LETTERS TO BEAR

MOVIE BEARS AND POSING FOR BEAR

The Wittke Wire several issues back wanted to know the name of the fellow who played the biker in Mask. Well, the actor is Dennis Burkley. He's also in the Sylvester Stallone/Estelle Getty flick Stop! Or My Mom Will Shoot!

The bear to look out for on TV is Richard Karn who plays Tim Allen's assistant on Home Improvement, Tuesdays at 8:30 p.m. on ABC. He's a real beauty and would make a good centerfold for your mag.

N.F., San Bernardino, CA
Your help is appreciated. Over the years we have received numerous suggestions for nude celebrity photo spreads. Thanks for your vote. Our problem is the procedure for getting them in the rag. Our Outreach Program is pretty poor. Most BEAR men initiate contact with us by coming through our shop doors and affirming their interest in showing all to one of the boys here. I then get 'em to strip down and bone up for a polaroid. If schedules, appearances, money and availability check out, we get a photographer to shoot the fella. So far, the only known celeb we've seen pass our way is Chris Xefos from the band King Missile. We grabbed him and he'll be exposing his nether regions in BEAR soon.

HAIRLESS HAVEN

In response to "Youth Wants To Know" (Letters, BEAR 18), I want to say that though I hunt with the big bears, when it comes to hibernating, nothing turns on the heat in my den as much as a fuzzless cub. Perhaps it's the papa in me, I don't know for sure. But I do know I have enough fur for the two of us. I'm not talking disco twinks, but the hot dude hanging out at the local bodyshop, trying hard to grow a 'stache. So don't despair; you're a bear inside. Just give it time, play safe, and it will happen. There's got to be others out there who feel the same way I do. You'll meet. Thanks for the space. Peace.

B.E., Catskill, NY
Okay, guys, there you have it. I've stated again and again that there are furry guys out there who either get off on smooth guys or don't make body hair a dating and mating priority. B.E. has an ad in these very pages. Find it and respond.

PAL TO PEN AND INK

Nice to see the new comic by Matthew Nelson Winston B. Does he sell his original artwork or other comics? I'd love to know since his work is funny and hot.

M.B., Newman Lake, WA
As soon as your note arrived I called up Matt to tell him that he got a fan letter. Believe me, it was appreciated. I asked him if he would sell any original work to a private collector and he said no, but might consider it in the future. While WINSTON B. is his first effort at a continuing comic strip, he is working on another and is trying to find a place to publish it. When it becomes available, we'll let you know.

A PASTORAL IDYLL

I think you have a really first rate magazine. I had my doubts at first, but you got my attention with Steve

THE WITTKKE WIRE

It's late afternoon at a hardware store. Four burly, bearded construction workers amble up to a casually dressed, clean-cut man who is staring intently at the power tools. "Excuse me," says one of the guys, "aren't you Tim Taylor, the host of Tool Time?"

"Why, yes, I am," the man says, smiling as he always does when someone recognizes him.

"We never miss that show," one of the other construction workers says.

Tim nods and smiles. "That's terrific."

"We just love Al," says one of the fans.

Tim's smile freezes. "Everybody loves Al," he says through clenched teeth.

Tim Taylor? Tool Time? Al? Who are these people and what the heck is Tool Time? Well, Tool Time is the show-within-a-show on ABC's Home Improvement, one of the few successful sitcoms introduced for the '91/92 TV season. The premise is that the cool-in-any-situation host of a This Old House-like TV show is really a bumbling klutz at home. Okay, so Home Improvement doesn't automatically sound like a million yucks, but it is pulling in solid ratings.

Part of its success can be attributed to the fact that Home Improvement is broadcast on the same night and network as the unstoppable Roseanne; part can be attributed to some of the laughs generated by the show's amiable star, stand-up comic Tim Allen; and certainly a large and furry part of the show's appeal is Al. As Tim Allen's character Tim Taylor is to Bob Villa, Al is to Norm. Except in a wacky reversal that demonstrates the height of network creativity, Al — the unflappable Tool Time assistant — is the one with the thick, luxurious beard.

Although originally a near silent sidekick character who would only mutter the occasional "That's right, Tim," and offer a cheery salute at the end of each episode as the season progressed, Al was given more lines and a last name Borland. And the reason he started to get more time in the spotlight is because everybody finally does love Al. To paraphrase Sly Stone, he's everyday people, and audiences respond to that. Usually dressed in flannel shirts and comfortable jeans cuffed over sturdy work-boots, the handsome actor who plays Al, Richard Karn, is a symbol of the change that is taking place in the media. It looks like the pendulum is swiftly swinging away from the airbrushed and strip waxed smooth-skinned 1980s.

Last fall, when trailers and commercials started popping up for the holiday movie releases, it was evident that beards were back. First we had Jason Patric, all swarthy beard, ice blue eyes and burgeoning chest hair (give the guy a couple of years and that chest might be unbeatable), in promos for his druggie cop flick Rush. The brooding and dangerous Patric was the polar opposite of the last decade's smooth and safe brat packers like Rob Lowe. It wasn't hard to figure out what Julia Roberts saw in Patric when she escaped Kiefer Sutherland's clutches for Patric's warm fuzziness. It was an extra thrill for those of us who always liked that sort of thing to see that Patric's Rush co-star was Chest-Hair-Hall-of-Famer Sam Elliott.

Kasper (BEAR 14). I grew up in the country, but thought the big city was where it was at. After two years, I found too much superficiality and insincerity. I have always been attracted to rural guys and bikers. I was really bummed out by a lot of the city leather crowd. Since moving back to the country, I find I prefer stopping by bars frequented by farmers or bikers. You can sit and have a good honest conversation where they want to know who you are and not what's in your pants. Don't get me wrong, most of these guys I'd love to jump. But face it. For many of us, sex is only about 25% of your waking life with a lover (if you are so lucky) and a lot less when you go out and play the one night stand game.

Back in the country, where queer bars are few and far between, you have to have some hope that you can run into a guy with a common sexual interest. You frequently end up spending your time with Rosie and her five sisters, but with a magazine like yours, you don't mind so much.

I was surprised by B.R.'s letter in BEAR17. Yes, the guys that are presented are sometimes bigger than the slim-trim mags or the bodybuilder mags, but your guys are representative of reality. They have great faces and their bodies are generally solid. I'm 37 and finding it really difficult to keep a trim waist. Your guys are fairly representative of the 30-50 age group and show the changes our bodies are going through.

I've always been attracted to guys with a lot of body hair. I also enjoy the guys you present that don't exceed 7 inches. I like seeing short fat dicks. I had a friend about five years ago that I came out to because we were getting to be close friends and just thinking about him could get me hard. When I told him that I was queer, he said he had figured it out and later when I dropped him off at his house he said that he was curious about trying sex with a guy. Sometimes ethics can be a real pain, but I told him not right now since I couldn't be sure we would still be friends afterwards.

Well, to make a very long story short, one night after drinking and playing pool, he insisted that I sleep on the couch instead of driving drunk. The next morning after his girlfriend left, being so damn horny, I crawled into bed with him without waking him. I reached under the covers to check out his dick which I had never seen raw, since he was piss shy. What a surprise to find it was only 6 to 7 inches long when hard, but I swear nearly as big around as a beer can! I always wondered about the huge basket he sported through his jeans (big balls with a fat dick). While I was jacking him he started to get into it and woke up. He sort of freaked and I had fun torturing him by not leaving the room. He didn't want me to see him naked.

We remained friends and the last time I saw him, we had been drinking and I had to take a piss in the parking lot since the bar was locked up. What does my friend do but run around to my side of the car fast and watch me while he's talking to me. There I was taking a piss with a raging hard-on with an audience who never did offer to participate. So much for ethics. I never saw him again as we moved away and lost touch with each other. After I moved back here, I tried to locate him, but all that I could find out was that he had gotten married and moved.

R.D.M., Meadville, PA

A thick peckeroni has tempted many a soul to go back for seconds. Sorry you were never able to shake it up again with your drinking buddy. By the way, they must grow them big up Meadville way. A true six-to-seven incher (measured from the cock base) is considerably longer than most; attach a beer can circumference to it and it can get unwieldy in many a situation.

MORE ON THE WIRE

Christopher Wittke's astute column tracing the decline of the hairy male as a sex symbol in American pop culture (BEAR 19), made me realize how

BY CHRISTOPHER WITTKKE

The stunningly bearded Matt McCoy looked riveting in the trailers for that creepy save-the-traditional-nuclear-family message film The Hand That Rocks the Cradle. As the Daddy doomed by nutty nanny Rebecca Demornay, McCoy seemed to be using Stephen Caffrey's Fuzzy from Longtime Companion for a beard model, with that fetching along-the-neckline curl.

