick rod with a knob at the end as big as my fist. His jivein stood up out of a swirling mass of kinky cock-hair. "No wonder they call you Hoss," I said. I dropped to my knees, eager to start on that big pecker.

But again he astonished me! He dropped down onto all fours facing away from me. His hard, muscular ass wagged back toward me. "Okay, you bastard," he said hoarsely, "pound that big, red pole up my asshole!"

Goddamn. I needed no encouragement. I dropped to my knees and mounted, crawling up over Hoss' beckoning loins. I wrapped my arms around his waist. All the fur on his back was like lying on a rug.

He gasped as he was mounted like an animal. Then he felt my cock pounding up toward his asshole. He cradled his head on his crossed arms, shoving his ass high, making as much of a target for me as he could.

But I am an excellent marksman. My purple-knobbed dick drove straight up into his hair-ringed butthole. "Aaaaaggggh!" he grunted as my lance skewered deep into his guts. It was a shock to him, I thought duly; besides the stunning feel of my hard cock grinding up toward his belly, I wanted some action with his big, drag racer cock. The damned thing was so fucking big and hard!

The bastard didn't know or care anything about tad and gentleness, thank god. "Oh, fuck me, man! Ram that hard meat to me! Ream me out with that big cock of yours! Fuck me like a dog!" All that from a man I would gladly have been a slave to! I resolved to myself that I would suck his dick before the day was through.

The lewd words made my dick even harder. He responded automatically. His lean, powerful hips churned forward. A seemingly endless length of bone-hard cock ran its way in and out of the moaning motorhead's ass.

As he bucked harder and harder, my naked body swayed and leaned over the muscular, furry animal called Hoss. He thrust his ass back hard, gaining another inch of my prick up inside his shuddering ass. His face was excited. His lips parted, his eyes were half-closed. A deep flush colored his cheeks.

Neither Hoss nor I lasted long. His head was lifted up in lust, and I could see his face change from fierceness suddenly to a foolish expression, his eyes wide and staring, his tongue lolling loosely out of his mouth. He moaned as his orgasm started far down inside his hairy balls.

"Oh, god, yes! Pump that scum up inside me!" Hoss shouted hoarsely. As I felt the first hot jet of boiling semen rilling up into his guts, apparently his orgasm was touched off.

"Yaaaaaaah!" he cried. His ass began to jerk up and down violently, making my hot, spouting cock move back and forth up inside his convulsing ass. Both of us bucked together frantically. Great, searing gobs of jism spurted up into his hungry ass. In my frenzy, I reached underneath and grabbed his hard dick, which was bobbing like a teeter-totter. Almost immediately it began gushing out his load of semen. Both our cocks jetisoned every ounce of sticky, ropey spunk from all four of our balls as the level of our ecstasy reached the point of insanity.

Almost unconscious with physical release and sensory bliss, we both collapsed forward, my cock still impaled between his hips, slowly relaxing into a panting, sweating happy stack of hot, fulfilled male meat. Poor Hoss, he had sperm matted all over the hair on his chest, belly and some on his ass.

I didn't do too well at the drags that day. I couldn't keep my mind on the competition. I couldn't stop thinking about Hoss and the appointment we had that evening at a local motel.

PUBLICITYFEST '91

Hello. It's me again. And you thought I could be found only in one place. Well, occasionally I don my storytelling cap (the one with the outline of Idaho and the motto "Big Cock Country") and get to do some rambling.

Not long ago, a fella named Chris Wittke from Gay Community News in Boston called. He told me about a band called King Missile. Didn't say a damn thing about the music, but said one of the members, Chris Xefos, sported a BEAR cap in publicity photos. Then another guy sends some stuff over the FAX machine, with a photo of these guys, and indeed there is a guy wearing a cap advertising this very magazine. We liked this guy already and we don't even know him.

Well, I called up Atlantic Records and the rep up there agreed to send us a copy of their latest CD, entitled THE WAY TO SALVATION. It was sent overnight and boy, was I full of myself for about a week. I played it for the boys here at the shop until they got sick of it. When I took it away from them and played it for myself, I got caught up in a curious kind of aural theater. What they do seems beyond music the way Laurie Anderson seems beyond music; it crosses over into the realm of performance art but you can still jump around to it. Much of the material is informed by a wild sense of humor. I'd sure as hell like to hear this band perform live; thank God they aren't "armed with three chords and the truth." Apparently they get a lot of play on college radio stations; they deserve it. While the music may not be to everyone's tastes (the influences cited are Richard Hell, the New York Dolls and Led Zeppelin, among others), there is something interesting, different and worth paying attention to going on with this group.

Then we get a letter with another photo from Xefos himself, inviting us to the band's shows when they get to town, seeing as how they're touring now. So, guys, when you're deciding which concert to attend, check these guys out, wear your BEAR cap turned around backwards, and put your mouth where your money is.

