HARD DRIVE

Oh fuck me in the ass, man. Some goddamned fucking pervert must be jacking off in your computer holes because your database is gummed up. I whipped of a check for 34 bucks to your dick-hardening rag on Sept. 10th and got that cancelled mother-fucker back! Enclosed is a copy of both sides of that puppy.

Now, please stop mind-banging me and hit my malebox with them mags...so I can lovingly caress my stiff peter into whitewashing my fuckin' graybearded mug!

Dick, California

Yeah, you got it right. I grease up my cock and slide it right into a big, mother-fuckin' Macintosh computer named Fred, and bang that hard drive 'til I come.

Your subscription is in there. I poked it with my dick. So don't come crying to me if your mags show up sticky.

I DITCHED THE BITCH

One of the first things I did last week when my divorce became final was to visit a local adult bookstore. I had never seen your magazine before, and was amazed that there were so many others like me. I've been attracted to hairy, masculine men for as long as I can remember. I never even knew we had a special name. I guess I'm officially a bear now, but could you clear up one confusion for me? Exactly what is the difference between a bear and a cub? Should I assume that it's an obvious reference to age difference? Sorry to be so ignorant; I hope to meet some men soon who can help straighten me out (so to speak). As I begin this new phase of my life, rest assured that BEAR will be with me.

E.D., Arizona

A word to the wise, don't start out your new life by attaching a label to yourself.

As for the difference between a "cub" and a "bear," these labels can only be explained by those people who choose to wear them.

CIGARS, TATOOS AND BEARS ON MY

Your ship has changed course. Originally, when I first subscribed to your magazine, everybody wanted to borrow it; now they give it back to me. You have gone off on a tangent and I think you need to define 'bear.' I know all the old arguments I used to see in your forums, and I'm not saying that there can't be variety. But lately some of the images you portray are so kinky, so scary, that they don't appeal to middle of the road at all.

I don't think you've ever decided what a bear is. The archetypal bear that comes to mind when someone

THE WITKE WIRE

On a recent wintry road trip to Portland, Maine, I found myself gazing at the burly, flannel-clad and bearded local men and wondering how I could turn their existence into a topic of discussion for a men-in-media column. Then I hit on an angle: I'd start with the half dozen guys who were hanging around the video peep room in the local adult bookstore. They were hairy men with bulging crotches (some in well-worn jeans; a memorable daddy in Celtics sweats) and a palpable hunger in their eyes.

You could practically taste their desire to translate the smutty fantasies on the TV monitors and in their dirty minds into personal realities. Or, anyway, I could practically taste it. I told myself that it was that interaction between the electronic images and the blood-engorged organs of the guys in the back room that made this a media event, indeed. That was when I realized I had gone around the bend.

Okay, it's time to admit my powerlessness over the hunt for hot male images in every medium. It's a sort of Visual Addiction. Perhaps you, like me, have managed to collect hours and hours of video tape snippets from hundreds of sources of hairy chests and handsome (however you define that) bearded men and you're wondering, "Have I gone off the deep end? Am I Visually Addicted?" Well, with the following guidelines based clearly upon my own pathology, let me help you decide.

You know you're Visually Addicted when:

- Those three little words "Starring Robert Conrad" are enough to get your heart pumping as you race around looking for a blank videotape. And besides those furry-chest-bearing classics TV series Wild, Wild West and Blacksheep Squadron (née Baa Baa Blacksheep), Conrad is forever turning up in made-for-TV movies. Many resurface regularly on cable channels. HBO recently unearthed "Police Story: Gladiator School," which was way too short on the bared flesh because of Conrad's desire to camouflage his appealing pot belly. There is a t-shirt changing scene that is enhanced by the slo-mo button, however.

- At recent movie releases like Hero or Jennifer 8 you want to punch somebody or something because the directors of both films refuse to give you a fully uncovered look at Andy Garcia's chest hair (or more). Well, you can always go back to The Godfather III.

- You're fed up with Roseanne Arnold's husband Tom telling interviewers that gay men wouldn't be attracted to him because of his girth (he really said this in an ADVOCATE interview). Wrong, Tom. And after seeing your Annie Leibovitz photospread with Roseanne in VANITY FAIR, I know many a man who would love to wallow in the mud with you.

Until we get our fantasy, however, we have "The Jackie Thomas Show," Tom's "Buffalo Bill"-like new series that co-stars fuzzy-faced Dennis Boutsikaris, star of last year's ill-fated "Stat." Although ABC is hoping Big Tom will be the network's new "Roseanne," he's really shaping up to be the new AL.

- You wish your friends would understand that you have to cancel plans with them because they conflict with World Championship Wrestling's "Clash of the Champions" live broadcast. What if somebody yanks down Arn Anderson's almost-see-through white trunks and you miss it? Plus, they're branching out into arm wrestling, which only encourages your burgeoning furry forearm fetish.

- You develop unrequited crushes on men who send in photos of themselves to non-mainstream mags like the one in your hand. Men like Carl, says the word is Ed Asner. He's beefy, hairy, cuddly, gentle, cute and rugged. Robin Williams is becoming a fine bear, Alec Baldwin will be a bear. Piercing, scat, piss, tattoos, cigars, obesity, smoothness and facial hair only are turn-offs. Those interests are already served in other periodicals.

Bear stories could be about what bears do; bear hugs, bear wrestling. "Country Boy in the Hills" was good, but bears shouldn't be portrayed as oafish, uneducated hicks. I resent that.

J.B., Michigan

BEAR has always been a little raunchy, and it always will be. For some of us, that's half the attraction. If it's not for you, that's OK. Skip those parts (and you might want to stay out of pages 13-16 of this issue...sounds like you won't care for 'em). We open the shop here each and every morning to put out something that different men can relate to differently. We work hard for it. I hope you can find something in these 72 pages that appeals to you.

BEAR was started because we were sick of labels and categories. We still are. BEAR is about believable, good-looking men, their sex and the men they lust. It gives us plenty of room to play.

DEAR MR. DIBELKA

Studies show that over 80% of people interested in SM and other forms of degrading sex were abused as children. Further studies show most abuse happens in the home by family members. In light of this, your column in BEAR 21 about the child abuse of a movie star's son does a great disservice to your readers.

Read your own words:

"...There's a lot in this book about spouse abuse, child abuse, drunkenness and stuff, you know—the usual. It's all served up like it's going to change my mind,...or, at the very least, win my sympathy for what a hard life the kid has had. Know what? I don't care." You have just said that child abuse is "the usual" and you "don't care."

"Every word in this book may be true. In fact it probably is: the guy who wrote it sounds like a sniveling, shiftless so-and-so..." "If it is true....Whatever the truth is...." You are doubting and slandering the victim.

"...but there has got to be more to anyone's life than lying in the street sucking your thumb and pointing your finger at your man's dirty laundry." Again, the message here is "don't tell."

You are angry at victims who tell. You are a repressed victim yourself, unable to tell what happened to you and hating those who have. Do you believe rape victims should keep quiet and not tell? Do you believe a problem as large as child abuse will get better without discussion? Do you believe gays are gaining their power by keeping out of sight? To prove my point, "no, but..." is currently running through your brain. There is no "but" to these issues. To save yourself, your brain is currently trying to defend an undefendable position. Your words say you don't care, don't believe, and don't want to hear from victims. Victims should just shut up and get on with their lives. Yet, when confronted (as I am doing), you will reverse course and blame me for taking your little column too seriously. You will attack me because I am getting too close to your truth.

You are right, everyone has the personal choice of what to read or do. Just as it is your choice to beat off to a man you know abused his children and spouse, and to call him "daddy," I have a choice to get on with my life who appears on page 34 of the CHIRON RISING CLASSICS Magazine, Fall-Winter '92-'93 issue. CHIRON RISING bills itself as being for "the seasoned" gay man. Carl's seasonings look mighty tasty.

• You linger way, way too long in the Country & Western section of your favorite music outlet. You find yourself thinking, "Garth Brooks looks mighty striking with that stubble beard on the cover of his Christmas release, 'Beyond the Season.'"

Then you notice Brooks' label mate Chris LeDoux, and you think about how the chest hair he exposes on the cover of his latest release, "Watcha Gonna Do With a Cowboy" gives you about a hundred different possible ideas for an answer. Then you dig further back into his section and find his 1981 album, "Old Cowboy Heroes," on which he sports a full and enticing beard and your ideas get even dirtier.

After that you notice that Clint Black is getting hairier as he gets older, looking fuzzier than ever on the cover of his latest, "The Hard Way." You think, "That guy's gonna be a real heartbreaker when he's 40."

You discover somebody you never heard of before, Martin Delray (who records for Atlantic) and you think, "With that gorgeous straight long hair and full beard and much less clothing, this guy'd be perfect for HIPPIE DICK." Eventually you realize you have to leave the Country & Western section of your favorite music outlet before you spunk a load right there in your jeans.

• You consider Ted Turner a national hero, and not because he looked great on the Emmys with his snow white beard. No, it's because his cable stations regularly feature such fare as "The Sean Connery 007 Marathon" and "Sam Elliot Week." Head of TBS, TNT, TTT, whatever, Turner is a real fan of wild and woolly actors and our viewing lives are all the richer for it.

• You really dig the illustrations of the big-bellied bearded boys in page 132 of "The New Joy of Gay Sex" (HarperCollins) that goes along with the entry called "Nibbling and Biting." Unfortunately, you could do without most of the text.

• You like it when Dan Rather goes on location to some warm climate for the "CBS Evening News" because it means he'll wear that nifty safari jacket and leave many, many buttons of his shirt wide open, exposing his dark mat of chest hair.

• You gasp when you recognize Billy Bob Thornton of "Hearts Afire" (see Wittke Wire, BEAR 22) on the cover of the video release of "One False Move," a hyper-violent thriller that got raves in many "serious" film columns.

• You find yourself scouring TV listings for any football games played in warm climates—the better to see those beefy, hairy forearms—even though you've never cared much for the game before.

Before you know it, you've backed into the high stakes world of sports card collecting. You've become particularly obsessed with Topps' Proline Football series from 1991, which for all intents and purposes should have been subtitled "The Mapplethorpe Series." Hunt down some of these babies and you'll be delighted by the candid shots of big ball players stripped to the waist, chest hair glistening with sweat. Look for the cards of Bear Chris Zorich, Lion Reggie Barrett, Cowboy Troy Aikman and Packer Brian Noble.

• Or, you don't do any of these things and maybe it's just me.

and become a healthy adult capable of forming lasting, loving relationships. I have a problem with people like you who tell victims to "shut up and take it," and "gee, you probably asked for it and enjoyed it anyway." My advice to you is simple: Either exorcise your own demons, or shut up and limit your own brutality to yourself.

Consider yourself outed,

J.A., Illinois

John S. Dibelka responds:

Mr. A. has made some valid points. Unfortunately, he has also missed the point I made in the article. I believe very strongly in victims' rights—the most important of which is the right we all have to stop being victims. Counseling helps. Attempts at revenge merely perpetuate the cycle.

CRUSIN' THE COURTS

Just wanted to share an adventure with you while recently doing my civic duty. It started out as another jury selection, but we knew it was going to be sticky when it took two full days to pick 12 jurors. I really had better things to do. Of course, I was picked. It was a trucking company vs. a railroad vs. Jehovah's Witnesses. Confusing? Yeah, it was...and real nasty.

It wasn't until the second day of the trial that I was stimulated. They began bringing in the witnesses: We're talking big, burly truck drivers, railroad engineers and construction workers. It was a testimony of the bear pack, as far as I was concerned! I squirmed and wiggled in my seat enough to catch the eye of the judge as I stared at hairy arms, chests, thickly bearded faces, big butts and bulging boxes. I couldn't bring a camera into court, so I just pawed my pecker each night I went home. Since I was the only bearded-faded 501-leather boot-excited juror, they stared directly at me throughout their testimony and cross examination. Apparently the clean-shaven, suit-wearing men didn't matter!