Steve Martin demonstrated just how radically different a thick growth of facial hair can make an actor look when two films he appeared in went into simultaneous release. In the not very funny Father of the Bride, Martin was his usual smooth faced leading man self. But in Lawrence Kasden's politically naive Grand Canyon he stood out in a much smaller role with his thick, snow white beard. Martin, in fact, deserves credit for resisting the 80s mandate for smooth chests in many of his previous film. Also, the basket watchers among us are encouraged to watch on Howard's sentimental Parenthood with one hand poised over the freeze frame button for Martin's appearance in briefs (you are free to do whatever you want with your other hand I did).

Speaking of freeze frame, the video release of The Fisher King should prove to be a joyous event for Robin Williams' fans. At an audience response screening before the film went into release, I scrawled the following on the card: As a gay man who's sick and tired of homophobic crap being spewed at me from the silver screen, I applaud the specifically anti-homophobic lines uttered by Jeff Bridges and the sub- tle, nuanced performance by Micheal Jeeter as a queen on the edge. And Robin Williams' full-frontal nude scene was spectacular. And I meant it. When a fellow I met at a New Year's Eve party lamented the rumor that Williams was forced to shave his chest for his performance as Peter Pan in Hook, I remember thinking, 'Who cares? He drags his naked butt across the Central Park lawn like a dog in The Fisher King. Who needs any more of Steven Spielberg's reverting-to-boyhood crap when you've got that?' Of course, the nude role won Williams another Oscar nomination and Hook was widely reviled. You see, things are changing on the screen. But the changes are happening in other arenas as well. Actors and male models are taking off their shirts again, and chest hair is no longer verboten. Whether it's a TV commercial for Lever 2000 Soap replete with dark blonde fur covered pecs or a print advertisement for some damned clothing designer or other, hormones seem to be losing some of their forbidden status.

Oh Yeah, back to Al: I'm sorry to report a rather important fact for latecomers to the Al Borland Fan Club. On the premier episode of Home Improvement, the writers went for an easy laugh that had coincidentally been used in the season premier of Designing Women the night before. On that show, the wacky gals giggled as their hunky electrician walked by with his jeans sagging down, exposing copious butt crack. The same "crack epidemic" joke was even better on Home Improvement because the crack was Al's. Alas, that episode was already rebroadcast during the holiday season. It's worth the weight for syndication.

hungry I have been for validation. Your magazine's glorification of the bear male makes an important contribution to our psychological health and self-esteem in a media environment where, officially, we just don't exist.

BEAR is a triumph of American entrepreneurship and manly initiative. More than just a magazine, BEAR feels like a warm, comfortable men's club, and like a good club, embodies not just shared tastes but also shared values. BEAR knows that secure men aren't hung up on distinctions of class, race, or status as defined by society. Moreover, bears are strong and therefore can afford to display kindness, generosity of spirit, and respect for the integrity of others. I guess I'm saying that BEAR's idea of manliness is more than just skin deep, and that's what makes BEAR great.

Have you considered expanding your Things To Do column to include more events? Also, it would be swell if you would run travel pieces—perhaps a BEAR's Guide To... on various places to visit.

It's probably presumptuous to make suggestions to men who are already working so hard and doing such a great job, but please know that they are offered with the greatest respect. Thanks again for having the guts and energy to create a publication that, for many men, is no doubt a psychological lifeline. It's smart, it's fun and it gives me a big woodie.

S.S., Los Angeles, CA

Well thank you, S.S., for your kind words and opinions. And it's not presumptuous of you or anyone else to offer suggestions on making BEAR a better place to read. Luke Mauerman, our calendar-of-events man, just moved into the Assistant Editor job here and I suspect he'll now have a greater opportunity to expand and revamp Things To Do. Keep on sending in your news releases, flyers and bar napkins.

I have considered authoring and/or publishing a "BEAR Guide..." for several years now, with travel info being a considerable portion of the final product. In fact, my computer at home has a directory jammed full of notes, outlines, drafts and graphics just waiting to be pulled together into something useful. Give us a little more time on this one. It's in the works.

BEAR HOLE ROAD

You are without a doubt my favorite magazine. I spend most of my warm weather time cruising the blue highways on my hairy ass. Last September I came across this street sign while scooping out some country farm hands.

I'm sure you can figure out why I couldn't let it pass without taking a picture of it for you. Keep the frolics cummin'!

S.D., McFarland, WI

THERE OUGHT...

Thank you for John Dibelka's There Ought To Be A Law (Bare Pause, BEAR 20). Not only does your magazine give us the hottest types available, but we get intelligent commentary on relevant issues as well. A bargain as far as I'm concerned.

I never saw the original piece by Ashton-Hart, but I have met a few people in the last year that may be a clone of him. Having tested positive a year ago but having played safe since the early 80s, I am astonished at how many people choose not to play safe and refuse to take any responsibility for their own actions.

I am 6'2", weigh in at 200 lbs., am active and look healthy. Several months ago I was 150 lbs. and near death with PCP. When I'm feeling well I occasionally go out and usually talk to a couple of new people each time. Invariably a conversation will lead to making arrangements to play, but I have never had anyone ask me my HIV status. I am always the one who brings it up. Many times I've been treated like a leper as soon as I'm up front about my health by men who were hot-to-trot seconds before.

Let's face it. There is still a great amount of denial among gay men. To assume someone is safe to play with because they look healthy or say they are HIV- is not responsible. As gay men we need to set an example, take responsibility for ourselves and not expect the government to save us from each other.

Thanks for reminding us that each of us must take steps to protect ourselves and not to blame anyone else on our own stupidity.

T.F., Denver, CO

Fifteen years ago I would have thought it preposterous that a deadly virus could epidemically infect members of the human race engaging in reproductive and/or sexual activity. Today every sexually-able person should rightly or wrongly assume that each encounter will be with a person capable of transmitting this life-threatening virus. And we still should do it if sex is the sort of thing we enjoy, taking steps to ensure that no one's health is compromised by our diddlings.

Frankly, when it comes to my personal morals and ethics, I tend not to place undue emphasis on my sexual preferences. I think it's prudent to educate myself, and with the facts at hand, make choices which seem personally fitting and proper. I guess what I'm saying is that I disagree with your putting all men who engage in homosexual activity together in one package and suggesting that they should, as a group, feel responsible for something or other.

CONTESTAPHOBIA

BEAR 18 is about as good as you have ever done—I really enjoyed the spread of Jim Stockwell. Such a great smile to go with that hot bear body.

I do want to let you know I'm a little concerned about the forthcoming BEAR contests. A little fun could be okay but please don't become another title magazine, wasting pages with endless pageantry and meaningless titles.

S.D., Dallas, TX

Your concern is shared with us here at BEAR, S.D. Contests are a fun way for a bunch of people with similar interests to get together for a good time. That is a primary goal of our establishing linked BEAR contests throughout the world. BEAR's coverage of events will be focused on skin, not process.

I would like to point out that many title holders (Mr. Drummer, Mr. International Leather, etc.) have done remarkably good deeds for those in need. And the title seemed to act as a catalyst for these individuals to get out there and hustle for the good of mankind. We also all seem to need heroes; I'm a firm believer that if we had a constitutional monarchy in the USA, we'd all be better off.

Creating a title is not such a bad thing if a little thought is put into it.

BEAR FAN DRIVES 550
MILES FOR KINDNESS, WARMTH, SMARTS AND HUMOR

I had to drop you fine folks at BEAR a line to give you a big thank you! You put out a magazine that I truly enjoy cover to cover. The articles and columns are informative and interesting as well as humorous. The guys are hot, hot, hot. I still have heart-pounding, sweat-drenching fantasies about John Sprague (BEAR17). It's a good thing he doesn't work for my phone company or my receiver would need servicing daily.

For many years, I have been unable to describe in one word, myself and the men I lust after. Thanks to a driver who introduced me to BEAR over the summer, now I do. Bear is not just fur. It's an attitude. Friendly, masculine, warm-hearted and humorous are a few of the bear traits. The fur is the icing on the cake.

Mostly, I thank you for Bears In Heat. After responding to an ad, communicating back and forth for a few months, and driving 550 miles, I met a wonderful man. He's the kindest, warmest, smartest and most humorous man I've met in a long time. He's honest and open and makes me feel like a king. The distance between us is a slight problem, but not one that can't be overcome.