AN ITEM OF QUESTIONABLE TASTE

This comes to us from Ron in San Jose. There are some tales too strange to be fiction. What follows is one of them. This is an actual quote from an alert sent to IBM field engineers:

Mouse balls are now available as field replacement units. Therefore, if a mouse fails to operate or should it perform erratically, it may need a ball replacement. Because of the delicate nature of this procedure, replacement of mouse balls should only be attempted by properly trained personnel. Before proceeding, determine the type of mouse balls by examining the underside of the mouse. Domestic balls will be larger and harder than foreign balls. Ball removal procedures differ depending upon manufacturer of the mouse. Foreign balls can be replaced using the pop-off method. Domestic balls are replaced using the twist-off method. Mouse balls are not usually static sensitive. However, excessive handling can result in sudden discharge. Upon completion of ball replacement, the mouse may be used immediately. It is recommended that each replacer have a pair of spare balls for maintaining optimum customer satisfaction, and that any customer missing his balls should suspect local personnel of removing these necessary items.

THE LONG, ER, ARM OF THE LAW

Got a letter from Andy Mangels a while back. You remember Andy, the guy who wrote that article on comic book characters and a few issues ago? His new project is a non-fiction book about gay and lesbian law officers, their supervisors, partners or loved ones. If you're a cop, want to be interviewed and have some stories to tell, you can contact him by writing 2167 S.W. Yamhill, #6, Portland, OR 97205. Tell him where you read about it and impress the hell out of him.

DON'T ASK US HOW WE KNOW

We'll start with the facts. Just the facts. The first fact is that commercial airplanes navigate by a series of radio beacons. The second, for those of you not in the know, is that the Mustang Ranch is a huge, world renowned cat-house. You know, a brothel. The place your mom warned you about and your dad waxed poetic about. A whorehouse.

The physical location doesn't look like much from the cockpit of a 767, just a road by a hill. Even on the navigational computer screen, conveniently located between the pilot's legs, it's just some blue letters and codes.

But there it is, a high-tech beacon in the desert: The Mustang Ranch. It's home to a VOR (Very-High-Frequency Omnidirectional Radio) station, used by all commercial airplanes as a reference point. A big reference point, by the looks of it. So next time you fly over Nevada, you know what's sliding across your pilot's screen. And his mind....

NEW RAG ON THE RACK

Not long ago, the premier issue of BULK MALE arrived here at the shop. Always interested in new publications, I snatched it away from the boys and took a look. It features BIG men in nude photo layouts, letters to the editor, illustrations, strok fiction, and classifieds. One thing I particularly enjoyed about it is the wonderful sex-positive attitude about the men the mag features. The production values are obviously high, the naked men in it are handsome, and, as publisher Rich Berglund states, "It is the only nationally based publication for large men and their counterparts." This is a magazine whose time has certainly come and Berglund and his staff know how to present the product. If you're interested in a sample copy, send $7.00 (that's $5.95 for the mag and $1.05 for first-class postage) to Big Bull Inc., PO Box 300352, Denver, CO 80203. Tell them you read about it here.

DRINK WITH FRIENDS...

Our buddy James Joseph from New York City mentioned that The Dug Out (23 Christopher Street, near the mighty Hudson) holds a Big Bear Night on Fridays at 10:30 p.m.

Also, remember that every Sunday from 6-9pm The Rawhide in New Orleans, LA (740 Bur-GUN-dy St.) continues to give men with facial hair their first drink free, and that Saturday afternoon is the BEAR BUST at The Lone Star Saloon (1354 Harrison) in San Francisco.

MR. BEAR NEW ENGLAND

The men of Boston-based dreizehn are holding their second annual Mr. Bear New England Contest July 27 at the Ramrod Bar, 1254 Boylston Street, Boston, MA.

As most readers are aware, BEAR Magazine is not affiliated with any contest or local event, but Richard attended this fur pageant last year and thoroughly enjoyed himself and others.

Say hello to Ray, Puppy, Doug, Al, and the rest of the dreizehn crew for me.

THE SAFEST SEX OF ALL

I recall a time when I would go to any length to view a novel dirty movie; anything with a little twist to make it stand out would attract my attention. Kinda like what William Castle did with all his movies by adding all kinds of gimmicks. There was one that stands out. Called Heavy Equipment, it is to the best of my knowledge the only 3-D dirty movie ever made. It may be on video, but the flying dildo sequence without the 3-D effect wouldn't seem as deliriously surreal.

Now, no doubt there are a number of you out there who are fascinated by electronic gadgetry. You know your type; not a Sharper Image catalog goes by unnoticed. One concept, called Virtual Reality, is catching a lot of press these days. It's an interesting idea. You put on goggles, headphones and gloves and prang! you're in a computer-generated room. You can move about, grab things, and explore a giant computer-generated video projection. Pretty cool, huh?

Well, what if instead of goggles, headphones and gloves, you used a vibrator? Or titclamps? Some lucky stiff already planned on it. Force-feedback technology (the part of Virtual Reality that duplicates your sense of touch) allows for a field of study called tele-dildonics. One hopes that telesodomy, tele-uranglia, telefellatio, teleanalagus and others (I could have thought up more if I knew more Latin) will soon follow. Not that I have a true and urgent need for something other than the more, er, traditional methods of getting off; it's just that a truly 3-D simulated sexual experience sounds far too warped to be anything but memorable.