The judge strictly instructed us not to talk to or discuss things with anyone involved in the trial. He didn't say anything about cruising. During recesses I'd go to the restroom and drop a few business cards on the floor while a few were pissing. One morning I saw these massive bears hanging around the toilet entrance. When I came out I was sportin' a boner and a couple of them looked at me and smiled. Woof!

Well, in this case there was justice after all...for me, spending five days listening to the bears talk about their jobs, duties and a few adventures on the road. I'll let you know about any follow-ups on the old business card trick.

Scott Baker, MUDMEN Magazine
Well, there you go, Scott. Testimony that even the most hopeless tasks can be overcome with a little lust and visual stimuli. You must've been in hog heaven. As a juror, you should have demanded more graphic evidence—taste, smell and the size of the weapon are all admissible in a court of law. Do you think I can have as much fun when I stand in line to get my driver license renewed?

A THEOLOGICAL VIEW

Complements on your printing the letter

A CHANGE OF HEART by E.O. of Warrensburg, MO, requesting his subscription be stopped because he started studying the Bible with the Jehovah's Witnesses. I found it wonderful that you printed the letter and your response was the only possible answer, simple and perfect. I find it sad though, that someone will look at only one interpretation of the Bible and take it as fact. I feel that E. O. missed the point.
What is significant to the passages he mentioned are acts that are natural. If someone is naturally heterosexual then, yes, gay acts would be unnatural. The same holds true for gays. If you're naturally gay, then be gay.

Paul was warning the Christians of the local Gentile practices associated with idolatry. Some of these practices included relations with temple prosti-tutes (male and female) and these relations were expected to be performed no matter what your natural orientation was. So, it's obvious that the homosexual act resulted from idolatry and is considerably different from the loving, responsible gay relationships today.

As for E. O., I can only echo your response. I, too, wish him the best of luck. I hope he finds his happiness.
And, yes, if he does change his mind (and I hope it's with further knowledge and not out of disgust) we'll still be here. We're here. We're queer. And I know God loves us. The Bible, my heart and God tells me so.

We get a lot of you guys tellin' us that your fantasy is to run into a big ol' bear in the middle of the woods. So we took our cameras and went on a hunt for a shoot. We were able to observe these boys in their natural habitat and bagged some photos for you to see.

Our big bear in the woods is Chaz. He stands about 6'5" and weighs about 200lbs. He's originally from Colorado and has been prowlin' the States over the years lookin' for a cub and a place to hibernate. He says he likes to fuck a nice asshole and fantasizes about gettin' down to it on a boat in the middle of the ocean.

Our cub's name is Joey, from Kentucky. He's 5'11" and weighs about 165lbs. He says he likes big furry bears who are into everything. When we asked him what his favorite fantasy would be he said "I want to have sex with a guard in a jail cell, with Chaz as the guard."

by T.C.

This is for all of the Bro's out there who, like me, wake up in the morning with a fucking rock hard dick and nothing to sink it into, and no other way to get rid of it except the usual morning stroke or settling for standing in front of the shower and taking a piss 'cause you can't bend it down to hit the shitter. I know there are all kinds of shit on the market to fuck your dick, and for a tidy price, too. But I still have to lay on my back and use my hand. Don't get me wrong, I love jacking off. But sometimes I'm just too lazy or tired or bored with the same old thing, and I really like the feel of someone under me and the feel of fucking something that the motion of my hips moving back and forth gives me. It works great rolled up in a pillow, sleeping bag or whatever feels good to hump. I have even mounted it in an old 5-gallon can and attached it to the tailgate of my truck as shown in my illustration. I think the best was taping it to the seat of my bike. When the sun heated it up I grabbed the grips, slid my dick in and—oooh baby!

MATERIALS

1. A plastic jar that's longer and bigger around than your hard dick. An old shampoo bottle will work. I use an old Baby Wipe jar; a used 28 oz. peanut butter jar will work, too.
2. A sheet of thin rubber, latex, etc. An old innertube works good. I use part of an old wet suit with the smooth side in.
3. Any kind of glue that will adhere to the materials you're using. Hot glue guns are great and sometimes work the best.
4. A bottle of cheap vegetable oil or Crisco
5. A shredded cotton T-shirt, or shredded foam rubber.

STEPS:

- A Cut a hole in the bottom of your jar big enough to put your hard dick through without scraping the edges.
- B Take the piece of rubber and fold it in half around your hard-on, leaving an extra 4" overhang. Mark it and glue it together, so it forms a long tube, but don't glue the last 2" of it. (Figure A)
- C Cut the excess from the side, leaving the extra 2" at the end intact.
- D Make three 1-3/4" cuts at the open end of the tube. Do not make a cut along the glued seam of the tube, or it will eventually split open. (Figure B)
- E Glue the extra 2" of rubber at the sealed end of the tube you just made to the lid of the jar, positioning it so that the tube is pretty much in the center. Let it dry. Screw the lid back onto the top of the jar tightly. Now pull the open end of the tube through the hole in the bottom of the jar and stuff the jar all around the tube with the shreds of foam or fabric, about 3/4 or more full. When this is done, carefully fill the rest of the jar to the brim with oil or Crisco.
- F Clean off any excess oil, and glue the tube and the three flaps to the surface of the jar to form a seal so that none of the oil will leak out the ends. (Figure C)

When the glue has dried, it's ready to fuck. All you have to do is grease your dick and slide it in. Use your imagination as to how you want to use it, and what you think would feel the best to mount it in or on.

Bull's Pride and Joy

By Mike Jones

I awoke, flat on my back with one bad-ass headache. I didn't know where I was. When I tried to sit up, I nearly shouted in pain. I looked down and saw my right leg was in a splint.

I lay back down and looked around the bedroom. I guessed by the look of the walls that I was in a log cabin. The room was decorated Early American. Large, fresh-smelling quilts covered me and an oil lamp was near my head on a small walnut stand that stood next to the bed. Lace curtains covered expansive windows and allowed the cold November sun to shine brightly onto the circular rug on the floor. I saw a bookshelf hanging on the wall opposite me lined with what must have been every Stephen King hardcover book ever published.

Being an impatient and curious man, I called out loudly, "Hey! Anybody here?"

"One minute," a male voice called from somewhere outside the room. A few minutes later I heard heavy footfall approaching the room.

A large barefoot man strode confidently into the room. Probably six-foot-four and heavily muscled. Arms as wide as my thighs and a broad chest strained a red and blue flannel shirt. I noticed his waist was small and I remember thinking that his stomach was probably rippled with washboard slabs of meat.

"How ya' feelin'?" he asked with a crooked smile, briskly drying his large hands on a colorful dishtowel. As he drew closer, I noticed he had a head the size of a bull. He smelled like wheat, and it quickly dominated the room. His hands and thick forearms were covered with black hair.

"I don't feel so good," I said. "You don't know what might have happened to me. Do you?"

"Well," he laughed lightly, "I might be able to tell you something. I pulled you from a wrecked car 'bout a quarter mile down Harris road two days ago. You was reekin' of alcohol. Does that paint a clear enough picture for ya'?"

"Yeah, I guess it does." A blur of a memory raced through my mind. It wasn't pleasant. I decided not to think about it, and instead focused on the man standing at my side.

I saw what a dark man he was, with a thick black beard and moustache and a full head of short, curly black hair. Darkly tanned. "My leg..." I said, looking down at my splinted leg.

"That was easy. I'm the local vet, just like my daddy before me. I'm the one who set the leg and splinted it for ya'."

"Who are you?" I asked.

"My real name is Butch, believe it or not. Butch Deal, but everybody just calls me Bull."

"Yeah, I'll bet they do," I said, feeling myself falling helplessly, swiftly into a deep, peaceful sleep.

I was able to get out of bed after a few days with the aid of some crutches Bull made for me. He was extremely attentive, kind and patient. He cooked meals for me, tended to my leg and always kept me entertained. He was also so breathtaking and masculine that I was beginning to get very distracted. I couldn't tell if his interest was in me, or as he was a vet, for all creatures in need. I was grateful for his hospitality, and didn't want to wind up back in another ditch by making a wrong move. But sharing his living space was making me crazy. I couldn't take my eyes off him.

Someone would occasionally bring a goat or dog by and Bull would take them out to the barn he had converted into an animal hospital. He said he had done the conversion of the barn himself.

"I don't enjoy farming," he had told me earlier, "so I took up where my daddy left off. Everybody trusts the Deals around here. I make enough taking care of animals to keep myself supplied with the necessities of life." He smiled that crooked grin. "And a few pleasures like reading and a great video and CD collection."

"Out here, miles from anywhere?" I asked, staring at the thick tuft of black hair jutting out the top of his flannel.

"One of the greatest boons to mankind is the mail-order catalog."

"Now that you're up and around," he said, after I'd been imposing on him for two weeks total, "I think I should show you my pride and joy." He hesitated, then smiled, weakly. "Now that your wings have been mended, you'll be wantin' to fly your nest."

My heart skipped a beat, I had been regretting this day almost from the beginning. I had quickly fallen into the slow pleasantness of this place. "Being a free-lance writer in a big city ain't nothin' to look forward to goin' back to, really," I said, and at once regretted saying it.

He smiled and lowered his shaggy, bull's head. "C'mon, you'll love this."

I proceeded slowly as we made our way outside into the crisp, snowless January afternoon. The sharp breeze cut through our clothes.

On the left side of the house was the large barn where he had his animal hospital. We went in the opposite direction. We stepped off his front porch onto a wooden sidewalk that let to a long, low flat building.

"What is this?" I asked. "We won't be able to even stand up in that thing." It looked like a long railroad car that had been buried in the ground till only the top half was above ground.

"I have this place inspected once a year by the government," Bull said.

"A building inspector?"

"Hell, no," he said, laughing. "I built this place, so it's solid. It'll be here a long time after I'm gone. No, he inspects what's inside."

We had reached the low building. Bull unlocked the door and we entered the dark room. He snapped on a switch and light flooded the room. It looked like a locker or gym room you'd expect to find in any high school.

"There are some lockers over there," he said, pointing. "Bring lots of towels with you and one of the robes. I'll go inside and turn the lights on. Come on in when you're ready." He left.

I took my clothes off (with some difficulty because of the healing leg). I neatly folded my socks, pants and shirt and stacked them on one of the four wooden benches set around the room. I checked several of the lockers. Each had, neatly stacked and folded, a short terry cloth robe with ropes through the loops around the waist to tie it off, and three folded towels.

I put on a robe and tied it off and brought a stack of towels with me as I pushed open the swinging doors.

I walked into a large room of gray stone. The temperature was the same as a steam room.

"Wow," I said. It was a cave. He had built the changing room as a front to the cave. Set in the floor were three large irregularly shaped (mostly rectangular) pools. Out of the farthest wall poured a steady flow of hot water.

"Can you believe it? he said with pride at last. He had given me ample time to take it all in. "A natural hot spring."

"It's fantastic!" I exclaimed.

"I've asked the government to inspect it every year. I wanna make sure it's pure, and sure enough, each year it passes the test. It's rich, healthy mineral water that springs up from somewhere deep in the earth." He began pulling his boots off. "The hottest pool is the first one." He seemed oblivious to my examination of him as he peeled out of his snug flannel. It looked like someone had spray-painted his chest solid black, ripped with what looked like rock-hard muscle and dense with short, curly black hairs. "The first one measures about 110 degrees. You have to work your tolerance up for that one. By the time it fills the second one, it's down to about 90. You can probably take this although it's pretty hot. The last one, over there where you're standing now, is about as hot as a warm bath.

This place was incredible. He had built a shower to my left that I'm sure took the full advantage of this naturally-heated environment. There was a bench in front of each pool.

I saw him pull his socks off. He threw them carelessly off to the side. I hungrily observed that the tops of his feet were covered with black hair. He had large feet with short chubby toes. He swiftly strode over to me. "Let me help you in. I forgot; you ain't properly healed, yet." He lifted me, easily, under the arms, after I had gingerly set myself down near the edge of the pool, and helped me slowly slide into the pool until I could support myself on the rock's edge with my arms.

"There. You're in," he said. "I seldom take showers in the house. I usually prefer to let nature bathe me. You'll like this middle one; it's good for healing bones, I think."

