LETTERS TO BEAR

Hey Guys,

Those of you who've been around BEAR since the beginning know it's more than a product. It's about you. It's about getting the most out of your sexuality.

BEAR's founder, Richard Bulger, retired to his cabin in the Sierras this past November. Having been a longtime fan, I decided to purchase BEAR and POWERPLAY magazines from him. My reason: to make sure they both remain the same hot publications I'd come to appreciate over the years.

The second half of 1994 was a difficult time for both magazines. A nearly completed BEAR 30 was shelved for months during the sale negotiations. I apologize that many of you felt left out, wondering if BEAR would ever be published again.

While Luke Mauerman is still the Editor of BEAR and most of the staff here at Brush Creek Media is unchanged, I have brought Joseph W. Bean in as Managing Editor. We're putting all our efforts into making BEAR an on-time, quality publication. It will be nasty; it will be intelligent; it will carry on its tradition of healthy sex and honest fun for a lotta years to come.

I look forward to getting to know many of you in the future. And if you have questions or concerns, please feel free to get in touch with me here at the shop. In the meantime, thanks for all the support, and enjoy our first issue of BEAR.

Mack Climbs Out of Hibernation

I was surprised—and delighted—to receive BEAR 30 last week. With the considerable lapse of time since issue 29, I assumed BEAR was dead. Fortunately you guys were only hibernating.

Coverman Mack ranks among my favorites from your offering of sexy, hairy studs since my discovering BEAR with issue 10. Mack ties with Pete Greene (issue 28) for second place, only surpassed by Jack Radcliffe (issue 11), my all-time favorite. The photographs of Mack on the cover and page 44 are outstanding.

How could anyone ever go back to magazines featuring boys after seeing your kind of men?

D.F., Massachusetts

You weren't alone. During sale-time our phones were ringing off the hook and we heard great rumors about us:

THE WITKE WIRE

Let's be honest. Real men watch soap operas.

Hey! Don't roll your eyes at me and turn the page. Get back here. Look. Maybe you, in your burly, bearded splendor, don't watch television serials, but when I've got the time to check in, I find most soaps—daytime or primetime—are bountiful sources of hot, hairy male pulchritude. And I know I ain't the only one.

Case in point (and I swear to you this is a true story), I've got this friend who's a tall, strapping, muscular buck with strawberry blond hair, sparkling eyes and a thousand-watt smile nestled beneath a big, bushy moustache. In short, one of the handsomest fuckers I've ever met. He's a firefighter. Pulls 48-hour shifts living and working in close quarters with other (I imagine) handsome fuckers who probably also have big, bushy mustaches since it seems to be part of the uniform requirement for male firefighters everywhere.

My friend tells me that every Monday night after eating dinner in the firehouse and finishing up their chores, the guys sit down for a communal viewing of Melrose Place. Most of his colleagues chortle over the crazy plot-lines and ogle the likes of Heather Locklear but my friend knows Melrose Place is a prime source for partially undad beefcake. Series semi-regular Jason Beghe plays an HIV-positive sailor kicked out of the Navy for being gay. I personally find it hard to breathe when Beghe removes his shirt. Muscle and sinew and fur, fur, fur. (A quick Witke Wire cross-reference: Beghe plays the lead in George Romero's frightening film, Monkeyshines, and does a spectacular naked-from-the-rear shot that you've gotta see to believe.)

I know what you're thinking: "Alright, Witke, maybe something like Melrose Place is good for a goof but how can you take those daytime shows seriously?" The answer is, of course, that we live in the post-modern era and therefore take nothing seriously other than professional wrestling. It's the only way to survive with a modicum of sanity. Luckily, since the late-'70s, soap operas haven't even taken themselves seriously. But believe me, there are some guys on these shows you really shouldn't miss. Lemme tell you about some.

I first stumbled across Michael Swan, who plays As the World Turns' swarthy Scotsman Duncan McKechie, on a special soap opera cast edition of Wheel of Fortune (I was channel surfing—some television shows even I can't rationalize watching). My first thought was: "My God, who is that daddy with the salt and pepper hair, jet-black moustache and muscular, hairy forearms?" My next thought was: "I gotta start watching whatever show he's on." And I'm glad I did. Duncan does, in fact, wear a kilt on special occasions and the writers look for every opportunity to remove his outer clothing. Swan has the biggest barrel chest on all of daytime TV; burly, furry, mouth-watering. Look for him.

My favorite soap hero is Buck Huston, a daredevil the place had burned down, someone skipped off with all our money...It was pretty trippy. We're pleased as punch at the chance to fill your mailbox as often as we can. By the way, you do have good taste in men. All three of your favorites are local guys, and I'm going to wave your letter under their noses, just to make 'em horny. Enjoy.