AND THE WOLVES MOVE IN

There are folks out there marketing health-related products and services to individuals who either have AIDS or are HIV-positive. Herbal remedies, immune boosters, and physical therapy programs are being advertised as strategies to improve the health of individuals with HIV disease, as well as preventive potions for those not infected with HIV.

Well, the fact is that many of these cure-alls don't do shit; and some of the "use this and you'll be safe" products can lead to infection if you trust their claims.

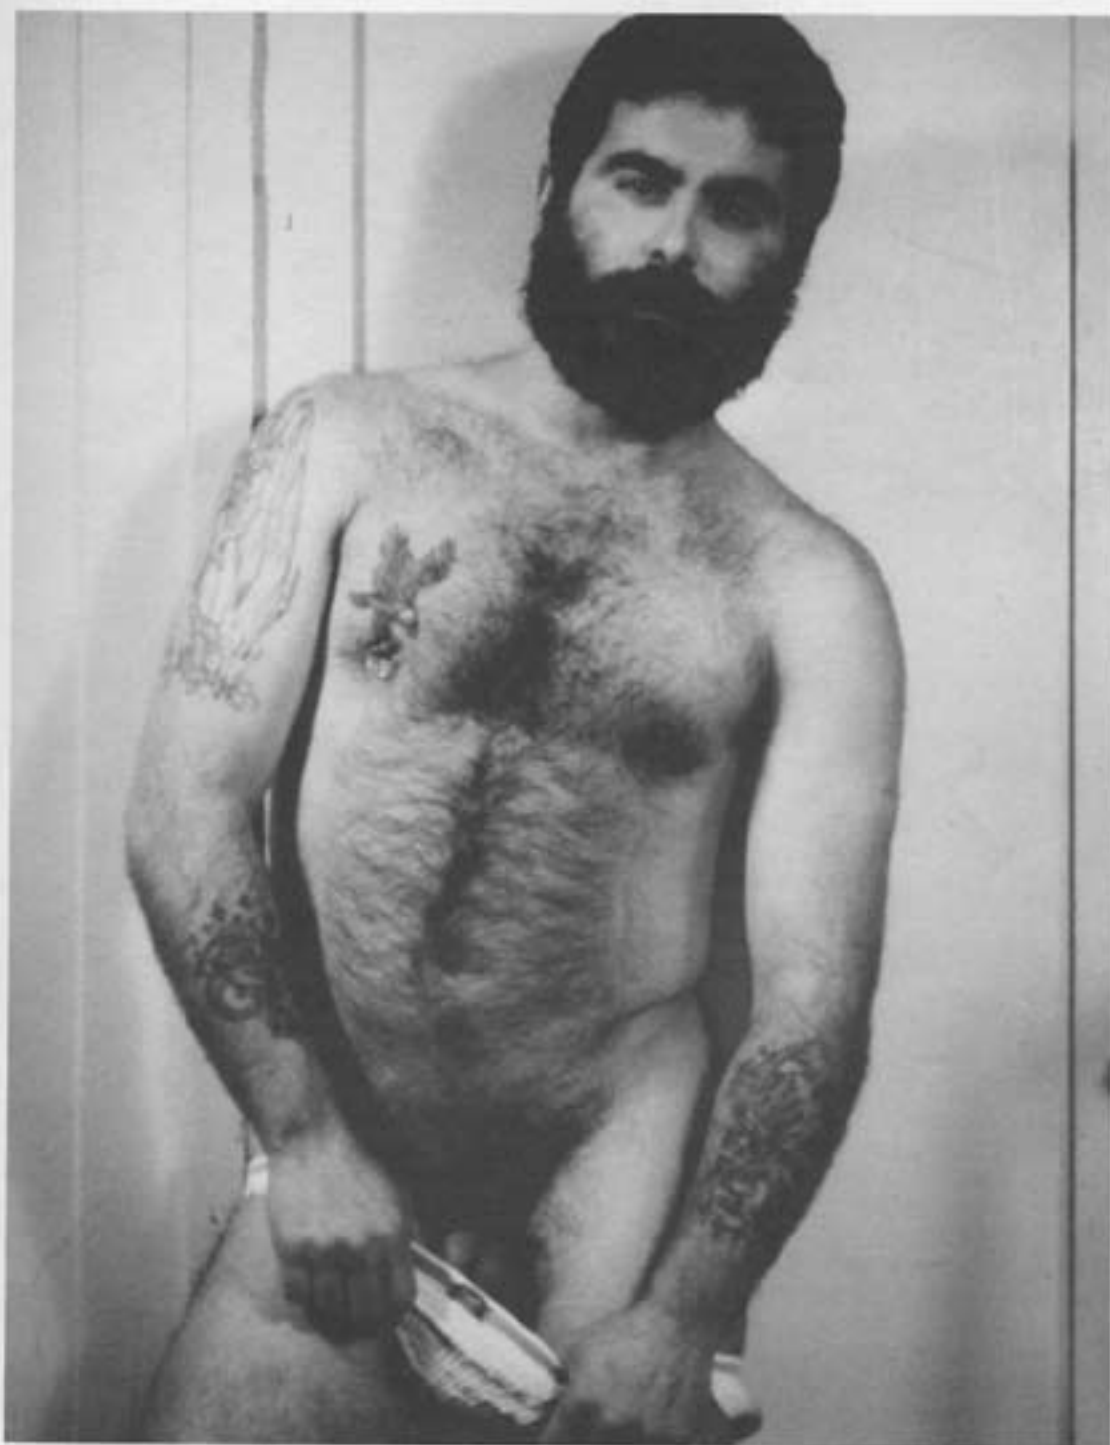

True Health Inc. (Dallas, TX) and Hopland Reservation (Hopland, CA) have been cited by New York's Commissioner for Consumer Affairs for manufacturing and distributing "Immune-Plus." Ads for this immune booster had been placed in Outweek, the San Francisco Chronicle, and several gay newspapers. The product is endorsed by Terry Pulse, M.D., an individual touted as an internationally known AIDS researcher. Dr. Pulse is actually a family practitioner who's been prohibited from calling in and refilling prescriptions by the Texas Board of Medical Examiners. This Board has also ordered Pulse to undergo psychiatric treatment and periodic testing for drugs and alcohol.

Consumers: beware.

WASHINGTON WEEK IN REVIEW

Celebrity can take many forms. For some, it's turning letters on TV game shows. For others, it's shredding documents for curious military officers. For still others, it's appearing naked in the pages of this very magazine. Such is the case for Wildcard, pictured for the first time in this magazine with his clothes on. He was featured in #14 along with a dirty story of his. This photo was taken at the Lambda Rising Bookstore in Washington, D.C. It was the bookstore's first smut-rag signing party; they even relaxed their "white wine and cheese" rule to allow for Bud and cookies. Why didn't MacNeil and Lehrer cover this? Where was the media? Where were my press passes? What about Dan Rather?

P. C.

This fella sent us some photos and asked us if we were interested. The photos were promptly lost in the daily routine here at the shop. Out of the blue he showed up and wanted to know if we wanted to see him naked. With his sweet face and dirty mind, how could we say no?

Getting Canned

I have never understood why a business would fire someone for something like race, sex, religion or sexual orientation. I know there are lots of bigots out there, but it just does not make good business sense. It is difficult to find and train good employees, and a tremendous waste of company resources to lose a perfectly good worker for something that isn't job related. Nevertheless, there are a lot of crazy bigots out there who think it's just fine.

Recently one of my readers wrote to ask whether his employer could legally fire him for being gay. The answer depends on the state and the circumstances.