I turned my back to him and scrutinized the middle pool. It was tingling on my skin but I felt that I could get used to it.

I heard him unsnap his pants very close behind me, followed by the crisp zip of his zipper. I turned back and watched him. He was kicking off his jeans. Boxer shorts. His legs were thick, hard and tanned and black because of the abundance of curly black hair. He pulled his shorts off and kicked them off to the side. His fat tube hung down from a thick thatch of pubic hair. His furry nuts were bull-sized.

I gulped hard and fought the temptation to comment on his appearance, as I am prone to do. A giant; extremely hairy; huge hairy feet; large beefy hands, and a body that wouldn't quit to boot.

I made a move to the back of the rectangular pool as he approached to make room for this big man.

"No, don't move," he said. "I won't fall on you. I've been thinkin' of puttin' some ladders in these pools for old men like me."

"You don't look a day over forty," I said, perhaps too quickly.

"I'm forty-five...and thanks." He sat on the edge of the gray stone pool and swirled his feet around playfully in the steamy water. I got brave and ran both of my hands over the arches of his big feet. I could feel the coarse hair under my fingers.

His eyes positively glowed at me as he slipped gracefully into the water. He certainly was not showing his age anywhere inside or outside this monstrous body of his.

He stood before me in all his sweaty, hairy glory. A large drop of sweat was poised on one of his large dark brown nipples. I watched it fall and disappear into the steaming water.

"This is great," I said.

"Very erotic," he gently whispered.

"That too," I ran a hand slowly over his furry chest, then put the tips of my fingers in my mouth. His salty sweat made me heady; I felt it all the way down to my nuts. "Boy, that tastes sweet," I said.

He disappeared below the surface and an instant later broke through the pool, marvelously wet and sensuously hot. The steamy water had curved his moustache into a devilish grin.

I placed my hand on his chest again and felt his heart pounding fiercely. I looked way up into his kind, gentle, handsome face. He seemed to be a foot taller than me.

"Man, I want you so bad," he said, his voice thick and raspy with heartfelt lust. "You don't know how hard it was to sponge bathe you, or lower you into a tub, or change your clothes, and not let on how crazy I was gettin' for ya'."

"Me?" I asked, incredulous, pulling back. He jerked me back to him. "Hey, I ain't nobody, but look at you. You're a huge monster!"

"You're wrong." His face became sober. "Hey I gotta take a piss." He ran a beefy hand down my back and smiled a smile that covered my whole field of vision. "Promise me you won't go nowhere till I get back?"

"I got a better idea. Can you kneel on the rim of the pool and let me bury my face in that hairy crotch of yours?"

"I dunno," he said, frowning. "I pissed ON a few guys in my time, but never IN 'em, ya' know?"

"Give it a try," I said. I could feel myself beginning to tremble all over. Please don't let us get interrupted while we're doing this, I was thinking.

He jumped out expertly and spun around and sat on the edge of the pool in one fluid movement. "Old man, my ass," I said, watching him grin at me. "You're as spry as a panther."

"Yeah," he said, turning and kneeling on his thick knees.

"Man, I gotta piss three gallons."

"I won't waste a drop, I promise," I said with conviction.

I wrapped my arms around his hot, hairy legs, letting my fingers rest just below his bulbous, furry ass. I buried my face between his legs, feeling his hard-knotted belly trembling at the top of my head. My face was surrounded by his huge, wet thighs; my mouth was firmly pressed to his dripping wet, ample bush, my tongue playfully probing the thatch of black hair.

"I don't know if I can piss in your—uh-oh, here it comes. Oh, yeah."

I sucked his fat cock over onto the top of my tongue.

"Oh, man, do I gotta piss," he said, groaning.

I tasted the first few tentative drops, then the floodgate burst open. His iron-strong palms found the back of my head as his piss swiftly filled my hungry mouth. He was pushing my head up to the root of his cock as he flooded me with his sweet-tasting piss. I greedily gulped it down, moaning in my pleasure.

"I can feel you moanin' through my dick. You got about a gallon to go, bud."

I moaned to show my pleasure again. I slurped and drank the hot piss that seemed to flow endlessly. I felt for my dick under the water and discovered that even in this heated water I was getting a raging hard-on.

I'm sure he drained his bladder for two solid minutes before the supply slowed down at all. When he was finished and I had probed his piss hole to get every drop, I asked him, "Do you always piss that much?"

"Yeah, I drink so much soda and I usually wait till the last minute to go."

"The soda probably accounts for the sweet taste of your piss. I could do that all the time," I said. "I'd love to eat your squeaky-clean ass out right now."

"You would?" he asked, his eyes widening.

"Yeah. Get face-down on this bench."

The monster stood, his hardening dick standing straight out in front of him; probably eight inches, and still getting harder. His chubby toes extended over the rim of the pool, winking at me. I did not resist the temptation to kiss each big one.

His big feet slapped noisily on the wet stone as he padded over to the bench. After some effort and much grunting, I managed to get out of the pool and hobble over to him.

"Yeah, lay on your stomach, Bull. I wanna eat that hairy ass." Near the bench I found his socks and scooped them up in passing.

"I ain't never had no body eat my ass before."

"You won't be the same after your first time, either, buddy," I promised. I pressed the moist socks to my nose and sniffed them. They were ripe with one-hundred percent mansmell; a thick, heady odor. Thinking of those huge, hairy feet snug in them a few minutes earlier made me crazy.

I ran my hand over the impossibly hairy firm butt. I slowly spread the cheeks and saw (among the tufts of we, black hair), that sweet, puckered hole.

"You ready?" I asked.

"Yeah, I'm all yours."

"I was hoping you'd say somethin' like that," I said.

I lay the socks across his ass so that when I was licking his ass I would be buried in the thick pungent perfume of this hairy gorilla's feet. I slowly kneeled between his legs as they hung off the back of the bench, minding my leg, and put my tongue to the pink hole and the rest was magic. The pleasure it caused both of us crawled in a kind of slow motion. I tenderly caressed his hairy butt as I probed his hole, burying my face in the warm socks, deliberately snufflin the moist socks and inhaling the strong smell, feeling its effect in my thickening dick.

He groaned and pushed the clean, wet hole into my face, and wriggled under my slow, graceful touch.

I ran my tongue over the butt and kissed each furry cheek. I crammed one smelly sock in my mouth and sucked on the salty sweat in it. I took out the sock and ate some more of his clean ass, all the while being covered in the rich, sweet scent of his damp sock.

He gripped the bench and it creaked as he tried to tear it apart in his ecstasy, his muscular arms bursting to a nearly impossible size.

I probed my tongue in his hole and rubbed his strong thighs and gently bit one of his cheeks. I inhaled deeply on the stinking socks and could feel my dick rising to the occasion.

He looked back at me and asked me to make loud slurping noises as I got his ass all sloppy. I did. I ate his ass as I never ate anyone's before. I slurped and made rude noises as I wet it up.

"I'm gonna stand up and jack off. Would you eat my ass as I do that?" he asked.

"Why don't you kneel over my face and I'll eat your ass as we both jack off."

"Yeah, that sounds even better."

I lay down on my back on the stone floor and watched him lower himself gently over my face. He was a tall man, so he was able to easily kneel over my chest without suffocating me. I was careful to let him see me using his socks now as I put them over my nose and prepared to eat his ass and smell his feet at the same time. He didn't bat an eye as he saw me sniffing those rich, sweet-smelling sock. I pulled his hairy ass to my mouth by using both of my hungry hands to drag his cheeks down to my lips and buried my face in that firm, huge ass. I noisily slurped away as I felt the jerking movements of him pounding his long, fat dick above me. I drew in thick lungfuls of his pungent socks as I began pulling on my dick. I was thoroughly enjoying the clean taste of this man's huge, hairy ass. He sat a little lower on my face by instinct and I was able to probe deeper into the tight hole with my firm tongue. I moaned with joy. He sat harder on my face and locked his socks over my nostrils. I gulped huge drafts of the smelly socks, groaning at the same time. I was driven close to orgasm then. He was jerking off hard, and beginning to breathe heavily.

"Oh, man, that feels—oh, yeah. Yeah, eat that ass; I can't hold off this cum-shower much longer," Bull said, his voice getting excited with pre-cum ecstasy. He slapped my belly hard with his heavy log.

I took my tongue out of his ass for a moment and told him, "Oh, man, that is too much! Here it comes!" My dick was gonna pop and I think I was just beginning to shoot as I felt his quart of hot cum splatter my dick and hand. Again I drank in huge drafts of his smelly socks, reveling in them, as I loudly slurped his ass. His hot lubricant made me cum faster and I drove my tongue deeper into that sweet ass as my cum overloaded on my hand and he kept pumping shot after shot all over my dick. He was still breathing hard as I age his ass and he was shooting his orgasm all over my dick. I slowed my eager eating after a few minutes. I think we were just enjoying each other's company so much that we never noticed we had stopped cumming or even cared.

"Man," he began. "We'll have to do that again before you leave."

"Yeah," I said, putting the socks in my mouth again, sucking on them hungrily. He didn't seem to mind.

Get Used To It

How do you define yourself? Are you Politically Correct?

What words do you use to refer to yourself so the people you're talking to know more about you? The question deserves a good thinking-about because the answers shape your life.

I call myself a writer; a student; a man and a loner. I label myself an American (not just by birth - I vote) and a Californian (ditto). You might say I'm romantic and a pragmatist by turns.

When the topic is sexual orientation, much more often than not I tell people I'm queer.

Not too long ago a gay writer I know wrote me to tell me I shouldn't do that. "I was very disappointed," he said, "to see that you used the word 'queer' because the casual use of the word offends me very much."

Now here we have something to think about.

I do not use words casually. Ever. Neither does he. His decision to use "disappointed" intrigued me. I might have said we disagreed but by saying he was disappointed he told me he expected me to act a certain way and felt I had harmed him somehow when I didn't. I didn't harm him. He chose to be harmed. People who try to make me responsible for what they feel don't often get what they want.

Of course, almost everyone has trigger words—things we would rather not hear for some personal reason—and I can respect that. Had he left it there I would have agreed not to call myself queer in his presence and we would have gotten on fine.

Unfortunately, he didn't.

"As much as I don't like... 'gay' to describe homosexuals," he went on, "it was an inoffensive word that was agreed upon in the Stonewall Riots days..."

Once again, these words are carefully chosen and carefully emphasized. I assume he means either that it's bad to be offensive when you're fighting for your rights (as though screaming drag queens pelting policemen with six-inch stiletto pumps weren't trying to offend them), or that the past twenty years have been wasted because everything we happy little boys and girls really needed was secured for us back in 1969.

We two disagree strongly on both of these counts, but that's what makes intercourse fun.

"Is it okay for straight people to use the word [queer] on gay people?" he asked, in a tone that made quite clear he thinks that it isn't.

Well, why not? Many do anyway, meaning all kinds of odd things when they say it. Do we really have the power to stop them?

I'd say I'd like to see him try (what is he going to do—wash their mouths out with soap?) but I'd really much rather see him spend his time and almost boundless energy working on something important.

On the other hand, he says we shouldn't try to "reclaim" words—rob them of their power to hurt us by using them ourselves—because "bigots will always come up with even more hate words if we reclaim them all."

In part, I agree with him there. The bigots most probably will. But this raises the question: So what? Some things in life never change. This doesn't mean I should just curl up and die. The fact some people want to hurt me doesn't oblige me to let them succeed.

In fact, I get a perverse sort of pleasure out of reclaiming words, partly because it's fun to take toys away from bullies (it almost always makes them cry) but mostly because it helps me remember how happy I am to be what, and who, I am. Why should I be angry at some poor slob who calls me a queer to my face? That person speaks the truth, and the truth, as they say, sets us free. People who think they can hurt me that way probably need a few moments of freedom. I'm happy to let them enjoy them.

Unless I'm in a Pee-wee Herman mood. Then I just smile and say, "I know I am, but what are you?" Amazing, how few people know how to answer that.

Because the man who wrote this letter once had my respect, he surprised me by proving his determination to let other people's attitudes run (and, apparently, ruin) his life. And he still hadn't finished.