Anyway, keep my issues coming and keep up the great work. You've got a fan for life.

E.C., New York, NY

It always tickles me to hear about people meeting through our classifieds. I've always wanted to operate a whore house; publishing these ads is a good alternative.

Home Cookin'

by T.C.

Last time in Home Cookin' I drew up an idea for a folding rim seat, perfect for easy storage. Later I realized that the design may have been a little difficult for some of you that are not very handy with hammers and saws. Not wanting to exclude anyone from having their butts licked in comfort, I talked over the idea with a guy named James and came out with plans that just about anyone can put together.

James also suggested that in a pinch, a spare bar stool (preferable the plain ol' square and wood kind) turned over, can provide enough support so you can straddle your legs over it and enjoy the ride.

Equipment:

Standard Toilet Seat (open or closed end will work)

4 - 12 inch screw legs

4 - 3 inch screw brackets

A power drill makes it easier but is not mandatory.

Assembly

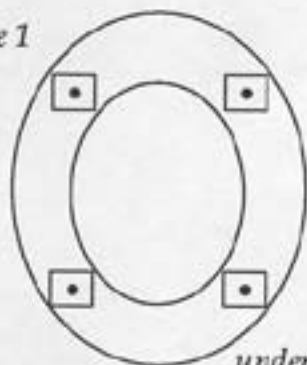

Carefully attach the screw brackets to the bottom of the seat. (figure 1)

All you need to do now is screw legs into the screw brackets and go for it.

Note:

Some of the cheaper seats tends to splinter and won't hold the screw brackets. If you can find a fair priced all-wood seat, use it.

FIELD WORK

By hugin

"We gotta time constraint. You know that."

I had the problem arrayed on the board, a stack of assertion in predicate calculus next to a big directed graph. I had the reducible parts circled in blue chalk, the final path traced in yellow, and the singularity was outlined in fat red lines. I couldn't make it go away.

"Look Joe, it's within striking distance. I know it'll crack any minute now, if I just had a week." My phone hand was sweating.

He sounded weary. "The grant's up for renewal in a month. If I don't show the NSF a result for their money..." He's not brutal, just desperate.

I stuck the pencil through my beard and left it there, an undergrad habit. "So what do I do now?"

"Write up what you have. Isolate the solved nodes. Make 'em lemmas, I guess. Use your judgement. I need three hundred words to put on the work-in-progress page."

I yanked the pencil out, threw it across the room. So close. "They're gonna cut your funds. That's the next step."

"It'll work out, Rags. Just hang in and ..." He sighed. "Keep me apprised, okay? I'll think of something."

I expressed doubts, he offered assurances, then he hung with a little disgusted grunt. Not brutal, just....

I walked to the window, propped open to catch the May breeze. It was a bright Sunday, heartbreaking bright and blood warm. Suddenly I needed to take a walk.

I grabbed the phone and dialed David. He picked up on the ritual third ring and murmured, "Yo."

"It's Rags. What are you doing?"

"Oh, hello, Rags. Polishing Circular Times. You okay?" His voice was warm butter and old bourbon, a hint of concern warming it further.

"I'm all right. I'm coming over, okay?"

"Sure, come over. I'll open one of the Amarones."

"Gimme twenty minutes."

"Right." Click. Just like that. My eyes blurred with tears.

David's house is a quick fifteen minute walk from the Pure and Applied Math building. I swept up a stack of graph paper covered with directed graphs machines, shoved it in my briefcase, and left my tiny office. Abou-Sayed had his door open down the hall, blasting Beethoven. I left with the Eroica trailing after me.

David lives in a smallish split-level on the edge of campus; he teaches ceramic technique and glassblowing when he's not buried in his own work. I could see three fluid cloud-shapes cut from pink granite behind him when he opened the door.

He leaned against the door sill, hairy and scary and grinning slightly. His hair is a black mane trailing below his shoulders; his walrus moustache frames his mouth in two thick curves; his beard is a dark ellipse, the hair straight and soft, not curly as mine is. His arms (thick, brown, corded arms) are crossed over the motto on his sweatshirt (I've seen it before — "If somebody calls, I'm designing St. Pauls"), his chest is immense, big as a row-boat, wide enough to get lost in.

"You look dazed."

It's 'cause you got this effect on me baby. I remembered to breath. "Yeah, I guess I am."

He turned and walked inside. "C'mon in. I'm gonna stow the rouge wheels. Make yourself t'home."

The front hall and the living room were a single large space, lined with packed bookshelves and studded with partially completed pieces. There was a table near the couch that was reserved for my gifts, what gifts I could give—a glass Klien bottle, a four-color view of the Mandelbrot set, the Weierstrass Elliptic drawn as a rolling landscape, a cube of soapstone we'd tried to carve into a Menger sponge one night, swilling Southern Comfort and snapping dental drill bits to cut the smallest holes and laughing like fools.

"Caught it just in time. It's a little acidic, just the same." I grabbed the glass out of his hand and buried my face in his shoulder, relaxed against him. His arms closed around me and I was lost. Quite lost.

His voice was a rumble, far below. "Hm-hmh, we're in a mood." I felt strong fingers squeeze and press the muscles at the base of my neck, his lips against my ear. "Have a bad day?"

The tension drained against my ear. I almost wept for the feel of it departing. "Yeah. Bad. I'm glad I came over."

"What is it?"

I turned, pulled a sheet of foolscap from my briefcase. "Gustavson's gotta reapply for funding. If I don't have something spectacular for him to send to the NSF he's likely to need to economize on research assistants."

He looked at the graph, labeled circles connected half of it with one hand. "How many assistants does he have?"

I craned my neck to see what he was covering.

"One. Me. Hey, what are you...?"

"Nothing. Just a thought." He ran a finger around the part margin-labeled pain in the butt, and laid a thumb over part of it. "Is this the problem?"

"Yeah." The system was a flat pool of water in my head. Something rippled the surface for a split second. "Say, do you think if I resolved that part first...?"

"Aw, what do I know, you're the mathematician." He put the paper on the table and hugged me one-handed. "Relax. You'll do fine."

I hugged him back. He grabbed me by the chin and started to kiss me, his tongue reaching in and flooding my mouth, and I was reaching into his shirt to clutch handfuls of dense chest hair, brushing the fine, soft fur on his belly. And he caught my head in the crook of his arm and crushed our faces together as he fumbled with my belt buckle. My dick was hard as I fell to my knees and wrenched his trousers open and grasped his dark knobby cock, thick as a beer can and rock hard, by the base to cram it into my mouth, to run my tongue under the hood and over the smooth, swollen head, tracing the lines of veins and savoring the salt-and-meat taste of dicksweat and dickmusk and dicklube. And he laced his hands behind my head to pull me forward and murmured, "Oh, sweet man, sweet baby, aah, jesusgod, oh, please, oh..."

Suddenly we were down on the floor with the granite dust and he's got my dick in his mouth, the shaft sinking into the brown hair on his face, his nose in my balls, and I feel the soft warmth of him clamped over the head of my cock and sliding down and pulling me in, the long strands of his beard meshed with my bush. And I went away, I vanished into another place as waves of heat roll through my cock, in through his mouth. He caught my hips in his arms and he pulled me to him and we rocked together, a pair of thrusting cocks and sucking mouths, cradled in his arms. It felt so good to be in his arms, thick and knotty, pressing our trunks together to feel the muscles in his stomach against mine, pulling off to run his tongue over my balls and back to my asshole, mashing his face against the tender flesh behind my testicles and worrying it gently with his teeth and clutching desperately to his hips, my cheeks mashed into the base of his dick.

I think he picked me up in his arms and carried me into the bedroom; he's big enough for that, but I don't remember. I know we were suddenly rolling around in each other's arms. I remember pressing my face into his chest hair and rubbing it into his belly. I remember the pattern of downy hairs matted with sweat in a smooth glory trail from his navel to the base of his hard cock. I remember rubbing the head of my dick in David's beard and exulting in the silky friction, plastering it down with precum. I remember his mouth gnawing on my left nipple (the thrill of the pain and something else as my arms crossed over his head) and his strong sculptor's fingers when they wrapped themselves around my aching dick and stroked, thumb below, fingers around the swollen head, dipping to lap at it. Shock of rough tongue over sensitive dickhead, spit dripping honeylike down the shaft for his hand to slide over. I remember the raw joy in his grin as he brought me to the brink of orgasm and stopped, his pleasure at my twisting in his grasp.