The states of Wisconsin and Massachusetts have comprehensive gay rights legislation in place, and in those states it is flatly illegal to fire or refuse to hire someone for being gay. By court decision, it is probably illegal in California, although no legislation has been passed to that effect. In addition, many large cities (including Boston, New York, Philadelphia, Washington D.C., Chicago, Denver, Los Angeles, San Francisco and Seattle) have gay rights laws. If you live in any of those places, you are legally protected from discrimination.

What if you don't live in any of those places. What if you live in, say, Little Rock, Arkansas, or Butte, Montana; places where gay rights legislation will pass right around the same time the Catholic Church elects a Jewish pope. If your boss says you're fired for being one of them, are you completely without a remedy? Maybe, and maybe not.

Up until fairly recently we had what was called employment at will, which meant that an employer could fire someone for good reason, bad reason, or no reason at all, and employees had no rights. Officially, that is still the law in most places, but enough cracks have been made in the doctrine that the situation is not nearly as bad as it once was.

If your company has a handbook that says it does not discriminate, or that it will treat its employees in a fair manner, or that its employees will only be terminated for reasons that are job related, some courts have held that handbook to be an enforceable contract. If your company has a handbook like that, and you get fired for being gay, you may be able to sue for breach of contract. Some handbooks explicitly say that they are not contracts; in that case, you can probably sue for misrepresentation and fraud.

If your company does not have a handbook, the manner in which the company learned of your sexual orientation may give you grounds to file an action for invasion of privacy or outrageous conduct. This is true even where the discrimination itself was legal. I know of one case where the company hired a private detective to watch an employee go into a gay bar; when the company was sued for invasion of privacy, it lost big time. The judge said that while it is legal to fire someone for being gay, it is still an invasion of privacy to snoop around in his personal life.

Of course, the problem with the invasion of privacy argument is that it only works for gay people who are still in the closet. If you wear gay pride buttons to work, if your boyfriend stops by to have lunch with you, if you talk about gay issues on the telephone within earshot of a dozen co-workers, the invasion of privacy argument probably won't work for you.

Sometimes the company acts in such a way that it can be sued for something else. I know of a case where the company sent out a memo that said it was a Christian company and any homosexuals discovered to be working there would be fired. They were sued for religious discrimination. They lost.