"Why is it so odd," he asked, "that gay-bashing in America had never arose [sic] to such a vast degree until 1990, the year that Queer Nation... was formed?"

I'm not sure I understand this question, but I am sure I can't answer it without asking some of my own.

How complete are his data? Is queer-bashing really on the rise, or are those getting bashed finally finding the courage and support to report the crimes and demand they be dealt with? Or might these both be factors, with the general stresses of overpopulation and a disintegrating society thrown in, for good measure? In a vacuum, statistics prove nothing.

That did not, however, stop him. He went on, "Why do I always get this gut feeling that a lot of the [Queer Nation] leaders aren't even gay at all?"

Why anyone normally careful with words would ask me this obvious question escapes me. They're not "gay" because they're "queer." And they're here. Get used to it.

But from there he continued, "I wouldn't be surprised if they were straight, or infiltrators from right-wing groups..."

Well, come to think of it, I wouldn't be surprised, either, about some of them. Every political apple has worms. But it's a good idea to remember, these days, it's possible to read too much into anything and "discover" connections that aren't really there. We call this process Perot-noia.

"I just cannot stand associating with people who do not question the world enough," he told me as he wound down from having implied I was some sort of spy, announced he would no longer welcome me in his home and told me he was "feeling extremely uncomfortable with continuing this correspondence."

By that time the feeling was mutual.

Oddly enough, he ended his letter and closed off our friendship by saying something with which I completely agree.

"Thank God," he wrote, "for the First Amendment, or people like me could never live decently as human beings."

I'm glad he understands that. I'd feel a lot better, though, if he understood that the First Amendment doesn't protect anyone unless it protects everyone—including, most importantly, those whose opinions don't mirror our own.

Anything—anything at all—short of that freedom is censorship, and in this country censorship—of any kind, by anyone—is about as politically incorrect as you can get.

Colorado's Civil Rights

I've been asked about the obnoxious ballot measure that passed in Colorado. Thanks be to the goddess that its counterpart in Oregon was defeated; bad as the one in Colorado is, it is not quite as bad as the proposed measure in Oregon; if we had to lose one of them I'd just as soon it had been Colorado.

In substance, the Colorado voters have enacted a measure that forbids state or local government to do anything pro-gay. That means that three local gay rights laws, in Denver, Aspen and Boulder, are now wiped off the books, as is an executive order by the governor forbidding discrimination in hiring by the state. It also precludes the Colorado legislature from enacting gay rights legislation at the state level.

In some ways this is not as bad as it sounds; in other ways it is worse. Let's start with the good news.

First, this new law only reaches conduct by the government. Private individuals and corporations are still free to be as pro-gay as they want. Gay businesses, including bars, will stay open; gay magazines should still be available on the newsstands; private companies that have adopted non-discrimination policies will be able to keep them. The only entities forbidden to be pro-gay are state and local governments.

Now for the bad news. My reading of the law is that state and local governments may do nothing pro-gay whatsoever. I'm not sure the Denver police department can provide crowd control for the annual gay pride parade; any mayoral proclamation of Gay Pride Day would certainly run afoul of the new law. Government doesn't even have the option of remaining neutral on the issue; it must take an anti-gay line no matter what.

As bad as that is, I expect two side effects which will be even worse. First, as a practical matter, there are many issues on which the government's power is limited to persuasion and setting a good (or bad) example. Anybody who wants to smoke crack will do so whether or not it is legal; it is the powerful symbolism that the state has come down against drug abuse that is the real purpose of the anti-crack law. Likewise, a business that is bound and determined to discriminate against gays, or any other group for that matter, will find a way regardless of what the law says; again, the main purpose of the law is that government has firmly and forcefully taken a position that discrimination is wrong and will not, if detected, be tolerated.

Among middle America, there is still enough respect for the state that many people take their moral cues from that source; there is a body of evidence that wide support for abortion rights is due in part to the respect that many people still have for the judicial system that put its stamp of approval on the practice. The fact is, a lot of people don't think for themselves and are perfectly happy to have their moral code set for them by society rather than come up with one of their own.

Thus, as gay people, we are now in the awkward position of having the state officially pronounce us unworthy of legal protection. That can't help but have a bearing on public perceptions.

The second side effect is the impact this will have on the political process. Leaving aside for a moment the fact that Colorado was close to passing a state gay rights bill, and now that can't happen, we simply must be able to credibly tell politicians that supporting us will not cost them among the voters. When they see a majority of the voters in a relatively liberal state come down as anti-gay, we lose our credibility on that issue. It's that simple. And of course, there is also the distinct possibility that the radical right, emboldened by its victory in Colorado, will try the same thing elsewhere.

Now for some more good news: I really don't expect this law to remain on the books very long. A court challenge has already been brought against it, and I am cautiously optimistic that our side will win. Under the Supremacy Clause of the US Constitution, any state law which violates the US Constitution is null and void. Under the 14th Amendment's Equal Protection Clause, government must provide equal protection to all unless it can articulate a rational basis for not doing so. Under a relatively recent Supreme Court case, prejudice is not a rational basis for discriminatory treatment. This is not a case where the government has refused to do nice things for us; it is rather a case where the government proposes to do nasty things to us. Before it can do that, it must articulate a rational basis for its conduct, and prejudice won't work. Neither will prejudice dressed as public morality.

The federal courts are divided into circuits, with the Court of Appeals for each circuit writing binding precedent for that circuit. Colorado has the advantage of being in the Tenth Circuit, whose courts are relatively pro-gay. The Tenth Circuit, for example, struck down an Oklahoma law which forbade public school teachers to say anything pro-gay to their students. The Tenth Circuit has before it an appeal from a Kansas court holding that it is unconstitutional to fire a government employee for being gay; I fully expect the Court of Appeals to side with the employee against the bigots.

The lawsuit which has been brought against this new Colorado law was brought in state court rather than in federal court, for the tactical reason that there are a lot of federal judges appointed by Reagan and Bush who are not likely to be pro-gay, even in the Tenth Circuit. Fortunately, the Colorado state courts are relatively liberal and I think we are even more likely to prevail there than we would in federal court; especially since Colorado state courts are likely to take their guidance on a federal constitutional question from the Tenth Circuit.

The state courts of Oregon and California have already held similar anti-gay legislation to be unconstitutional. Thus, on this issue I am really optimistic about prevailing.

Of course I would have preferred that the measure be defeated rather than gotten rid of after the fact. But I'll take what I can get.

In the meantime, now is the time to exercise some political and economic muscle by boycotting Colorado, and writing letters to state officials and letting them know why. Don't ski in Aspen; pro-gay Vermont has lots of lovely ski areas. If you are flying cross-country, don't take an airline that requires a change of planes in Denver.

I see the light at the end of the tunnel; I am comforted by the small margin by which this law passed. The future is before us, both the Constitution and history are on our side.

MAN TO MAN PERSONALS

ILLUSTRATION BY BILL WARD

THE RULES OF THE GAME

- 1. Replying to a BEAR™ Box Number. Write your letter, put it in an envelope and seal it. On this envelope, put the fella's box number IN PENCIL where you'd normally put a stamp. Put this letter along with $1 in a larger envelope and mail it to us. That's BEAR, 2215R Market Street #148, San Francisco, CA 94114. We always forward letters if you've done what's called for here. If you mess up, and particularly if you don't put your note inside another envelope, and/or don't include a buck, we throw your handiwork away.
- 2. Constructing your ad. When you write out your ad, keep this in mind: talk a bit about yourself and be real clear about the types of folks you'd like to meet through your ad. As much as possible, avoid telling us who you don't want to meet. No "no fats, no feds, or Lithuanians" shit. Be positive. And if you aren't, we edit the shit out of the ad and turn you into more of a Pollyanna than you'd care to be.
- 3. Using the phone. If you're calling someone, keep in mind (a) time zone differences—if you don't know them, look in the front of the White Pages in a phone book; and (b) that the guy on the other end may not be able to or may not want to talk to you at the time of your call.
- 4. Abusing the phone. Don't. Or we'll eliminate them from the ads.
- 5. Cost and duration. Personal ads are free if you're a BEAR BUDDY. Otherwise, they're $0.25/word/issue. Wanna change your ad? Send in $5. Wanna discontinue your ad? Write in and we'll pull it. You will have to pay to have a pulled ad put back in.
- 6. Deadline for classifieds. For issue #24 is February 14, 1993.
- 7. BEAR™ Box Numbers. Available to US subscribers. Free to BEAR Buddies, including Foreign Buddies. Otherwise, ad $5. A word to the wise: responses to your ad will be much greater using your own address versus ours.
- 8. Personal vs. commercial ads. You know as well as I do what a personal ad is and isn't.
- 9. We reserve the right to edit personals. This right is exercised for editorial consistency and for clarity almost exclusively.
- 10. We reserve the right to refuse any ad for any reason whatsoever.
- 11. Changing Your ad: It's cool. But it'll cost you 5 bucks, and must be in writing. Tell us which ad is yours, so we know which one to change.
- 12. Photo ads. We'll be able to run your picture only once—they're starting to become a popular way to get laid. Your photo must have a signed model release with it, and will be printed first-come, first-served.

FUCKIN' AROUND

We've got a pretty serious health crisis going on right now. Many of my friends and yours have died. And it's been proven that certain types of sexual activity have played a large role in the transmission of AIDS.

No one knows all the do's and don'ts regarding sane sexual activities in these times. However, I'm going to lay out my personal feelings regarding fucking around. How valid are they? Who knows. But they work for me and a man's got to do something.

1. Lead a healthy life. Get plenty of rest, exercise regularly, and eat a balanced diet, although a burger, fries and a milkshake every now and then won't kill you. See a doctor regularly for physicals.

2. Keep your teeth in good shape! Floss regularly (but several hours before sucking cock). Make certain that you're free of gum disease.

3. Assume that your sex partner(s) is carrying a life-threatening, sexually contracted disease. And if you're sexually active, assume the possibility exists for yourself. The selection of your sex partner and the activities that you engage in are YOUR choices and YOUR responsibility.

4. Don't be afraid to say no. Yeah, you're horny, but it's life or death, guy. Conversely, don't be afraid to go for it if you've got a clear mind and conscience.

5. Kiss, hug and spit to beat the band.

6. If your gums are in good shape and your partner's dick is in good shape, stick it in your mouth, if it appeals to you. I don't recommend taking someone's load in your mouth or in your ass, protected or not.

7. If you eat butt, you're probably not going to get a life-threatening disease by doing it. However, you could come away with hepatitis, amoebas and other nasties that will do a big number on your immune system. Weigh these possibilities before you take the plunge.

8. Butt fucking should be done with condoms and a water-soluble lube such as KY or Probe. Trojans have been known to leak like sieves. Shop around for a rubber you find comfortable, both on and in. Similarly, fisting should be done with latex gloves. Don't share dildos and all unless they are sterilized between use.

9. Number One and Number Two may be in the same category as butt eating as far as HIV transmission is concerned.

10. Watch your substance use. If you think you're too fucked up to be making decisions, don't fuck around. Remember, there's no Morning After Pill.

PAUL BARRESI

During the 70's when I was starting to realize that I was much more interested in men as opposed to girls, I was disappointed to find that all that was available to me in the local rags were smooth skinned boys. Paul Barresi was one of the exceptions to that rule. When the office found out that we were going to have him in the mag it was interesting to note that I wasn't the only one who grew up fantasizing about him. I was able to spend some time, with Paul, talking about his career and his life. I'm pleased to be able to share with you this intimate glimpse into the life of one of the legends of porn.

BEAR: You're one of the most popular stars in porn. How did you start out?

PAUL: It was after I did a film called Wild Party. The art director of Playgirl Magazine approached me and put me in the mag in 1974. My first porno film was a straight film called Co-Ed Fever. I was discovered shortly thereafter by John Summers who really helped to shape my career in gay porn. My first gay film was called "The Hungry Hole."

BEAR: You've done a lot of dirty movies. Which one was your favorite?