I remember the rip of the foil condom package and the flash of apprehension I felt as David greased my asshole—he slid in, fingers loaded with gel, to find the spot behind my dick and traced over it, jacking me off from the inside—but it was only a flash, and I suddenly wanted nothing else. I willed myself to relax hearing David murmuring encouragements, "C'mon baby, open up and lemme in, I got something for y'baby, y'r gonna like it." And I ran my hands through his chest hair and thumbed his nipples and arched my back rhythmically as his fingers found the spot and tortured again and again. I felt the bulbous head of David's cock against my anus, and I relaxed.

...the system was a still pool in my head, and something surfaced...

He slid home with a searing groan. I might have been shouting. I was on my back by then, David suspended over me, shoving his dick in me and then out, then in again. His face was slick and clenched and radiant. He was sliding into me inexorably and I was resisting and accepting. I was clutching his shoulders.

...and something was swimming toward me. I could see it. It looked like...

He was pumping me and pumping me, I was delirious with the smell and feel, the solid solid, moving presence of him. The shock of his hips rose up in waves through my torso as he grabbed my dick in his greasy hand and hauled up on it and he shouted a long single long syllable as he yanked out of me, stripping off his safe and shooting on my belly. I began to boil over. I shook and spasmed and caught him in a jubilant embrace as my honey pumped out and mixed with his on my stomach and chest and beard.

...the singularity shifted, one half of the subgraph resolved into an eulerian walk. The other collapsed into a single node, a string of Boolean symbols burned against my eyelids...

He collapsed on top of me and we were silent for a long time. I rested my beard on his head, holding him for dear life, quite stunned.

"David?"

"Yeah, baby."

"This is gonna sound stupid."

He reached over to the night stand and brought out a graph pad and a mechanical pencil.

I stared. "How the hell..."

"I told you, you'd do fine if you just relaxed." He swung out of bed. "Write it down. You can call Gustavson later. He'll love you." He disappeared into the workroom. I grinned and started scribbling.

IMITATION OF ART

What is art? That question's been around, in one form or another, since people started making art. That means it's been around almost since people started making people. I've asked it myself all my life, and I've just whipped up what I now think is the answer.

Art is what makes life make sense.

Remember - you heard it here first. I hope. I think it's a brilliant thought, and I'd hate to think I stole it from somewhere. Please let me know if I did. I want to be original, but I'd always much rather be honest.

I used to think vodka and speed made life make sense. Booze and crank and cigarettes and poppers and, every now and then, a little spectacular sex. Sex is an art form, when it's done right, so I guess it qualifies. I was wrong about the rest. I was just as confused when I eased out of all that as I was when I jumped in.

But I never, in all that time, lost my taste for other peoples' points of view.

I may have been the only man west of the Rhineland who jacked himself up for his leather nights out with Bach's Brandenburg Concerti. I've always been a little odd. I know I'm not the only man who has ever been late for a first dinner date because he just couldn't put down a good book. I fell in love once, back when God was a girl, with a man who did that very thing.

I do not fall in love very often or easily. Something about the process leaves me frightened and confused. I hadn't even gotten close for years until last summer.

Then I did it. Real hard. Twice.

First came Roger, a model who looks just like a young Chuck Connors, back in the '50's; his "Big Country" days. Roger also acted like Connors' character in that movie, Buck. Those of you who haven't seen the flick will have to trust me: this is not a compliment.

Roger simply disappeared. No "sorry"; no "sayonara"; nothing. I wondered for months what it was I'd done wrong, until I sat with some good friends to watch that western and everything fell into place. Buck was the schmuck he was 'cause he was Buck. Roger's not a schmuck. I wouldn't have fallen in love if he were. But he behaved toward me the way he did because he is the man he is. He can't change that any more than Buck could. I couldn't change it at all. The only person I can change is me.

I didn't do anything wrong, after all.

In fact, when I finished the movie I did the right thing: I fell out of love with Roger.

In the meantime, Ford showed up. I was drowning my pain over Roger one night in my neighborhood bar when Ford walked in, sat down and talked. He had just broken up with his lover. We had a lot in common. We spent a few very nice nights with each other. He'd snore; I'd roll him over. He put up with my having to get up at five. We went out for Thai food; my favorite. He loved it. I cooked him the first real meal I'd tried to fix for anyone since I was 21. We fit. I loved to see him smile.

The night he came to tell me he was going to go back to his ex I didn't know how to react. I had thought I had not let myself get involved to the point where I'd have a hard time letting go.

It seems I'd missed the signs. I was hooked and I knew I would miss him. A lot.

I didn't think the move was wise. I still don't. The decision was not mine to make. Ford told me it would make him happy. I thanked him for caring enough about me to let me know just where I stood. Then I wished them well. I still do.

I got restless at work a week later and tried a new radio station. Country. Dolly Parton started asking, "Hey Baby, Can You Come Out Tonight?" It's a song about a woman whose lover is leaving her to try to pick up with his wife. Parton doesn't know how to handle this either, but somehow hearing her say so made it all seem like less of my own special failure and more like a part of the human condition. I loved it. I loved her. And I knew I loved Ford enough to step back and let him try for what he wanted.

I still do love to see him smile, even if it's only dreams.

Way back in spring, before Roger and Ford, I had a bad case of the blues. Everything seemed pretty bleak; I spent my time pissing and moaning to anyone who'd listen, demanding to know what in hell was supposed to make my life worth living. Looking back now it all seems kind of silly. Finally, my brother asked me, "Where do you find beauty?"

The easier answers were all automatic. Sunset on a quiet beach. The shape of a strong man's back. Electrical storms in the middle of the night.

The more I went looking, the more I discovered creations of people who wanted to spread around what they observed. Sonnets and photographs. Movies, plays and music. Good books and bad jokes. A quote from someone whose name I can't remember now:

"Learn from the mistakes of others. You can't live long enough to make them all yourself."

Art. All of it.

I am, for the most part, a logical person. I try to calculate my risks before I take them. Sometimes I don't get the factors worked right and don't end up quite where I intended.

Well, that's life.

And art is what makes it make sense.

...and we put him to sleep.

Last issue I talked about assisted suicide, and how far behind medical reality and our legal system continues to be. This column is about something you can do to protect yourself from being kept alive artificially should you suffer a terminal illness or accident.

Everybody should have a living will and durable power of attorney, even if you are young and healthy. You never know when you are going to get hit by a truck or struck down by some fast-acting virus. Only last week I went to the funeral of a 40-year-old woman who, as far as she knew, was in perfect health. She went into the hospital with what she thought was a bad case of food poisoning and died from a ruptured appendix a few hours later.

A living will is an instruction to attending physicians that extra-ordinary measures are not to be taken if and when you should realistically have no hope of recovery. A durable power of attorney is an authorization for somebody else to make medical decisions for you should you become unable to make them for yourself.

If you don't have a living will or a durable power of attorney, and you become medically incapacitated, you and those who love you will have very limited power to make decisions about your care. You will be kept alive artificially as long as a machine can still keep your organs running. In many states the hospital cannot legally turn off the machines unless there is clear and convincing evidence that that is what you would have wanted—needless to say, it's very difficult to prove your wishes by clear and convincing evidence if you haven't put them on paper. Your lover, if you have one, will not even be consulted or allowed to express an opinion, or probably even be given information about your condition. He may even be barred from the hospital. I simply cannot emphasize enough that in this day and age, it is absolutely crucial that you make our wishes known—and legally enforceable.

In all fifty states, living wills are legal. They simply direct physicians and hospitals that you are not to be kept alive by artificial means. An attorney can draw one up for you very quickly and simply, and at a relatively low cost.

A living will is absolutely useless, however, unless somebody has it and can present it when needed. I know several horror stories about people who wrote living wills and struck them away in a drawer, where they were discovered after it was too late to do any good. I advise you to have several copies made and leave them with your attorney, your lover, your regular physician if you have one, your parents and siblings (even if you hate each other), and several close friends. You have got to ensure that somebody will be able to present it when the time comes.

There are several reasons why you should give copies to your immediate family, even if you are not on speaking terms. The first is that, as your family, they will likely be kept informed of and consulted regarding your condition. The knowledge that you signed a legal document may deter them from trying to run opposition to your wishes. It may also be that they will decide to do the decent thing and follow your request; sometimes an impending death does that to people.