Essentially, the bottom line is that if you live someplace that has a gay rights law, you are OK. If you don't, you may still win a lawsuit, but it will take some creative lawyering on the part of your attorney. Sometimes creative lawyering works and sometimes it doesn't. All of our landmark Supreme Court cases started out as creative lawyering that just happened to work; there are also lots of cases of creative lawyering that lost. I'm preparing to argue before the United States Court of Appeals that sexual orientation is protected by the First Amendment. My theory is that a sexual orientation is nothing more than a collection of feelings and emotions, and you have a First Amendment right to feel what you feel. I'll let you know if it flies.

And now, a word or two about the real world. Suppose you do live in a state that has a gay rights law. Suppose your boss tells you that you are fired for being a fairy. Suppose you sue. There is at least the possibility that your boss will lie about the true reason for the firing, and claim that you were a lousy worker. After all, if he is going to do something immoral like fire you for something that is none of his business, why shouldn't he do something else immoral and lie about it? As the plaintiff, it will be your job to prove that he fired you for being gay; the burden of proof will be on you.

That being the case, it is critical that you obtain as much documentation as you can. Keep a notebook of homophobic remarks made by your supervisor. Keep track of any witnesses who hear your boss say homophobic things. Stay in touch with people who leave the company who may be good witnesses later. See if you can find anybody else who was also fired for being gay. If you are fired, ask for a letter of termination saying why. (The company will be under no legal obligation to give you one, but it never hurts to ask.)

The advantage that you have is that bigotry is stupid. It is therefore found more often in stupid people. Naturally, there are exceptions; but it is very unusual for me to encounter a bigot who leaves me with the impression that he is smarter than I am. Since stupid people tend to do stupid things, you do have the advantage that sometimes your employer will do something to prove your case for you. But you can't count on that. So quietly gather your evidence; you never know when you may need it.

COACH NICK POLANSKI

Nick is one of the fellas that shows up at the BEAR office, sits down, and says "I'd like to be naked for you and your readers."

Gene and I thought he was just the ticket for the smut-hungry and we wasted no time in getting a closer look at him. Naturally, we were pleasantly surprised when we layed eyes on the front-and-back hair display as well as the length and breadth of Nick's pecker.

Coach Polanski is our kind of man. We hope he's yours too. I caught him on video too, so if you'd like to watch him milk that sucker til it spits at ya, check out PRIME MEAT.

Your presence is requested at this premier exposition of film, video, culture, and just a wee bit of 'erotica' (...smut, guys, smut). Takes place at the famous Castro Theater and at the Roxie on Sixteenth in the Mission (across from our office). Over 100 films are being scheduled, ranging from documentaries, home videos, foreign films (hated it!) and a few erotic selections guaranteed to make Siskel and Ebert start closing the balcony again. Catalogs may be ordered ahead of time so you can maximize your viewing pleasure. Call (415) 431-9227 for more info.

JUNE 29, 1991. North Carolina Gay Pride March and Celebration in Durham, NC.

JULY 4, 1991. Gay Rodeo, Aurora, CO.

The Colorado Gay Rodeo Association is holding their big annual Gay Rodeo at the Coal Creek Rodeo Park in Aurora. Hosted at the Executive Tower Inn (1405 Curtis, in Denver), this 3-1/2 day event starts Thursday night with cocktails at Charlie's Country Western bar. On Friday, rodeo registration goes from 7-10 p.m., along with a Colorado Tavern Guild hoe down at the hotel for $7.00. The actual wrangling, roping and rodeoing (in the ring or on the bleachers) takes place Saturday and Sunday from noon to 6 p.m. The cost is $10 at the door, per person, per day. Then more parties back at the hotel (I'd be tired by now, wouldn't you?). The Awards Ceremony happens Sunday night at the hotel, and Monday morning you have to go back to work, saddle sores and all. For reservations and info, please call CGRA at 303-639-8810.

JULY 4-7, 1991. The 16th Annual Southeast Lesbian/Gay Conference, Baltimore, MD.

Their theme: "Life, Liberty and the Pursuit of Happiness". The conference is a rich assemblage of speakers, entertainment and workshops. You'll have the chance to learn about the importance of non-sexual touching, networking, spousal abuse, AIDS, "Leather 101", and much more. Also available will be a Crab-Feast Cruise ($35.00 with bar). Conference rates begin at $85.00. Write Dana or Patrich, 1504 E. Baltimore Street, Baltimore MD, 21234, or call 301-276-8468.

They'll be having their annual Weenie Dunk (you lose points if you leave teeth marks). And if you don't have a bike, come anyway - with all these friendly men running around in the woods, you're bound to see the world from the back of a Harley one way or another. Food and beer provided, but bring your own sleep items. $110 by June 1, $125 by the 15th, or $140 after that. Write RMMC, PO Box 2629, Denver, CO, 80201 or call Glen at 303-733-7047.

JULY 6, 1991. Wholesome Fun At The Lone Star Saloon, San Francisco, CA.

The Lone Star, known for its tasteful community work, is holding a pie eating contest and a watermelon seed spitting contest. This is stuff I grew up with and I'm damn glad to see these traditional tournaments observed in these trying modern times. Later, on July 14, 1991, the Lone Star is having a Beer Belly contest. Be there and bring your Bag Balm.