PAUL: Men of the Midway. The reason this film is my favorite is because I felt that I was living the part I was playing. It was a personal revelation to me that I was actually emulating my father. My brothers and I were beaten pretty regularly while we were growing up. I've had to process it through the years and at the age of 44 I feel that just a simple communication with him would make a difference. Anyone who has hurt their kid needs to have the courage to talk about it. Anyone who has been victimized, needs to realize it is important to approach it. Playing this role was very cathartic for me.

BEAR: How did this relationship with your father affect your career?

PAUL: I grew up with very low self esteem. I started getting into pornography for destructive reasons. I have since been able to come to grips with it and realize that I am proud of myself and my accomplishments. I have always used my real name and I don't have delusions that I'm anything more or less than the profession I chose. Unfortunately there is no real respect for a porn-star. We are really very much alone in this world. The biggest win one can get from this profession is that you are always the best that you can be.

BEAR: Tell us about your relationship with John Travolta. How did it start? And what happened when you told the media?

PAUL: We met at the Bodyworks Gym in Los Angeles. He approached me while I was taking a shower, saying that he had been a fan of mine for quite some time. We ended up together for about 4 years. I feel that I was led on during the relationship with the bauble of fame and an acting career being held before me. When I went to the National Inquirer with my story I was laid out by my friends Johnny Mathis and David Geffen for telling the story. My reaction to them was "let's be honest here." I got tired of being scolded for what they've created. One of my favorite sayings comes from the play Cyrano De Bergerac: "May my soul be filled with flowers and weeds, with thorns even, so long as I can gather them into one garden I call my own." I lost some friends because of what I did, but I am not sorry I did it.

BEAR: No one can figure out if you're gay or straight. Will you tell us?

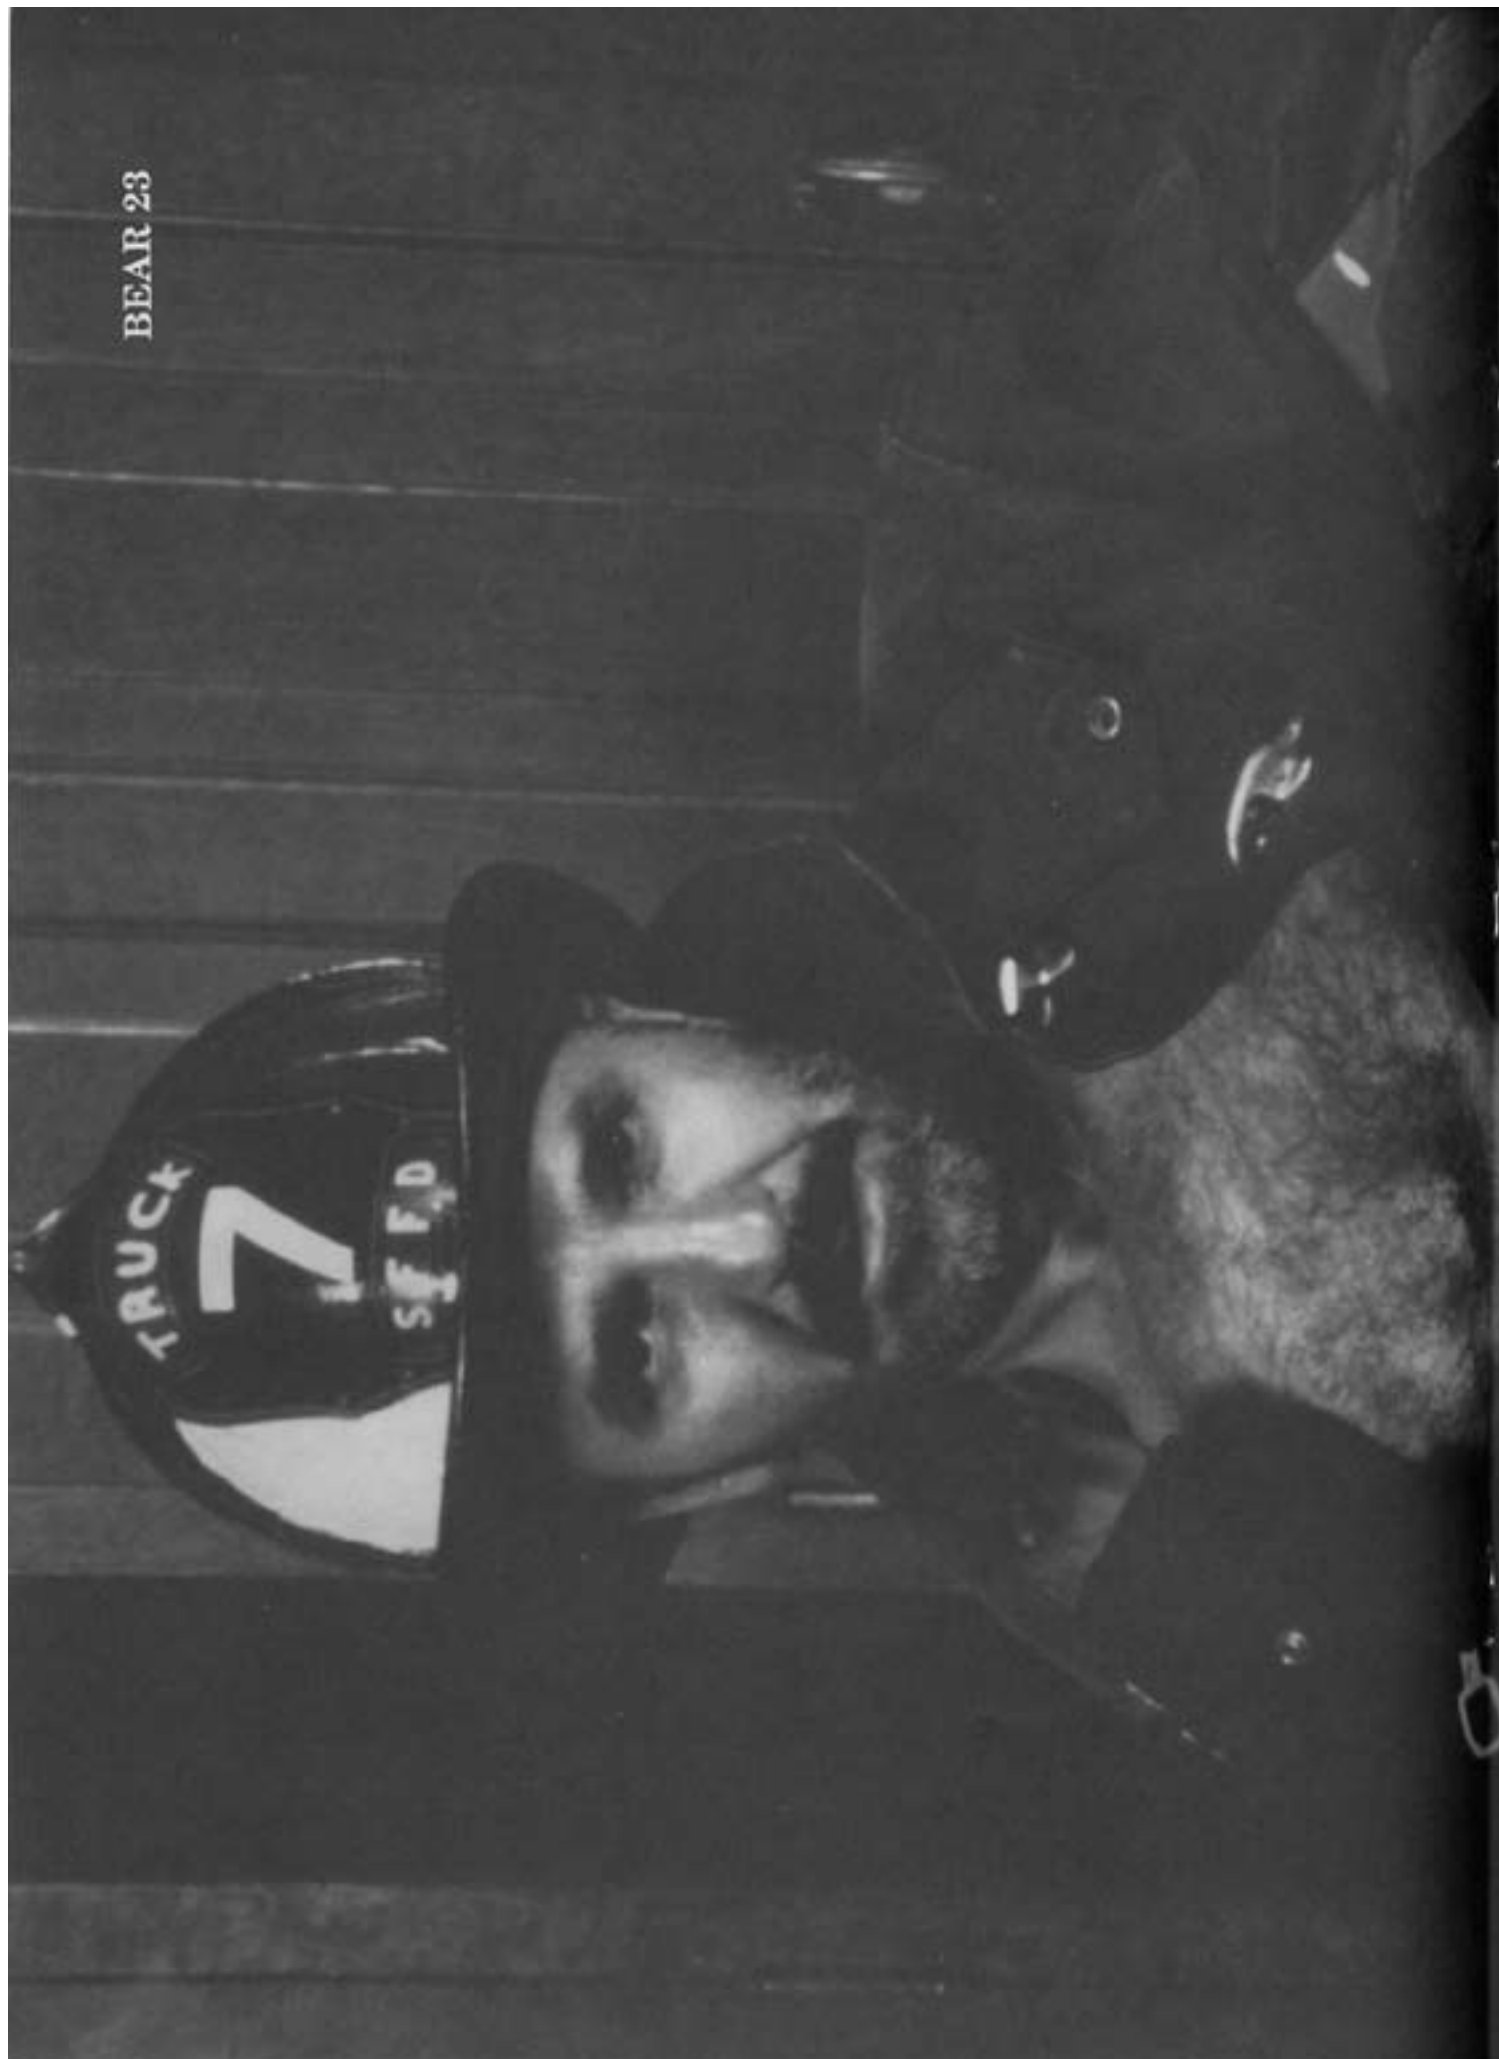

PAUL: One of the key elements of my sexuality is curiosity and the forbidden zone factor of going against society. The homosex I have had has been because it has opened those areas up to me. The more I was told that it was wrong, the more I wanted to explore it. The experiences I've had with men have been very complimentary and more genuinely caring than the experiences that I had as a child. I tend to want to grasp a moment of tenderness regardless of the sex. I don't have a pat answer as to whether or not I am straight or gay.

BEAR: What kind of sex partner turns you on?

PAUL: It's always different. I don't have a particular type. I like to dominate, so a passive or gentle attitude is attractive to me. I like the way a person's eyes light up when I appear or verbalize strongly. I definitely respond to affection and gentleness.