There is a difference between artificial life support machines and artificial feeding. Most hospitals will not, even with a living will, shut off food and water. Thus, if you are in a coma, but not actually dying, it is possible you may live indefinitely even without life support machines. This varies from one state to another; in Washington the legislature has just passed a law which specifically allows living wills to include artificial feeding. Check with an attorney to find out what the law of your state is.

A power of attorney gives somebody else the right to make medical decisions for you if you can't do it yourself. It is a fairly simple and straightforward document, and an attorney can draw one up for you without too much difficulty.

It is important that you give your power of attorney to someone who feels the same way you do, which may or may not be your lover. If you want the machines turned off at the first moment they cease to do any lasting good, but your lover is of the opinion that life should be preserved at all costs even in the face of severe pain, leave him whatever you like in the will but give your power of attorney to someone else. He should not be placed in the position of having to choose between his conscience and your express wishes. Part of loving someone is being candid and frank about what you can and cannot do for him.

You should appoint both a primary and alternate person to have power of attorney, and given the intransigence of the medical community on this issue, you should pick someone who is a utter pit bull when it comes to getting something done. There is no other way to put it. Far too many doctors and hospitals refuse to honor living wills, usually because they are afraid of getting sued by relatives. Give your power of attorney to someone who will be able to persuade them that he will also get sued if they don't follow your wishes. It helps if this person is also the executor of your estate since that way they will have a standing, even after you have died, to seek damages from the hospital for refusal to honor your living will.

The document should not mention that you are gay or that you have any kind of a relationship with the person who has your power of attorney. Some judges are incredibly homophobic, to say nothing of some families, and putting opportunity for them to try to void the whole thing as being against public policy. One of the current justices of the Supreme Court, Antonin Scalia, takes the view that the state has an affirmative obligation to protect the traditional family by refusing to give any protection whatsoever to those outside of it. Thankfully his view is not the majority, but think of the difficulties you might have if Justice Scalia were a superior court judge hearing a case involving a durable power of attorney that had the word gay in it.

It would be really wonderful if society did not insist on making life so very difficult for those who want nothing more than to be left alone. Maybe someday it won't. But until that day comes, we must all take responsibility for our own lives. Remember, your first line of defense against a world full of moralizers is you.

THE RULES OF THE GAME

1. Replying to a BEAR™ Box Number. Write your letter, put it in an envelope and seal it. On this envelope, put the fella's box number IN PENCIL where you'd normally put a stamp. Put this letter along with $1 in a larger envelope and mail to us. That's BEAR, 2215R Market #148, SF, CA 94114. We always forward letters if you've done what's called for here. If you mess up—and particularly if (a) you don't put your note inside another envelope, and/or (b) you don't include a buck—we throw your handiwork away.

2. Constructing your ad. When you write out your ad, keep this in mind: talk a bit about yourself and be real clear about the types of folks you'd like to meet through your ad. As much as possible, avoid telling us who you don't want to meet. No "no fats, no ferns, no Lithuanians" shit. Be positive. And if you aren't, we edit the shit out of the ad and turn you into more of a Pollyanna than you'd care to be.

3. Using the phone. If you're calling someone, keep in mind (a) time zone differences—if you don't know them, look in the front of the White Pages in a phone book; and (b) that the guy on the other end may not be able to or may not want to talk to you at the time of your call.

4. Abusing the phone. Don't. Or we'll eliminate them from ads.

5. Cost and duration. Personal ads are free if you're a BEAR™ BUDDY for the duration of your sub. Otherwise, they're 25¢/word/issue. Wanna change your ad? Send in $5. Wanna discontinue your ad? 9. We reserve the right to edit personals. This right is exercised for editorial consistency and for clarity almost exclusively.

10. We reserve the right to refuse any ad for any reason whatsoever.

FUCKIN' AROUND

We've got a pretty serious health crisis going on right now. Many of my friends and yours have died. And it's been proven that certain types of sexual activity have played a large role in the transmission of AIDS.

No one knows all the do's and don'ts regarding sane sexual activities in these times. However, I'm going to lay out my personal feelings regarding fucking around. How valid are they? Who knows. But they work for me and a man's got to do something.

1. Lead a healthy life. Get plenty of rest, exercise regularly, and eat a balanced diet, although a burger, fries and a milkshake every now and then won't kill you. See a doctor regularly for physicals.

2. Keep your teeth in good shape! Floss regularly (but several hours before sucking cock). Make certain that you're free of gum disease.

3. Assume that your sex partner(s) is carrying a life-threatening, sexually contracted disease. And if you're sexually active, assume the possibility exists for yourself. The selection of your sex partner and the activities that you engage in are YOUR choices and YOUR responsibility.

4. Don't be afraid to say no. Yeah, you're horny, but it's life or death, guy. Conversely, don't be afraid to go for it if you've got a clear mind and conscience.

5. Kiss, hug and spit to beat the band. 6. If your gums are in good shape and your partner's dick is in good shape, stick it in your mouth, if it appeals to you. I don't recommend taking someone's load in your mouth or in your ass, protected or not.

7. If you eat butt, you're probably not going to get a life-threatening disease by doing it. However, you could come away with hepatitis, amoebas and other nasties that will do a big number on your immune system. Weigh these possibilities before you take the plunge.

8. Butt fucking should be done with condoms and a water-soluble lube such as KY or Probe. Trojans have been known to leak like sieves. Shop around for a rubber you find comfortable, both on and in. Similarly, fisting should be done with latex gloves. Don't share dildos and all unless they are sterilized between use.

9. Number One and Number Two may be in the same category as butt eating as far as HIV transmission is concerned.

10. Watch your substance use. If you think you're too fucked up to be making decisions, don't fuck around. Remember, there's no Morning After Pill.

11. If you or someone else jabs needles into you, make certain that no blood or only your blood has come in contact with the needle(s) since it was last sterilized.

LIVE BEAR 2

10 Big Hairy Men

LIVE BEAR was the first film featuring exclusively hirsute men strutting their stuff in front of the camera. Four years later we bring you LIVE BEAR 2—ten men in solo action on a 90 minute video cassette stripping down for our camera, showing us what we want to see and telling us what we want to hear.

These are men who stopped by the BEAR offices and said, "Yeah, I'd like to do a dirty video". Real action by real guys who wanted you, fans of hairy men, to see them naked and to watch them play with themselves. No cover-up sound here either. The grunts, groans and dirty talk are here for your listening pleasure.

A Few Highlights From The Film

- Dino, 250 lbs. of fur and flesh; so hairy, front and back, that he has to shave his neck to set apart his beard.
- John, a hungry bearded man who ends up deep throating the cameraman's hand.
- Stan, a handsome furry chested Southerner who has perfect aim with his body fluids; tasty.
- Brian, so butt crazed that he takes a bust of Beethoven and shoves it up his ass.

Labels. People sure do love 'em. And can you blame them? After all, labels do provide folks with a means of instantly identifying who and what things are all about.

Some labels are obvious: black or white, male or female. Others, of course, are not quite so easy to peg: straight or gay, conservative or liberal, and so on. Obviously, the hitch of slotting people into generalized categories is that it leaves little room for variation and plenty of space for inaccuracy.

Take gay men and music. Does the mere mention of the topic blind you with mental images of shrieking disco queens dressed in gold lamé hot pants, twirling away to Donna Summer tunes? Or perhaps you are picturing a clique of very serious fellows rhapsodizing over every note and syllable of Madame Butterfly.

Do you comfortably and exclusively envision yourself within either of these scenarios? Now I'm not saying we've never felt a rush at the strains of Summer's Last Dance or marveled at the beauty of a soprano voice during the climax of an aria. But we're all individual men with individual tastes—and not by nature of our sexual preferences fans of Diana Ross or Beverly Sills.

I must confess to relating much more to the intensity and aggression that exudes from a rocker brandishing his guitar, as well as the unaffected sensitivity that pours out of a country singer while he cries in his beer. An unscientific bit of research reveals that a lot of our fellow bears agree.

For a dime-store psychological perspective, it may be that the raw masculinity and sense of male bonding inherent in rock 'n' roll and country music gets our juices flowing. It's that perspective which fuels this new column. My goal is clear and sincere: to shatter the preconceived

THE SOUNDS THAT ANIMALS MAKE

MUSIC REVIEWS
BY

notion of a gay man as a virtual drag queen when it comes to music. Some of the artists featured in this space will be gay and others will be of interest to men hankering for music that's a little rough around the edges.