JULY 20, 1991. How Bare Do These Bears Dare Party, Toronto.

Speathead is sponsoring a 'How Bare Do These Bears Dare' party. And there's a special prize if you can say it fast three times at the end of the night. It's happening at The Toolbox, quite the Toronto hangout. Their fax read: "Hot, sweaty, hairy hunky bears and bear lovers can socialize and play". Sounds tasty. THINGS TO DO Hiello. It's me again. Not long after this column first appeared in this fine magazine, a man wrote to me asking "What about House? Acid? New Beat? Post-Industrial Dance Music?" I said they were fine styles of music, but I didn't know shit about them. Well, we started writing back and forth and sending tapes and all and eventually I asked him to do a guest shot, covering those types of music he suggested. Now, I expect you men to pay attention. Remember, there's beauty here. The next voice you read will be J.S. Adams on, as he puts it, the difficulty of granting and rutting in 7/16 time.

I stand accused of clearing a room merely by garnering control of the stereo. Though I have managed to pique interest with the less-than-esoteric of Syd Straw, Joan Armatrading ("Some Days You Eat the Bear" is a favorite) or the traditional Quebecois folk of La Bottine Souriante, more often than not my selections manifest raised eyebrows and speedy retreats. I plead innocent by reason of association; as an impressionable college freshman I was exposed to professors composing "symphonies" for tractors plowing fields or perhaps one Sun Ra or Harry Partch record too many. Eighteen years later, it seems natural that my tastes continue to mine a broad range of musical fare.

For those interested in investigating

Post-Industrial or Free rock, I can sympathize with the confusion when confronted by the volume of material at hand. I readily admit that "edit" does not seem to appear in the vocabulary of many groups as they tend to release product at any alarming, though not often creatively substantial, rate.

To start off, head straight for the T section and Throbbing Gristle—Yorkshire slang for a hard-on. Aggressive and incendiary, their catalog now stands as the "How-To" manual for almost all Industrial/Noise bands. TG's sound experiments utilized electronics, sequencers and digital sampling long before the technology was readily available. A greatest hits collection has been reissued on CD and cassette. Soon after the demise of TG, its members splintered into Psychic TV (Genesis P-Orridge and Peter "Sleazy" Christopherson) and Chris+Cosey (Chris Carter and Cosey Fanni Tutti).

Chris+Cosey continued the technodance music they had established within Throbbing Gristle. Their first two releases, Heartbeat and Trance have recently been issued for American audiences. To date, both still hold their original excitement rhythmically and texturally and thankfully neither are marred by the members' mid-career attempts at creating pop songs. Newer releases Exotica and Rise see them returning to familiar, nigh well-travelled, territory.

Christopherson soon left Psychic TV to join John Balance as Coil. Whereas Chris+Cosey often seem to be musically running in place, Coil quickly moved beyond their early industrial vocabulary to create equally eloquent and challenging music. From Scatology and a truly mortifying version of Tainted Love (focusing on the trauma of the AIDS epidemic in England) to Horse Rotator and Gold Is The Metal With The Strongest Shoulders, Coil's palette enveloped electronic rhythms, SM pulp fantasies, Gothic melodies and tonal avalanches, creating music for the dark spaces in life. Terror-monger Clive Barker ditched their soundtrack for Hellraiser, deeming it too intense.

Fellow Brits Cabaret Voltaire are sadly the worst perpetrators of quantity over quality. If you want more funk (albeit British White Boy Funk) in your noise, this Sheffield band will provide the groove, but first you have to sort through a plethora of re-mixes, albums, singles, solo efforts and style changes. Originally a rough-edged, electronic-based trio, the band trimmed down its membership and sound to the electrodance/funk duo of Richard Kirk and Stephen Mallinder. After a welcome reprieve of product, last year saw the duo return with the 12" Hypnotize and the techno-psychedelic No Name No Slogan by Acid horse, their collaboration with Chicago's Ministry. The promise of a second golden age for Cabaret Voltaire loomed. Sorry, the new Groovy, Laidback and Nasty album wins hands-down as their worst. Stick to the substantial overview of Listen Up With Cabaret Voltaire (a double disc of early rarities and career out-takes), or the band's master 2X45 (originally a double 12" 45 rpm, hence the title). Equally rewarding are the earlier, jagged sounds of Mix-Up, Voice of America and singles compilation The Living Legends.

Not all cutting edge music is sound bytes and white noise whorls. Amidst the computers, it is still possible to have guitar heroes. With technique rooted in the exploratory heritage of jazz as well as rock and folk, astonishing music is being produced by Germany's Hans Reichel, England's Fred Frith, Montreal's Rene Lussier and Americans Henry Kaiser and Eugene Chadbourne. Beyond playing technique, some of these guitarists also push the physical nature of the guitar itself to the limits, employing alligator clips or pieces of metal to dampen harmonics, or totally rebuilding it with dual machine heads, modified fretboards or multiple pickups. They create sounds evoking Tibetan temple music, H.G. Wells soundtracks or an off-centered John Fahey record accomplished without the help (or hindrance) of electronics. This is guitar playing lightyears beyond Walk Don't Run, though Les 4 Guitaristes de L'Apocalypse-Bar, which includes Lussier, caricaturize themselves as a post-nuclear Ventures. And then there's this great noise that Hans Reichel gets from employing an electric razor as a blues slide against the picks and...