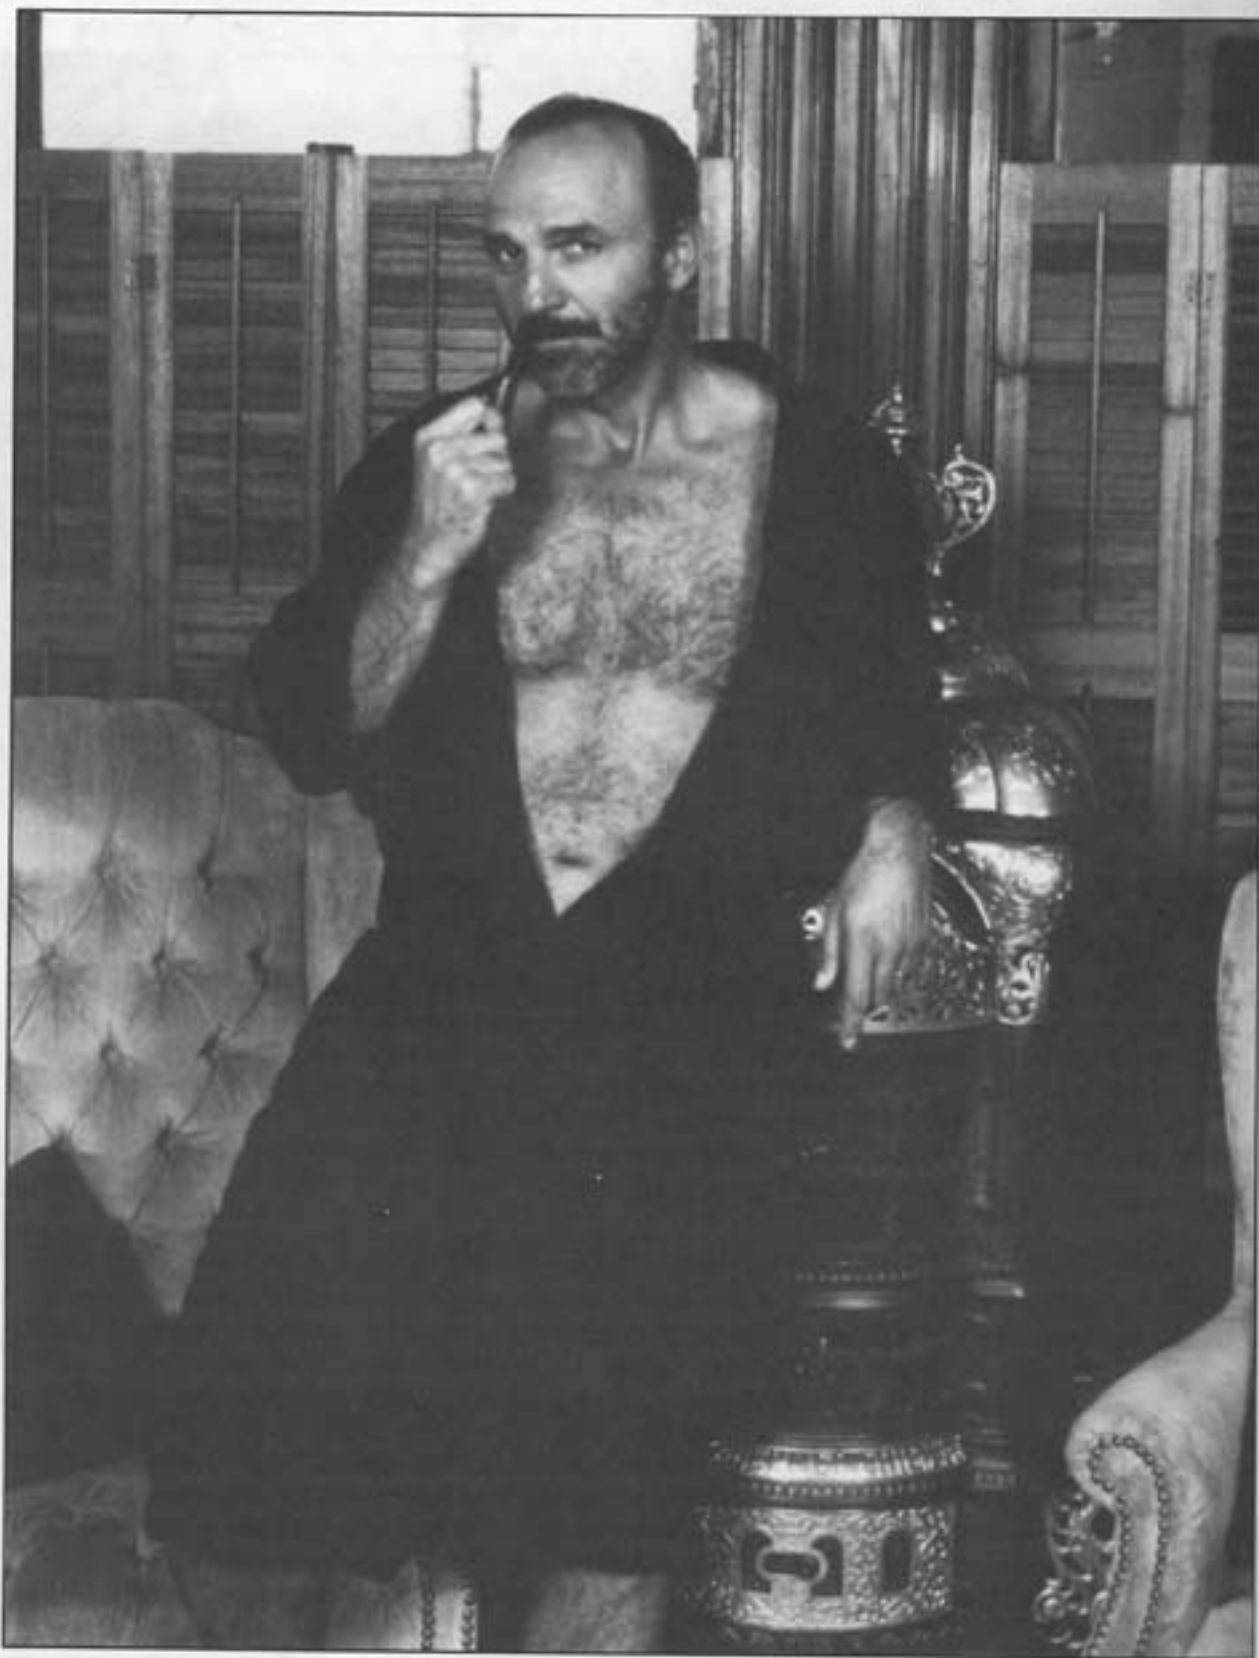

BEAR 23

BEAR: We appreciate you giving us a look at your dick. You've got a real comfortable energy going, and it shows. Tell us where that confidence comes from.

PAUL: One of the most difficult things in this world is to find out what we're about. Steer your own ship as opposed to somebody else's. Anyone who wants to navigate my ship had better well fuckin' ask me. The people we are most critical with are the ones who portray our own shortcomings. Spend the energy to figure yourself out.

5-7 February 1993, Provincetown. The New England Bears are holding their first annual Hibernation Run. P-Town might still be a wee chilly this weekend; that's what hunky furry guys are for. Costs money, needs reservations. Call 508-458-0011 for information immediately upon reading this.

6 February 1993, San Francisco and New Orleans. Celestial Krewe de Cuir is bringing another round of Mardis Gras, two cities at a time. A hyperspace transporter beam will gently carry you back and forth between the parties. The only problem: the pattern buffer sobers you up. You have to drink all over again when you get to the other side. Write to the Krewe at 172 Haight Street #4 in SF 94102 immediately for the necessary information and transporter permits.

13-16 February 1993, San Francisco. It's the second annual International Bear Fest 1993; just like last year only bigger. We'll be there too. Call the BEAR HUG group on 415-647-9127 to get the skinny. So to speak.

14 February 1993. Dear Bear Reader: You're my special valentine. I wuv you! There. Now you can't say you didn't get one.

LIVE BEAR was the first film featuring exclusively hirsute men strutting their stuff in front of the camera. Four years later we bring you LIVE BEAR 2—ten men in solo action on a 120 minute video cassette stripping down for our camera, showing us what we want to see and telling us what we want to hear.

LIVE BEAR 2

These are men who stopped by the BEAR offices and said, "Yeah, I'd like to do a dirty video". Real action by real guys who wanted you, fans of hairy men, to see them naked and to watch them play with themselves. No cover-up sound here either. The grunts, groans and dirty talk are here for your listening pleasure.

A Few Highlights From The Film

•John, a hungry bearded man who ends up deep throating the cameraman's hand.

•Stan, a handsome furry chested Southerner who has perfect aim with his body fluids; tasty.

•Brian, so butt crazed that he takes a bust of Beethoven and shoves it up his ass.

•J. Bradway, the hairy young bear who sucks his own penis then comes in his mouth.

(I am over 21 years old)

Finding a gay-positive environment for music other than dance is akin to dentistry.

For the past few months, I've had my mining helmet on, digging and wading through the muck of the American gay club scene in search of venues to hear rock bands and country twangers. The results are disappointing at best.

Even in a large city like New York, I could only uncover a couple of queer joints where live music is regularly featured: The Dugout and The Cactus Club—both of which showcase country music acts four of five nights a month. San Francisco, of course, is a home of the brilliant Lone Star Saloon, while The Rawhide remains an institution in Los Angeles. But I'm sad to report that I'm at a loss to report of any other venues where you and yours can hang, hear music, and be openly gay without fear.

Why? The perception is that Madonna, Sylvester, and the like are unbeatable gay music choices. A club manager in Minneapolis notes that "the overriding idea is that gay clubs equal dance beats and twitching butts, which I refuse to believe is true. Just having a jukebox with k.d. lang and Metallica tunes in it feels like a victory."

So should those of us who strut to a different drummer be forever left out in the cold? Of course not, but we do need to unify and refuse to be continually stereotyped. The gay male community is as diverse and unique as any other. We must demand to be treated as such. If you want to hear more than Like A Virgin or Do You Want To Funk then say so. In the meantime, follow this space for some of the more interesting musical alternatives worth seeking out. And my search for venues where I can pinch my boy's butt without having to throw down with some homophobe will continue. Please write to me in care of this publication if you discover a cozy spot worth spotlighting.

In other music news: fans of King Missile (as well as openly gay bassist and BEAR magazine fan Chris Xefos) should sprint to their local record shops for "Happy Hour"—the follow-up to their critically lauded 1991 album "The Way To Salvation." This 18 song collection combines complex-but-catchy rock riffs with clever, biting lyrics. Detachable Penis has already begun to raise conservative eyebrows with its carefully veiled commentary on promiscuity, while adventurous radio programmers are digging the cathartic and comical Martin Scorsese. Don't pass up the chance to catch these guys during their upcoming U.S. concert tour—and don't forget to wear your BEAR cap!

On a radically different tip, Depeche Mode ends a three year break from recording with "Songs Of Faith and Devotion," an album that takes their signature brand of lyrical depression and weaves 'em into more aggressive, guitar-rooted arrangements. I Feel You lies somewhere between white-knuckled angst and tight-pantsed arousal, with a barrage of metallic guitars laid over ambient keyboard sounds. Equally emotional is One Caress, with its 28-piece string section and sensual prose. One for the more cerebral music fan.

But when you tire of using your brain, there's nothing quite like Southern-fried blues-rock, so raw and deep that you feel that baseline on your balls. That's precisely what Copperhead deliver on their self-titled album. There isn't a bum track to be found here. And if rough bike dudes fit your aesthetic requirements, look no further. These men are as their music.

And if that album is not assertive enough for you, then take a dive into Rage Against The Machine's eponymous album. This is gnarling-yet-rhythmic stuff, cut from the mold of Red Hot Chili Peppers and The Clash. Zack de la Rocha spews with guttural passion about poverty (Settle For Nothing), crooked politicians (Bomb Track), and war (Killing In the Name). The overwhelming feeling of anger that fills this album can be exhausting after a while—but it is also an unflinching picture of the world that must be seen.