With that in mind, let's kick things off by directing your attention to several tasty new albums and concert tours to catch. First up is Travis Tritt, a hunky country bear who has been rattling cages throughout the U.S. during an eight-month concert tour. This here is no run-of-the-mill cowpoke, as evidenced by rambunctious, blue-juiced jams like Put A Little Drive In Your Country, with its snarling slide guitar licks and swampy beats; and the plaintive The Whiskey Ain't Workin' Anymore. Already a megastar in country music circles, Tritt flirted with mainstream success with a recent single, Here's A Quarter (Call Someone Who Cares), a tour de force that is said to have been inspired by his second divorce. Check out his current album, It's All About To Change—and don't pass up an opportunity to feast on him in person when he visits your town.

Speaking of men who blaze their own musical trail, the long-awaited return of Bruce Springsteen is upon us. Armed with not one but two albums, Human Touch and Lucky Town, he continues to prove that tears and introspection do not add up to wimphood. In fact, it is on softer songs like I Wish I Were Blind and Souls Of The Departed that his inner strength is most pronounced. And for proper balance, you can't miss with rollicking bar-room tunes like Better Days, Leap Of Faith, and Man's Job. Although details are still pretty sketchy, The Boss should be hitting the road for a tour this summer. Be aware.

For quieter moments, you can't go wrong with Ingenue by k.d. lang and Joshua Judges Ruth by Lyle Lovett. Both are renegade country artists who have won fans by reverently incorporating traditional country-western, blues and jazz into modern pop music. lang has the sweetest voice this side of Patsy Cline, and shines brightest on somber romantic numbers like Save Me and Constant Craving. Lovett, on the other hand, attacks his material with more verve and confidence than he has in years. You've Been So Good Up To Now is a sexy, swaggering ditty, while All My Love Is Gone conjures up images of a smoke-filled saloon and despondent cowboys in need of loving.

Along a similar mood is Rite Of Passage, the fourth studio recording by the femme-folkie Indigo Girls. Supported by a slew of well-known musicians including Jackson Browne, David Crosby, and The Roches, the duo continue to tackle affairs of the heart while injecting bits of Indian culture and socially conscious prose. Among the album's highlights are Chickenman, with its hoe-down beat and harmonica, the depressed-but-poetic Ghost, and a gender-fuck rendition of Dire Straits' Romeo & Juliet. Indigo Girls embark on a lengthy tour this spring. Their shows promote a fun and loose jamboree atmosphere. They have a large and ardent lesbian following which can make for a sex-positive and interesting evening.

Finally, we temporarily swerve into rap territory to note the Disposable Heroes Of Hiphoprisy and their new single, Language of Violence. The track has caused a healthy round of discussion due to its pro-gay, anti-violence lyrical stance. What makes this single even more unique is that it was written and recorded by a heterosexual man. This is an important song that should be heard by every gay man, regardless of musical orientation. It offers a glimmer of hope that the dividing line of prejudice may finally start to fade.

or through Brush Creek Media

Fans of BEAR know we're fans of Old Reliable (OR). He films and photographs street trash, toughs and hustlers wending their way through Tinsel Town who are in need of a quick buck, a place to stay or a little honest physical appreciation and personal attention.

In the early days of OR, his customers could purchase naked stills and audio tapes. Success and accessible technology brought us posing and jack-off videos. For the past four or five years, nude wrestling and boxing videos have rounded out his repertoire.

WRESTLING is a glossy, 54-page catalog of his twenty-three boxing films and sixty wrestling tapes. I'm estimating there are over 300 crystal clear black and white photographs of naked men engaged in playful combat. Some are funny, others violent, almost all erotic. The fan of the non-erect dick will repeatedly get his nut. The peckers sway to and fro as the still camera catches the intensity of the physical fight in the male body.

Never has there been such a collection assembled of so many nude men engaged in combat. The visual and editorial presentation is professional and, at times, poignant. This is a historically significant book.

"Eek! Naked hippies!" I thought in mock terror as I saw this 'zine at the local bookstore. I've always been fond of guys with long hair, especially when they're naked, so I picked it up. The introductory editorial statement wasn't exactly what I had expected in what appeared to be a cool, quasi-underground porno 'zine. It mixed sex, subversion, and spirituality, something I can get into easily.

As the contents page promised, there were pictures of naked long hairs, all of 'em attractive. I like seeing non-standardized beauty and this 'zine is a great place for it.

Just about everything in in HD! is alternative in nature. In the second issue there was a collage about sexual empowerment (that's what it means to me, anyway), an article about Wilhelm Reich, illustrations by T.C.'s Smudge, Robin Walden, an editorial about the spectra of penises, and loads of naked men, all of it informed by a certain whimsical humor. If Richard Brautigan wrote it, it would have been called Trouser Trout Fishing in America.

All told, it's a good low-budget production. It's put out on a quarterly basis and available by mail-order as well as a few select bookstores across the country. So the next time you're looking for a pornographick alternative, check it out.

SHITS AND GIGGLES CHESTS AND COWBOYS

Two great things about us are our love of organizing things and our love of a good evening out. This explains why so many clubs and organizations abound, ranging in interest from head cheese to feet. And we've got two more for you right here on this very page. We're gonna get you laid if it's the last thing we do.

Rapidly growing in the Mid West is a group dedicated to one of my favorite body parts: the chest. Founded in 1980, Chest Men of America now includes men of all ages, sizes and shapes from around the world. Their newsletter reads, "Members with nipples two inches or more in length are not uncommon." Let's leave that one alone. But you're invited to check them out for yourself. They're having a national convention in Chicago on August 21-22 of this year. Take pictures and send them back to us. Contact CMA at 312-975-9593, or write PO Box 138551, Chicago, IL 60613.

For those longing for a little bit of cowboy, we've got you covered. Mavericks, a group forming down Santa Fe way, is dedicated to bringing wranglers and wrasslers together from Amsterdam Ave. to Albuquerque. For $20, you get hooked up with a personal ad network that spans the whole gall-durned globe. They told us about a lonely cowboy (a real one) in some small part of the country just dyin' to meet y'all. Give them a holler at Mavericks, PO Box 9543, Santa Fe, NM 87504.

For many men, this isn't macho

The toughest of men cringe with shyness when talking about the simplest of men's health care issues. And the fact that over 100,000 men this year will be diagnosed with prostate cancer, (a number that could be even higher if more men were to discuss their health with their doctors as often as recommended for a normal man.)

Today a light's shed on this sensitive, but not and prostate advanced care doesn't mean early stages of prostate cancer. And with these new long term treatment options and a good deal of education, men's lives are being saved and to them the best.

Call the Male Health Care Center at (800) 451-1111 to schedule a free digital rectal exam and discuss other prostate problems with a board certified urologist.

Here's another sight-gag for you. Sent in by D.C. in Oklahoma City, this romantic little reminder was in the Sunday Oklahoman a few months back. Cheap, isn't it? You love it. The switchboard at the Male Health Care Center probably lit up like a Christmas tree on this one. But the message is clear:

your prostate must be checked often to be sure you don't have any lumps or bumps. And digital rectal exams are the best way to go.

FOND OF CHOCOLATE?

Well, you'd like it even more if you found it packaged as residents of Russia do: in a bear wrapper. Richard's buddy from New Zealand brought this back to him on his recent trip to the Un-united Countries of Northern Asia. The taste test proved it mediocre, but the visuals made up for its shortcomings and it was downed with pleasure.

REACH THE PEAK

By Lars Svenson

My camp was near the headwall behind the Lakes at about eight thousand feet. I woke up shivering that morning. My light sleeping bag was probably not the best choice for September in the wilderness of Montana. It's one of those transitional times of the year when it is tough to judge what gear is going to be appropriate. The days can be in the seventies or eighties but the nights can be well below freezing.

I got up with a hard-on that soon shriveled in the cold as I climbed out of the tent. I pissed on a tree trunk and watched the steam rise into the frigid air. A tinge of frost edged the leaves of the low bushes. Not much summer left at this elevation. Pausing only long enough to consume a couple handfuls of trail mix, I broke camp and hefted my pack onto my shoulders. My goal was to climb up out the narrow canyon and on to the ridge where there would be some sunlight and maybe some warmth.

As I hiked my legs began to generate their own heat, I thought of what a crazy thing I was doing: hiking eighteen miles into the wilderness to meet with a man that I only knew through the mail. I placed an ad in a magazine several months ago; a guy named Shawn responded. We exchanged several letters, enough to determine that he was an avid backpacker and climber. Like me, he was a native Montanan. I had received responses from all over the country, I was amazed to get a response from someone that lived just a few hours away from me.