Hey! Where did everybody go?

BRAINS

The Journal of Egghead Sexuality
B. Works
1316 Dolores
San Francisco, CA 94110
$3.00

"Subscribe, or be thought ill of."

Fuck, man, I like totally don't get it. This fuckbuddy of mine—actually, we only suck each other's dicks after we go to the gym—anyway, he says he found this BRAINS magazine under a table at Cafe Flore, and he couldn't figure it out. Well, I can't either. I mean, who is Nietzsche, and what the fuck does he have to do with sex?

This magazine, it's like so weird. Like it says "It's a rag for butt-pirates with a lot on their minds. I know my nuts always ache around a pair of thick-framed glasses." Whatever.

And I'm like kind of into bondage a little, like when this other guy I used to fuck would tie me up with my spandex or the electric cord from my neon Nagel print, but like the people at this BRAINS thing say we should have used a bookbag rope instead. It has a Required Reading, a syllabus of other magazines....man, this sounds too much like school. They have personal ads, and there's like this test, "How to tell if your trick is really smart." And then it asks all these questions about the banality of evil, and if you give head.

It's got pictures, which is the only reason I kept it. Shows two good-looking guys getting it on in a library. But just when I think it's going to get hot, the magazine starts talking about how the dude has a Bachelors in English lit. I guess they're talking about fucking when they say "His work formulates in a more visual context, but remains as analytical as any written theory." On the last page of this magazine, in this all frilly writing and stuff, they have a thought for the day: "Get over here and sit on my over-educated tool." Well, I've never met a smart pecker yet.

I should probably give this magazine to my friend Blake. He saw "My Dinner With Andre" last year. He'd probably get it.

EARLY CARE FOR HIV DISEASE

Ronald A. Baker, Ph.D.
Jeffrey M. Moulton, PhD
John Charles Tighe
San Francisco AIDS Foundation

Karl gave me this book, and said, "Read it and write about it, good or bad, I don't care, just do it." Okay, I'm easygoing. I figured I'd find something cool to say about it. But after reading it, I couldn't find anything cool. I just got all heavy and shit.

Get this book, now. Don't think it over, don't back off, just get it. This book is one of the few that gathers into one place all kinds of information about HIV you could spend months trying to track down. And if you need more help or information, it tells you where to go and who to ask.

HIV is racing through our population; for all I know it's racing through my fingers as I type this review. No one has the luxury of ignoring it. I guess I'm preaching, which is bad news for a smut magazine. But if you fuck, or get fucked, or lick anyone, or care about anyone, you need to know what HIV is, how it works, and what you can do to slow it down. This book will tell you.

It's available by mail, so even if you're shy or scared, it's okay. Just get the book. Learn what's happening out there. You can order by writing A Different Light Bookstore, 489 Castro Street, San Francisco, CA 94114, or by calling (415) 431-0891. It costs $9.95, plus $2.00 shipping charge.

Thanks. Someday, when I see you in a bar, I'll try to return the favor. We now return you to your regularly scheduled smut.

SOME DIFFERENT KINDS OF SONGS

Deacon Lunchbox
Drewry Lane Bookmakers
PO Box 2213
Decatur, GA 30031

"I'm just an old redneck hippy/livin' at the end of this dirt road/I ain't exactly totally crazy/but I am a few bricks short of a load."—Deacon Lunchbox

Atlanta is a strange town: if you stay there long enough and keep doing what you do, someone is going to make you famous for it. "Deacon Lunchbox" is no exception. "Six-foot-two, 220 lbs., with a bushy red beard, long red hair, a voice like a chain saw and a fondness for denim overalls and an old, battered Chevrolet cap" is how the Deacon is described by Doug DeLoach in Atlanta's entertainment weekly, Creative Loafing. Words, however, can't touch this man's performances. He wails, hollers, and thrashes your brain with his high-energy assault poetry centered around themes like stock-car racing, Harley-Davidson bikes, and blue-collar politics. A typical excerpt, from a piece called A True Story of Life in Midtown Atlanta, runs like this: "THERE'S A PSYCHOTIC SOCIALITE DANCIN' THE HULA ON THE PORCH/ACROSS THE STREET/ THE YUKELELE MUSIC IS DRIVIN' ME FUCKING CRAZY." Crazy is right, but crazy like a fox. The man is smart. Describing his own work, he says, "it's so simple, it's complicated."

Other people called him a poet first; he claims to have wanted to be a singer (his biggest dream is to have a song of his performed by someone like ZZ Top). Catching him live is the most complete way to experience Deacon Lunchbox, but his photo-illustrated book, Some Different Kinds of Songs is a great second-best. It is available from Drewry Lane Bookmakers, PO Box 2213, Decatur, GA 30031. No price is listed on the book, but five bucks is what I paid for mine. If you're in the Atlanta area, look for him at poetry readings, or better yet, in a live set with the Opel Foxx Quartet. Your life will never be the same if you can catch the Deacon with this crew.