Let's close on a softer and brighter note by noting yet another album by country music diva Reba McEntire, It's Your Call. After her last album, the wrenching For My Broken Heart, Reba is feeling a little less intense. Sure, there are cry-in-your-beer tunes like Will He Ever Go Away and Baby's Gone Blues, but survival and rebirth are the more prevalent emotions conveyed here, as proven by the album's strongest entry Take It Back.

THE LAST HERALD MAGE TRILOGY by MERCEDES LACKEY published by DEL RAY PRESS

I've been reading Sci-Fi and fantasy for years. It was a real treat to run into the Last Herald Mage. This trilogy has a very intriguing storyline that pulls you in fairly quickly. It has enough originality to it to make it worthwhile reading to even the most jaded fantasy reader. Ms. Lackey's style of writing allows you to easily visualize the world she has created, unlike some fantasy writers who get caught up spending too much time on useless information that only tends to confuse the reader.

The trilogy starts out with a very tastefully presented affair between two of the male characters of the story. The hero, Vanyel, is presented as a masculine, gay magician who is taught the secrets of magic by two lovers who are part of a reclusive tribe. There is an interesting twist to the story that involves Vanyel's relationship to a magical horse named Yfandes. Vanyel loses his first love early on in the first book and he spends a good portion of the next book trying to find himself—and a new love. The story proceeds with the usual number of magical journeys and battles with the dark side until we hit the final confrontation in the last book. An unfortunately literarily rushed conclusion ends the series—the hero meets his nemesis, there's a big battle and everyone dies. It's a shame that we're led up to a supposedly great climax over the course of the three books only to be let down in the final moments. It's as if the author suddenly realized that she had a deadline to meet.

The trilogy as a whole is worth reading though, despite the climax. It's has some new twists on the ol' magic thing and it's refreshing to see a gay theme in mainstream fantasy. The author has a fairly new trilogy out with a decidedly lesbian theme as well.

If you read some of her work and would like to explore her work further, Mercedes Lackey has coauthored a couple of projects with The DRAGON SERIES writer, Anne McCaffrey.

SOLO SEX: ADVANCED TECHNIQUES by DR. HAROLD LITTEN published by FACTOR PRESS

I remember the first time I jacked off was in my parents bedroom one afternoon when I was about thirteen years old. I had gotten my hands on one of those sex newspapers found in front of family restaurants. In it was a small advertisement for a 976-type number to meet other men through a message bulletin board. At the time my homophobic rationale told me I was "fuckin' with the faggots." As it turned out, a faggot fucked with me. The person on the other end of the line was able to tell I was young and ultimately got me to rub vaseline on my hard dick and stroke it till I came. I wasn't exactly sure what this ritual was but I was hooked and subsequently adopted a new religion: my dick.

Working at BEAR, we receive a lot of naked pictures, mags, videos, etc. I mean a lot. Passing by Richard's desk one day, I spotted a book which immediately got my attention; Solo Sex: Advanced Techniques. Asking if I could check it out, he replied "Only if you review it."

"With pleasure," I said.

Dr. Harold Litten has written a user's guide to the art of masturbating using data compiled from sex specialists and psychiatrists as well as interviews of experiences from men 15 to 75. The diversity of these experiences encompass a subject who cums an average of 10 to 15 times a day to a man, who only through physical abstinence is able to achieve orgasm through mental stimulation. The latter of the two—called a psychic orgasm—is totally fascinating. The detailed account of this man's trip is not only intellectual but arousing.

Litten separates the book into three parts; The Basics, Advanced Practices and Ultimate Orgasm And The Mind. I have often felt that jerking-off is the next best thing to sex but wondered if there was something wrong with that. The Basics addresses questions of that nature. Litten wants you to understand that sexual pleasure is almost entirely a mental thing and not physical. Without proper mental stimulation, you're basically going through the motions. Litten gives creative ideas to achieve this state of mind.

He also goes into creating scenes and techniques. As it turns out, the way I jack-off, referred to as "the flog," is preferred by adolescents and not the experienced self-pleasurer. Oh well, I'm learning.

Advanced Practices delves into the experiences of men who wank while driving at 110 mph, simulated exhibitionism and rape, to my favorite, a guy who gets off watching Friday The 13th movies.

Finally, The Ultimate Orgasm And The Mind deals with using your mind to create fantasy into living image. This is totally cool and definitely takes practice. It involves three steps which requires being in tune with all five senses. Combine this with the techniques learned previously on the physical aspect and you have basically died and gone to heaven. Most epic.

So here it is. I had a blast reading and experimenting with this book. It's clinical side is not overbearing and the true accounts are inspiring. Definitely check this out! -Chops

I thought y'all might get a kick out of this photo. Bun Boy is located in the same neck o' the woods as Big Bone Lick State Park. (featured in an earlier BEAR)

Tom and Jim sent us this bit o' bear news from Canada.

We have a new radio station in Edmonton, 100.3 FM, The BEAR. The BEAR plays only classic rock, combined with the occasional comedy clip and off-the-wall DJ's with names like Sled Dog and Goldie Rocks. One of the station's most notable and raunchy characters is Scruff Conners. His morning show sometimes consists of questionable topics, contests and surprise phone calls to famous people.

One of the contests encouraged listeners to put their telephones close to the toilet for a target contest. When asked "How's it hangin'?" one contestant replied "Hangin' loose and full of juice." Then we heard that familiar sound of a stream of piss hitting the bowl. Just what the contestants were using to aim and shoot was left up to our imagination.

Chuck from Indiana sent us this roid of his license plate. He told us he likes to show off the fact that he is in to beards and hair.

Jim Alexander of Canada

I pinched this from a friend of mine who got it from a friend of his in New Orleans. It seems these Canadian bears get around.

GOOD NEWS FOR TROUBLE SHOOTERS

If you're like me, and cum at the drop of a hat, right when things are getting good, then you might be interested in Prozac™. That's right, America's favorite anti-depressant has now been found to delay ejaculation for up to five minutes. The only time I used to get more than two strokes in was when I played golf—now you can fuck for hours and feel great! How's that for life in the 90s? Major prescription stuff though; talk to your doctor.

Lickin' good

This bear dries off his chest lickety-split — by using his tongue as a towel. The Malaysian sun bear got wet during a rain shower at the zoo where he lives in Munster, Germany.

ON A SERIOUS NOTE

We have been getting letters from some of you folks that have ads in the personals section regarding a letter that was supposedly written by a ten year old boy. The letter is hand written and it goes on about the boy having to get money together to buy his brother a computer. It is targeted directly to our subscribers saying something to the effect that he is a small cub who is looking to receive help from the bear community.

WATCH OUT. This is most likely a scam. Unfortunately some of the people who read BEAR's personals section are not looking to meet another man but are more interested in getting something else out of the exchange. There have been instances where inmates have scammed using other publication's personals. We do what we can around here to make sure that the ads are real and the information is correct. The bottom line is when you get an answer to your ad, be sure to use your own judgement.

THURSDAY'S CHILD

by BILL BLODGETT

This is essentially the letter I wrote to my friend Dan, who had been transferred from Michigan to Oregon last year. We've always been soulmates, and I was in such an agitated state that I found it easier to put my thoughts on paper than to call him.

Hi Dan,

I have to tell you about this call I got last night that blew me away. I was home after dinner when the phone rang. I answered it in the den so I could flop down on the couch if it turned out to be one of those windbags that you and I always seem to attract.

I said hello, and a deep, sexy-as-hell voice said, "Do you do reststaps?"

It really startled me, because he didn't sound like anybody I knew. But you know me, I'm seldom at a loss for words, even if they're the wrong ones, so I said, "Who wants to know?"

He paused, like calling me suddenly wasn't such a good idea. "Is...your name...Bill?"

I felt like asking him if he was a cop, but something told me he wasn't out to get me into any trouble. "Yeah, I'm Bill."

"I met you a couple of years ago and you gave me your card. I wasn't sure this was still your number."

"Yeah, it is, but my card? Hey look, I don't normally do johns, and the few times I have, I seriously doubt I would pass out cards."

"No, just one card. I thought you might remember me," he began to sound kind of disheartened. "I had my son with me that day."

"Son?" I asked, half to myself.

Then it clicked. It had haunted me for months afterward. I replayed the scene in my mind dozens of times, wondering if something was eluding me.

I remember that it happened four years ago at the end of March, because the crocuses were just coming up and I'd driven cross-state to help my folks get their yard into shape for spring. It was a very cold, but beautiful crystal-clear weekend. I spent all of Saturday and most of Sunday morning getting everything raked and pruned to my satisfaction, and by lunch time on Sunday I was finally ready to go inside to warm up my frozen feet and chat for a while. The three of us talked our way through two full pots of hot coffee, so by the time I hit the rest stop on the way home I had to take a leak so bad I was just about dancin'.

There were only two other cars in the place, a huge maroon Lincoln with someone in the front seat, and a yellow beetle with people getting out. I hopped out and ran for the john. An old man, wearing a long gray coat and one of those black fur hats with the earflaps on them was standing at the left urinal in a row of four. The urinals were waist-high and set into the floor, the kind you would have to lean into if you were pee shy. I had half a hard-on from having such a full bladder, but I didn't care if the old man liked it or not. I went to urinal number three and pulled my dick out of my dusty jeans, but it was tough to relax enough to go. I closed my eyes to clear my mind, and I heard the john door open and close. The sound of squeaking rubber-soled shoes against tile traveled behind us toward the stalls to our left. I caught a glimpse of a big bearded man carrying a little boy to the farthest stall. With the sounds of clothing rustling and the door slamming shut, I finally started to let out a heavy stream of hit piss that hit the water so loudly, it almost drowned out the whir of the vent fan. I heard the man say "let me know when you're done," and he walked over to the urinal next to me on the right. The old man finished and slowly made his way over to wash his, and then he left.

The bearded man was a little taller than I am, maybe 6'2", in his thirties, and was built stocky. He wore silver, wire-rimmed glasses and had wavy dark brown hair with a few strands of gray, brushed back and gathered in a ponytail, falling a little past his collar. His full black beard was thick but perfectly groomed. He wore a frayed, beige, down-filled jacket, a light blue dress shirt open halfway down the front, navy slacks held up by suspenders, and old running shoes that were clean but badly worn. "Not the richest of men," I thought.

I was squeezing out the last few drops, smiling in relief, as he opened his fly. He looked up at the ceiling, so I decided to take the opportunity to glance at his dick. He was standing with his hands on his hips, pushing his coat back, and he'd unbuttoned the waistband of his trousers. To my surprise, he'd not only taken out his penis, but also his testicles, which were hanging out over the 'V' of his open zipper.

It looked like a pretty bizarre thing for a straight guy to do, but I was fascinated by his lack of modesty and by the handsome equipment he appeared to be displaying just for my benefit.

Dan, I know you remember what my dick's like, and let me tell you, this guy's dick was every bit the match for mine, with the bonus of a nice meaty foreskin that looked just ready for chewing. It dangled like a good thick length of hose, curving around his propped-up balls. What little I could see of his dickhead was reddish-brown, as dark as mine is pink. His balls looked like large brown eggs covered with curly black hair.

He sighed deeply, starting a moderate stream of piss as he slowly moved his gaze over in my direction. He seemed to be checking out my half of a piss-hard, then he looked me right in the eye. I returned the look and met a pair of warm, sparkling brown eyes.

"Hi," I said.

"How's it goin'," he answered in a friendly bass voice, grinning.

The protective wall between us began to dissolve, and I felt the excitement build as my heart began to hammer and that warm surge began in my penis, stretching it up toward a full erection. We both studied each other's dicks, and the sight of mine getting bigger was making his grow, too. His expanding glans began to push up and away from his foreskin until its flared rim met with some resistance, then the skin suddenly popped back, settling in folds behind the head, which now was smooth and glossy purple. It had to have been two inches across. His cock was growing wide and fat, twitching as it curved higher and higher, pointing toward his chin, and mine was now longer than his, but thinner, pointing straight up at its steepest angle, throbbing in time to my heartbeat. We hadn't even touchedp ourselves yet, let alone each other.