We had agreed to meet at the top of the first peak at noon on the fourth of September. He was to hike in through the drainage and I was to approach from the creek side. Yesterday's hike in to the Lakes was twelve miles. This morning I needed to do another six to reach the peak.

My approach led me over an unnamed pass on a marginal trail. After three hours of hiking, the forest began to open up. It was not long before I could see the peak.

I think I spotted Shawn long before he spotted me. I was hiking along the bottom of the gully, hidden almost completely by the undergrowth. On the other hand, he was completely exposed on a vertical face about two hundred feet up the east side of the peak. The rock that composes the range is mostly pale gray granite. However, black lichen covers most of the exposed surfaces, lending the impression the rocks are black. The guy's body stood out against the dark facade. Well, I admit, his fluorescent green climbing tights helped.

I stopped and dropped my pack. Digging around in the top pocket, I pulled out my binoculars. After casting about across the cliff, I finally focused in on him. Freestyle. He used no ropes. I followed him as he ascended to another ledge and watched as he paused to rechalk his hands. Only stopping for a moment he began a traverse to his left. Clinging to the rock like an insect on a wall, he moved with rapid but deliberate agility. Even with my binoculars, I could not see his hand-holds. He switched the direction of his traverse and for an instant I could see his face. He teeth flashed white, exposed by a grin. He was having fun.

In awe over his climbing ability, I watched him climb for several minutes. He had a long braid hanging down his bare back that swung from side to side as he moved up the cliff. Pulling himself up onto another ledge he stopped and faced away from the cliff. This afforded me a full frontal view. I watched through the binoculars as he pushed down the front of his tights, whipped out his dick and pissed off the ledge. From that distance I could not see the stream, but I imagined what it would be like standing on a ledge below him. He shook his dick a bit and then raised both arms and stretched. After several seconds of rotating his shoulders and twisting his spine, his hands returned to his cock. He began to pull on it. Soon both hands were involved and his head nodded forward, watching himself. Completely hard, he worked his hips, waving his dick in the air. Suddenly, he pulled his tights up, turned, and commenced climbing again.

I took a deep breath and stowed the binoculars. There were going to be two horny men on that peak in about an hour. I grabbed a water bottle from my pack and drank deeply. I needed to burn ass if I wanted to get to the peak before he did. I backed into my pack, snapped the buckles and took off up the trail. It twisted up the gully and then climbed over a shoulder of rock as it took me around to the west side of the peak. The forest grew short as switchback after switchback steadily led me higher. Eventually, the forest gave up and I was left with low alpine vegetation that grows no more than an inch or two. The trail faded and I set off over rubble up the most direct ridge to the peak.

A half mile later with a knee scraped from scrambling over boulders, I reached the peak. There was no one there. I had not expected to beat him to the top. I again shed my pack and began to tour the peak. It consisted of small, relatively flat, gravelly areas between jumbled boulders the size of compact cars. Using both my hands and feet, I clambered to the top of the highest boulder and stood there. I pulled my shirt off and untied the leather thong holding my pony tail. I smiled at the sensation on my back of my long hair blowing in the wind. I surveyed the view, naming the mountain ranges that crowded the horizons: the Anaconda Range, the Beaverhead, the Sapphires, the Bitterroots, the Selways, and far to the north, the Rattlesnakes and the Missions.

"You must be Lars."

I practically fell off the rock. Standing on an outcrop slightly below mine was Shawn. He stood about six feet high and looked as if he consisted of nothing but muscle. Even though his arms were relaxed, I could see the cords under his sun-darkened skin. I guessed that he was about twenty-five. He wore only his lime-green climbing tights and a gray bandana over the top of his head, tied in back. His brown-blond hair stretched almost to his waist in a rough braid. His ragged beard did not match the hair on his head, being several shades lighter. Lightly colored hair spread across his chest and then diminished to a vertical line down his torso. His hands were powdered with climbers chalk and it was smudged in various places on his body and tights.

"Howdy," I said with a grin, "you certainly move quietly."

"I think you were lost in the view; I've been standing here watching you."

"Well, now I'm lost in another view," I said as I stared at his beautiful body.

"Man, I like what I see, too."

"Let's get out of the wind."

We jumped down off the rocks and headed to one of the more open patches. Shawn scrambled ahead of me, detouring to retrieve his light pack and chalk bag. Just down from the peak, we settled in to eat lunch and talk. We sat cross-legged facing each other in the early afternoon sun. We talked of wilderness, hiking and climbing. We discussed the geology of the Bitterroot Range. We shared our food.

There were a few silent times when we were not quite sure what to say next. But our eyes never stopped their motions. We visually explored each other. Shawn's tights left little to the imagination. His balls pressed down his left leg while his penis went down the other. I could see the ridge of his dick head perfectly. Sitting cross-legged in my hiking shorts gave him a view. Too, my balls hung loosely out the right side. I watched his eyes traverse my body, beginning with my crotch and slowly moving upward.

"Man, your beard is really long," he said as our eyes met. "It must be at least seven inches."

I grinned in response and adjusted my balls.

"I packed in some peaches. Want one?" he asked awkwardly as he turned to grab his pack.

"Sure."

He pulled two orange globes from his pack and handed me one.

"They're a little bruised from being in the pack all morning," he said apologetically.

I bit into one and was suddenly drenched with the juices. I laughed and said, "This is going to be a messy operation."

"The best times are usually a bit messy," he said with peach juice dripping from his own beard. "You've got some in your beard. Let me get it for you," he said as he leaned forward onto all fours and moved toward me.

He moved directly to my face and began to lick my beard. His tongue moved rapidly upward toward my mouth. Tilting our heads in opposite directions, our mouths met. I aggressively pushed my tongue into his mouth and he answered with equal fervor. Our tongues probed alternately into each other. My arms automatically moved around his shoulders while he began to push forward again. I slowly laid back and he climbed up onto me.

Now pressing our full body-lengths together, I explored him with my hands. It was hard everywhere. Solid chest, solid abdominals and solid arms ground against me. My hands coursed down his back, the muscles of his ass rivaled the boulders of the mountain.

Our beards meshed as we rubbed our faces together. His beard felt abrasive as he rolled his chin over the bridge of my nose. As our cheekbones bumped together, I noticed the heat radiating from his face. Dragging my beard across him, I nuzzled my cheek into the side of his head. A sudden chill breeze prompted me to pull him as close as I could; I wanted to draw his warmth into me. Shawn sighed a moan of pleasure as I began to work his left ear with my tongue. I chewed the lobe and explored the ridges with my lips.

Hugging him firmly, I rolled to my side and then over on top of him. With most of my weight balanced on my knees, I sat up and pressed my cock against his rigid bulge. I ground my groin into his and gazed at his beautiful beard.

He lifted his head a bit. "Those shorts of yours have got to go," he said.

I stood up and unbuttoned my shorts and let them drop to the ground. He got up and faced me. Slowly he peeled his tights from his legs. His cock pointed directly toward me and then gradually began to angle upward. It was about seven inches long with prominent gnarled veins on the sides. The purplish head was larger in diameter than the shaft, and slightly asymmetric. A touch of shininess on the tip indicated that he was already leaking pre-cum.

With a growl, I stepped up to him and pulled him roughly to me. Our hard cocks stabbed each other as we drew together. Again our mouths met in a hot embrace of intertwining tongues. He pulled my beard hard with his teeth while I kept firm pressure on his braid with one hand. His hands roamed all over me, massaging and exploring my back and my ass. We pressed and rubbed our bodies together. Alternately tensing and releasing the muscles of my hips and lower back, I pushed my cock against his. Their lengths would balance on each other and then suddenly roll to one side as our hips pressed together. With Shawn's tongue entrenched in my mouth, we humped on each other with abandon. We moved faster and faster, taking only shallow breaths. We built a frantic pace with each of us grunting, moaning and sighing with the sensations.

Suddenly Shawn broke the embrace, turned, and leapt to the top of a boulder. Jumping from one rock to the next toward the peak, his muscles bulged beneath the forest of hair on his legs.

"Fuck man. Let's do this right on the top of the mountain."

I laughed and scrambled to follow him back to the top, about thirty yards away. My balls ached as I climbed over the boulders following that naked wild man. He slipped out of view behind an outcropping. I followed, but to my consternation, he had vanished. He was not on the rock on the very top nor anywhere else in view. Cautiously, I laid flat and peered over the edge of cliff that formed the east face of the mountain. Nothing.