We'll leave y'all with some more of the Deacon's own words, the conclusion of True Story of Life...: "THERE'S A FROWNING HOOKER WALKING HER DOG ON THE STREET/ DOWN BELOW/ SO I SCREAM DOWN AT HER/ SMILE!/ SHE SCREAMS BACK UP AT ME/ WHY!/ I SCREAM BACK AT HER/ BECAUSE LIFE IS AN ILLUSION/ AND YOU MIGHT AS WELL MAKE IT A GOOD ONE!/ SHE SCREAMS BACK AT ME/ SUCK MY DICK!/ SO I SCREAM BACK DOWN AT HER/ THAT'S NOT THE ILLUSION I HAD IN MIND!"

THE RULES OF THE GAME

1. Replying to a COA Box Number.

Write your letter, put it in an envelope and seal it. On this envelope, put the fella's box number IN PENCIL where you'd normally put a stamp. Put this letter along with $1 in a larger envelope and mail to us. That's COA, 2215R Market #148, SF, CA 94114. We always forward letters if you've done what's called for here. If you mess up—and particularly if (a) you don't put your note inside another envelope, and/or (b) you don't include a buck—we throw your handiwork away.

2. Constructing your ad. When you write out your ad, keep this in mind: talk a bit about yourself and be real clear about the types of folks you'd like to meet through your ad. As much as possible, avoid telling us who you don't want to meet. No "no fats, no feds, no Lithuanians" shit. Be positive. And if you aren't, we edit the shit out of the ad and turn you into more of a Pollyanna than you'd care to be.

3. Using the phone. If you're calling someone, keep in mind (a) time zone differences—if you don't know them, look in the front of the White Pages in a phone book; and (b) that the guy on the other end may not be able to or may not want to talk to you at the time of your call.

4. Abusing the phone. Don't. Or we'll eliminate them from ads.

5. Cost and duration. Personal ads are free if you're a BEAR BUDDY for the duration of your sub. Otherwise, they're 25¢/word/issue. Wanna change your ad? Send in $5. Wanna discontinue your ad? Write in and we'll pull it. Regardless of its duration though, you will have to pay to have a pulled ad reinserted.

6. Deadline for classifieds. For issue #16 it's May 20.

7. COA Box Numbers. Available to US subscribers. Free to Bear Buddies, including Foreign Buddies. Otherwise, tack on $5 to your ad. We forward mail once a week. A word to the wise: responses to your ad will be greater using your own address versus ours.

8. Personal vs. commercial ads. You know as well as I do what a personal ad is and isn't.

9. We reserve the right to edit personals. This right is exercised for editorial consistency and for clarity almost exclusively.

10. We reserve the right to refuse any ad for any reason whatsoever.

FUCKIN' AROUND

We've got a pretty serious health crisis going on right now. Many of my friends and yours have died. And it's been proven that certain types of sexual activity have played a large role in the transmission of AIDS.

No one knows all the do's and don'ts regarding sane sexual activities in these times. However, I'm going to lay out my personal feelings regarding fucking around. How valid are they? Who knows. But they work for me and a man's got to do something.

1. Lead a healthy life. Get plenty of rest, exercise regularly, and eat a balanced diet, although a burger, fries and a milkshake every now and then won't kill you. See a doctor regularly for physicals.
2. Keep your teeth in good shape! Floss regularly (but several hours before sucking cock). Make certain that you're free of gum disease.
3. Assume that your sex partner(s) is carrying a life-threatening, sexually contracted disease. And if you're sexually active, assume the possibility exists for yourself. The selection of your sex partner and the activities that you engage in are YOUR choices and YOUR responsibility.
4. Don't be afraid to say no. Yeah, you're horny, but it's life or death, guy. Conversely, don't be afraid to go for it if you've got a clear mind and conscience.
5. Kiss, hug and spit to beat the band.
6. If your gums are in good shape and your partner's dick is in good shape, stick it in your mouth, if it appeals to you. I don't recommend taking someone's load in your mouth or in your ass, protected or not.
7. If you eat butt, you're probably not going to get a life-threatening disease by doing it. However, you could come away with hepatitis, amoebas and other nasties that will do a big number on your immune system. Weigh these possibilities before you take the plunge.
8. Butt fucking should be done with condoms and a water-soluble lube such as KY or Probe. Trojans have been known to leak like sieves. Shop around for a rubber you find comfortable, both on and in. Similarly, fisting should be done with latex gloves. Don't share dildos and all unless they are sterilized between use.
9. Number One and Number Two may be in the same category as butt eating as far as HIV transmission is concerned.
10. Watch your substance use. If you think you're too fucked up to be making decisions, don't fuck around. Remember, there's no Morning After Pill.
11. If you or someone else jabs needles into you, make certain that no blood or only your blood has come in contact with the needle(s) since it was last sterilized.