I jumped at hearing a door open in the vestibule. "Oh, fuck!" I grit my teeth in anger. I was getting into this guy far too much to be interrupted.

"That's just my wife Jen going back to the car," he whispered. As he turned toward me, I noticed the shine of a delicate gold chain almost lost in his dense growth of black chest hair. Hanging from the chain was a small gold ring, maybe Jen's class ring from when they were in college together. It was the only thing other than his wedding band that wasn't bare-bones utilitarian.

He smiled and winked at me, encouraging me to begin. I relaxed my clenched jaws and eased my hand over to his dick and he reached for mine with his big hairy hand. His dick felt hot as I wrapped my fingers around it, and when I pulled the skin up over his large dickhead, it went over more easily than I thought it would, there being plenty of loose overhang to play with. It stayed wherever it was put, either completely covering the head or fully retracted. His warm hand shook a little as he pulled what skin I have gently up and down. He licked his lips, and I could feel myself start to tremble with the chill of excitement. In seconds, he had me move around to face him, and he squatted in front of me, looking up into my eyes as if he were half-starved. He removed his glasses and put them in his pocket. They had made red marks on the bridge of his nose. He was an incredibly beautiful man. He carefully wet his lips and slowly took my penis into his mouth, the hot wet velvet texture of his lips and tongue made me impulsively grab the back of his head and plunge my cock into his face. He seemed to take it all with no great effort, but he slicked his right hand and made an extension for his mouth so I wouldn't go in too deeply again, I guess to prevent any uncontrolled noise that might give us away to the boy. He stroked my shaft as his left hand continuously pumped his foreskin, making bubbled in the thick lubrication now drooling from the tip. He went down on my rhythmically, and I let myself go well above any high I'd ever let myself reach before. Somehow I felt I could trust him, though I didn't even know his name.

"Dad, promise you won't leave!" the boy called anxiously. He sounded like he was about three.

He kept up the rhythm with his hand as he drew his mouth away to answer. "It's okay. I'm right here, Kev."

I compared the voice with the one on the phone, and it just had to be the same man.

He resumed his expert sucking. He would open his mouth wide and take my cock in, let the underside slide in along his tongue until I was all the way in, then he'd softly clamp his throat around it and draw back slowly with his slippery right hand gliding along the length, pressing his thumb against my urethra until he reached the rim of my dickhead, massaging my ultra-sensitive frenum with the tip of his tongue, then open wide, lunge, clamp and slowly pull back again and again, milking me. He could tell I was getting off watching his left hand pull and retract his foreskin to both extremes in time with every stroke of his mouth, making the ring on his chain sparkle as it bounced around in his chest hair. He was diligent and careful, as if he'd spend hours contemplating the technique. He obviously loved what he was doing, enjoying every nuance of my expression with those beautiful mahogany eyes as I floated to the top of my orgasm. He seemed to record every moment, eagerly gathering my evident pleasure. It was as if he wanted to be able to relive this moment after returning to his wife and son.

The realization that somebody's big hairy dad was sucking my dick was crashing through every roadblock I'd set up to delay my ejaculation, and I looked deep into his eyes, nodding that I was about ready to shoot. He pulled his mouth away just long enough to answer "Yeah!" with a wide grin, then went right back in rhythm.

I felt the pulsations start down in my asshole and strengthen until I involuntarily jerked away from his mouth and shot my first spurt past his moustache and over his nose, causing him to blink just once, and I stifled my urge to groan. He quickly flopped my cockhead back onto his outstretched tongue, wagging it back and forth to help me through a burning orgasm. It felt like I came enough to fill a shot glass, and the contractions were so strong, they almost hurt. He paused just long enough to swallow the cum that was collecting at the back of his throat, and I braced myself against the urinal to prevent my buckling knees from giving out from under me. His left arm started to shake as he jacked his meat, and the first wet pearly rope of his cum spiraled out to loop over his wrist and coat sleeve. He opened his throat wide and pushed down onto my dick, taking it all the way in to the base, and kept it there with a look of tortured pleasure on his face as he reached down and cupped his right hand to catch most of the big load of cream he was pumping out high and thick. His throat released its grip on my cock, gasping for air, he looked like he was ready to keel over, so I steadied him enough to help him get to his feet.

"Daddy, I'm done," Kevin yelled.

"So are we, Kid," I whispered with a smile.

"Okay pardner," his father said, out of breath, "I'll be right there." He started for the sink to wash up, but I caught him by the arm, and he looked a little panicked by my unanticipated aggression. I took the palm coated with his cum to my mouth and began to lick it clean as I looked into his eyes. It surprised him, then delighted him into an amazed grin. I turned his hand over and sucked on his thumb, delicately tracing his thumbnail with my tongue, trying to let him know that if we ever met again, I wanted his dick in me, wherever he wanted to put it. I look out my hanky to wipe his hand dry, then wiped my cum from his nose and moustache.

"Daddy," the boy repeated.

"Just a sec, pal." He looked in the boy's direction, then back at me. He put his glasses back on as I fumbled in my wallet for one of my cards. He took it and placed it in his shirt pocket, patting it.

I reached up and ran my fingers through the luxurious soft hair growing up his cheek. He responded by reaching into my shirt, searching through my red-brown chest hair for my tits, which were still hard. He squeezed one of them, kissed me gently on the lips, and went to his waiting son.

I quickly washed, combed my hair and hurried to my car. There indeed was a woman waiting in the passenger seat of the bug. I dawdled, unfolding some maps I didn't need to see, hoping to get one last glimpse of the man whose cum still coated the back of my throat. He came out to the car with his boy hoisted high in the air, shrieking with glee as he was bounced along like a sack of potatoes. I looked at the child, a product of that big beautiful penis. He was a rosy, healthy boy with wavy copper-colored hair and fresh aquamarine eyes.

"Good job, mister," I said to myself.

His wife opened her door and went around in front to take her son into her arms for a snuggle, then she buckled him into his safety seat and strapped herself in. She was a dazzling lady, thin, pale and pretty, with hair the color of mine, long and glowing red-gold in the sunshine.

I started my car and backed away from my space. Before he pressed himself into the cramped driver's seat, he watched me drive past him with the disconnected smile of a man just plain happy to be out with his family on a glorious Sunday afternoon. I looked back and thought I saw him wink at me one last time.

"Not the richest of men..." I brought back the thought, shaking my head at my stupid, narrow values. The rest of my drive home was spent in empty silence. My normal attitude about a contact like this would be smug satisfaction over what I'd just gotten away with, but this time I felt a hollow quivering in my stomach and an inexplicable sense of loss. That was what haunted me.

"Bill," he called. "Are you still there, Bill?"

"Oh, um...guess my mind was wandering a bit. Of course I remember you. So how're you doin'?"

"Okay..." his voice went flat, like he thought I was lying to spare his feelings.

"I just..." I stalled, tapping my forehead to speed up the processing. "Kev." He'd called his son "Ken."

"I was just wondering," I crossed my fingers, "how Kevin is, too."

"Then you DO remember!" The warmth began to come back to his voice. "He's just great."

"Never caught YOUR name," I implied the question.

"My name's Tom," he said, then he pronounced and spelled his last name like a teacher would. The name sounded Italian, but was spelled differently from what you'd expect.

"How do you do, Tom?" I asked.

"Fine, thank you, Bill," he answered, and we laughed together at our sudden formality. That protective wall was dissolving again.

"So, what can I do for you, Tom?"

He cleared his throat and took a breath. "Our doctor told us we couldn't have any children, but then along came Kevin. We called him our 'miracle baby'."

I wondered how on earth he was going to tie this in with me.

"We wanted to try for just one more, so Jenny got pregnant again. It didn't go nearly as well as the first one, and she got sick a lot more often...well, we lost both her and the baby. Two years ago today," he was almost whispering, "so it's kind of an anniversary...."

I was stunned by the simple grace he showed in accepting the inevitability of something so awful, and I suddenly understood the reason he chose this day to call me. It was as crystal-clear as that Sunday afternoon had been.

"To be honest, I kept your card in my wallet just to help me remember that day whenever I needed to. But after Jen passed away, I put it on the dresser where I would see it every morning. I figured if I ever found the courage to...uh, change my lifestyle, well...you might be the one to show me where to start."

"Hey, Mister," I said lightly, "I don't take recruits." I couldn't believe I had just said something so stupid, so I tried to soften it. "...but I would always help out a friend in need."

"Well, I'm in need," he said.

"Me too," I realized aloud.

In the following moment of silence, I also realized that my heart was starting to pound in my throat, as if I was about to discover the answer to something I'd never dared ask before.

"Would you come to dinner at my house?" I blurted. "I'm a fairly good cook...and why don't you bring Kevin, too?"

"Kevin?" He sounded appalled. "You're not into kids...are you?"

"Oh, GOD NO!" I roared with laughter.

"I'm...I'm really sorry," he said, "guess since I'm raising him by myself, I get a little overprotective, sometimes."

"Must be tough on both of you. But I thought that if I were a family friend, it might make things a little easier, and from there...I guess the sky's the limit."

As I was saying it, two things struck me—how much I must have come off sounding like Tom's dad, and how the optimism sounded like you, Dan. Anyway, we exchanged addresses and directions and set up for this coming Saturday night. Then he said, "Thanks a lot, Bill."

"For what?" I asked.

"For not telling me to go to hell."

"I've been called a lot of things in my time, but 'fool' isn't one of them," I pretended to be angry. "You may notice that I didn't need any card to remind me of you all this time. Hell is the last place I'd want you to be right now." I could almost hear him blush through the phone line. "And another thing, if I'm going to be showing you the ropes, I have to tell you that drinkin' somebody else's cum isn't exactly the smartest thing to be doin' these days."

"You were the only one," he said.

Now it was my turn to blush. I felt his loneliness, and I wanted to take him in my arms. My mind was spinning in too many directions. I knew I couldn't continue making coherent sentences for too much longer, so I told him I should let him go. "Take care, my friend."

"Take care, Bill," and he hung up. The way he said my name tickled me, as if he were the first person I'd ever heard say it right.

I stared up from the couch at the random swirls in the ceiling, playing out some of the fantasies I'd thought were too silly and schoolgirlish before. Dan, you know how I made fun of your sense of optimism when I called you "Pollyanna Dan," and how I used to bristle every time you said things like "Prepare for the best!", but now I know you're the one friend who won't laugh at me.

Yesterday was business as usual, until I got that 10-minute call, and today I'm a total wreck. You know I'm no lovesick air-headed kid, Dan. I'm fucking 38 years old. Maybe a swift kick right in the butt would snap me out of this.

But then I think of that pale young lady who loved Tom so much that she gave up her life trying to bear his children, and it's reduced me to tears. Could he and I ever make a life as good as theirs must have been? Will Kevin like me? Does it matter? Will I burn the steaks on Saturday?

You remember that old kid's rhyme about Monday's child is fair of face, don't you? Well, I fell like Thursday's child has far to go, impatient to hit the road, but scared shitless. Do you know anybody who's gone through anything like this? Do you think things could possibly work out for the best?

Please call me as soon as you get this letter. I really need to talk. And thanks for not telling me to go to hell.

Love, Bill

CHRIS XEFOS

We asked Chris if he might be interested in taking his clothes off for us. "Sure," he said. We waltzed him right over to Steve's studio and said, go to it, men. We thought you might like to take a peek at the results.

Chris is from Huntington, New York. He's about 5'10" and pulls it in at 215 lbs. He's a music producer and a member of a couple of rock groups. One happens to be stirrin' up some interest these days called KING MISSILE. He's been playing keyboards, bass and whatever else, with the band for about three and a half years. When we asked him what about music, was important for him he said, "It's always been a part of my life. My whole family is involved with music in one fashion or another. Before I discovered sex there was music. I get the same kind of feeling from a good gig as I get from a good roll in the hay."

He says he doesn't consider himself a role model but came to BEAR because he wanted to show other guys out there that it was OK to be yourself even though you might not fit in the mainstream.

Big, masculine men turn his head and he has a fantasy where he and a lover work and have sex in various spots on the farm. He says it might be fun to have sex on a horse.