Suddenly, a hairy face and probing tongue pressed into my ass crack. Vertigo; fifteen hundred foot vertical drop into a cirque beneath me, hundreds of square miles of wilderness in view and I had a tongue in my ass. The view went in and out of focus as waves of pleasure surged through me.

I loosened my grip on the edge of the rock, turned my torso and asked, "Do you always appear from nowhere?"

"Do you always get so engrossed in the view? Roll over, I want your cock."

I complied and he swallowed me whole. He rolled my semi-hard penis around in his mouth. Occasionally, the head of my dick scratched against his teeth-bringing a rush of sensation that would cause my hands to tighten to fists. His long slow strokes made me swell back to full size quickly. I watched my cock length disappear and reappear under his bushy mustache. Laying my head back, I closed my eyes. Immediately, I felt the vertigo again as I remembered how close my head was to the precipice.

"Let's move back from the edge."

We wedged ourselves between the boulder at the peak and the first rock below it. We sat in an X position, each with one leg over the other and our hard cocks pressed together. The sheer pleasure of holding this horny rock climber tightly to me was almost overwhelming. We chewed each other's beards and licked the sweat from our faces. I could taste the salt from my face on Shawn's tongue. Shawn moaned as I pulled on his nipples while gnawing on his ear. He stood up suddenly, making me shiver with the sensation of his cock dragging up my torso and chest. It caught for a moment in my beard before centering on my mouth. He shoved his dick in and pumped. I grabbed his ass in each hand and kneaded it as he ground into my throat. Popping his dick from my mouth, I moved down to his balls. His penis, drenched with my saliva, wetly slapped my forehead and tangled in my hair. I licked his balls and pulled them with my lips. The stretchy loose skin of his scrotum felt hot and slippery. I pushed my nose between his balls and inhaled deeply, pulling the odor of his sweat into my lungs.

I began to climb his body with my tongue. I moved rapidly but deliberately, exploring the ledges and handholds that his rock-like muscles formed on his torso. As I ascended his neck to his beard, he began a controlled descent. Swapping roles, he tore my body with his tongue as I stood before him. He lingered at my nipples, nipping my flesh with his teeth. The sensation sent excruciating stabs of pain and pleasure directly to my crotch. He dove for my cock and I groaned with the sensations of his hot tongue's embrace. I felt my thighs tighten as my hips automatically moved into rhythmic thrusting. Sinking to his knees, he synchronized his sucking to the tempo of me fucking his face.

I dug into his shoulders, massaging with a very firm hand. My fingers wandered down over the hills and plains of his lower back to his ass. Stretching to reach down further, I slipped my hand into his ass crack, prompting him to grunt and grind his face into my crotch.

He pulled his head from my dick and said with a raspy low voice, "Man, let's fuck."

I pressed a sweat-lubricated finger on his asshole. After a moment of worming my finger around, I felt his hole loosen to admit me. I pushed in slowly as I felt him relax in abrupt stages.

He broke our tight embrace and turned around, offering his ass to me as he leaned on the boulder. Looking over his muscular shoulder, he watched me step up to his bare ass and position my now painfully hard cock. Coating his hole and my penis with about all the spit I could generate, I pushed steadily against him. I focused pressure on his asshole, feeling my dick buckle slightly, encountering a moment of resistance followed by a sudden slide and then hot tightness. With another push, I slid in another inch. The knotted muscles of Shawn's back began to tighten and bulge. I slid in another inch. Shawn's breathing quickened as he began to push back against me. With a sudden slide that had us both gasp, I was all the way in and I started to slowly grind my hips.

I leaned over him, my stomach spread over his lower back. I worked my thumbs hard into the thick corded muscles between his shoulder blades. Shawn bent his head back with his mouth wide in an animalistic snarl. On cue, I pulled way out and began long deep thrusts. I reached up to his face and roughly massaged his jaw and stroked his beard.

He would tighten his hole as I pulled outward and loosen it only after forcing me to meet resistance when pushing inward. I could feel the tight ring at the opening grab and pull at my dick as if trying to hold me in. We exerted ourselves in perfect synchronization. The super sensitivity of my penis commandeered any awareness of my body. I could feel everything through my cock. I felt the shape of my own dick as it moved inside Shawn. I focused on the rim around my dick head as I pulled outward. Dragging it into the friction of Shawn's sphincter jolted me with an overload of too much stimulation. I answered the shock by reversing and pushing back into him. The overload subsided to a base buzz of pleasure fundamental to manhood, a sensation as ancient as the mountains. Each slide in brought a sensation akin to a pure musical note echoing through my body from my penis. Feeling the dense wiry hair of my crotch compress against him signaled another reversal and I would begin to draw outward and court the overload again.

I found myself looking alternately at Shawn's back and the spine of the mountain range that stretched a hundred miles south. I accelerated my thrusting as I looked at the snow fields on the north slopes of the taller peaks. I watched Shawn's hands as they gripped the boulder with the arched and callused fingers of an experienced rock climber. My heart pounded with the effort and thin air as the rhythms around me began to synchronize. The pace of my thrusting matched my breathing rate. Each drum beat of pleasure from my cock matched a similar surge from my lungs and chest muscles. Shawn's breathing joined the rhythm. My thigh muscles, burning from the morning's hike, also echoed the beat. Each thrust made my legs ache more than the previous one in a crescendo compatible with the growing waves of pleasure from my cock. My eyes moved again to the land, this time to the avalanche chutes stripped bare by the uncontrollable torrents of snow that periodically broke free from the peaks. I felt that power; I felt unstoppable.

I grabbed Shawn's braid near the root and pulled. Panting with the exertion, I shifted to a slower rhythm. Sweat dripped into my eyes and onto Shawn's tanned back. Deep within my groin I felt the sensation of a growing orgasm. I reached around Shawn's body and groped for his right nipple. Finding it, I rolled it roughly between my fingers as I felt his asshole grip suddenly hard.

"I'm cumming," he shouted as he bucked back against me.

He half stood up from the boulder, forcing me into an upright position as he arched cum into the air. His hole squeezed me hard as he tossed another wad of semen onto the dusty black lichen of the rock. Almost to the bursting point, I felt my cock-head swell with blood with each of his squeezes. After three powerful surges and numerous smaller ones he pressed back onto me. I grabbed either side of his hips and pulled him hard onto me for three or four more thrusts. Abruptly, he jerked forward causing me to gasp and pop out of him. Caught standing naked between the boulders with my penis rigidly pointing skyward, I felt as if I were made from same granite as the mountain. The contrast between the heat of being inside Shawn's body and the shocking coolness of the mountain air was like jumping into an icy mountain lake. I could not draw my breath. The tension in the muscles of my entire body held me locked to the ground. Whipping around and dropping to his knees Shawn positioned his face directly in front of my cock. He grabbed and tugged down on my balls as I stood poised on the brink of my orgasm.

It felt as if my balls had suddenly increased in weight and size by a factor of ten. Shawn tightened his grip almost painfully pushing me over the edge. The first surge sent a rope of cum onto his beard. I felt suspended in time as the second surge took forever to build. My eyes focused on the mountain range in the distance as the involuntary squeeze splattered Shawn's face with my thick white cum. I closed my eyes to shut out the mountains as spasm after spasm drained me.

Still dazed from the intensity of the orgasm, I watched Shawn stand up in front of me. I focused on his hairy face, toothy grin and the white splatters of me on him. Immediately, he turned and leapt to the top of the boulder that I had just fucked him against. Globes of my semen dripped from his beard onto his chest as he let out a yell and threw his fist in the air. His chest swelled as he drew a deep breath that appeared to pull energy from entire landscape. His grin exposed his teeth as he knelt and offered his arm down to me. Our hands locked to each other's wrists and he exerted his rock-climber muscles to assist me in scrambling up to him. He drew me into a bone-crushing hug. He rubbed his beard on mine and pressed his chest against me, effectively smearing us both with my semen. The strong odor of my cum on us had me pulling in deep deliberate breaths, while our lips met again.

After gently tonguing my lips and my beard and still panting from our efforts, he drew back and said, "I'm camped near the lake in the cirque just to the east."

"Yeah, I think I spotted your tent when my head was over the edge a half hour ago."

"Your pack looks full. I've got food enough for a week. Will you stay and climb with me?"

I pointed to a peak one drainage to the South. "That mountain is over eleven thousand feet. Tomorrow afternoon, you are fucking me on top of it."

Shawn grinned and moved his mouth to mine. We stood side by side, arm in arm. We surveyed the peak and began to scope out the following morning's climbing route.