Twinkle Becomes Bearclaw

I waited so long for BEAR 30, but it was worth it. I would just like you to know, BEAR has really put a lot of reassurance in my life. I can love burly, hairy men and be proud of it and love them even more. Somehow, knowing there are so many others out there like me makes the world of 'twinkies' seem like the Wizard of Oz, over the rainbow.

Don't get me wrong. Some of my best friends are twinkies. For that matter, two years ago I was a twinkie. That is until I met my lover, Carlos. He put some meat on me, over me and in me. Enjoying every minute of it....I only have a little facial hair and absolutely no body hair but I'd like to thank you for showing me you don't have to be hairy to get good loving. Keep the issues cum'n.

B.J., Ohio

Thanks for the good words. Just more testimonial on the saving ability of BEAR Magazine. We never get tired of welcoming new people into the fold. In fact, we're thinking of standing out next to a BEAR Mobile in mall parking lots to convert as many more as we can.

Give Carlos a squeeze you-know-where and with you-know-which muscle.

BEAR Misses Boat

It perturbs me very much to think that a type-specific publication such as BEAR would fail to acknowledge the Bear '94 Contest held in Washington, DC, on 9 October 1994. Considering especially that the twenty-two contestants were some of the hottest, beefiest collection of hunky, hairy men you would want to feast your eyes on.

The exceptional winner, Mr. Tim Reynolds of Rockville, MD, not only deserved a cover story but also an apology from BEAR Magazine for not even acknowledging the weeks and final hours of hard work that he and the other contestants put into it.

Congratulations to Les Powell of Falls Church, VA, and Peter Zarconi of Durham, NC, for taking second and third place.

Way to go, BEAR, you sure missed out on a good thing. A Cub Who Cares, Maryland

You know we'd like nothing better than to cover these things ourselves, right down to taste tests of all contestants. And we're working to make that a reality (the coverage part, that is).

This fall we pretty much had our head up our collective asses. A good quick fix is to send a local correspondent to cover the event and give us pictures. but it didn't happen this time out.

But how about you? I have to assume that, even though you wouldn't give your name, you were there and saw the whole thing. Think you can handle sending a little information our way before firing the missiles? Think about it.

When I Bite Into A York Peppermint Pattie....

Well, you have done it again. Each issue surpasses the previous one.

Where did you find Mack in BEAR 30? Knocked me out of my winter chills. I went home and warmed up real quick and forgot it was -15° F outside.

I will be relocating to the Lower 48 States in 1996 and hope to stop by the offices there on my drive down. Also, can you forward this letter to Mack? Thanks. Keep up the excellent work. M.O., Alaska

Hey there....Maybe you can answer a bet we have going here in the Smut Mines: does cum freeze before it hits the ground?

BY CHRISTOPHER WITKE

pilot/motorcycle repairman on Loving. As played by actor Phillip Brown, Buck is a well-built, hair-covered, bulging-croched stud. Brown is just about the only man (other than my friend the firefighter) to whom I would have absolutely no qualms about paying cold, hard cash for the chance to administer a full-body tongue bath. Loving, by the way, is the only half-hour soap left in daytime; if you tape it and speed through the commercials, it amounts to 22 minutes of your time for the chance to drool along with me over this daytime he-man.

And there are plenty of others. John Callahan is All My Children's resident football, Edmund Grey. He's got the kind of chest hair that's visible even when he's wearing a shirt and tie. He's partial to V-neck shirts, however. David Forsyth plays Another World's resident daddy, John Hudson. Plunging necklines, rolled up sleeves, salt and pepper hair and very intense eyes.

Not all of the hirsute guys of daytime are white, which is pretty remarkable in our culture. Jonah Carver, hospital intern on Days of Our Lives, is played by actor Thyme Lewis. This African-American man has a chest that may actually be better than the young Sean Connery's. Rippling muscles and a carpet of hair. Well-worth seeing.

And don't get the idea that artificially built up musclemen are the only choices, either. Fans on the girth and mirth tip should get a real charge out of James Kiberd, who plays All My Children's big-bellied detective, Trevor. Kiberd is covered with body hair; unfortunately it was exposed much more when he played Mike on Loving about ten years ago. He was thinner then, too. It's a real shame he doesn't get out of his clothes more often because he just keeps getting sexier as the years go by.

I suppose you want facial hair, too. Well, daytime TV isn't afraid of that, either. Look for Omar on The Bold and the Beautiful. The incredibly handsome Josh on Guiding Light. Young and studly Bo on Days of Our Lives. And the drop dead gorgeous Alan Spaulding on Guiding Light. They're all bearded and hot enough to get you hard.

And while you're at it, look for One Life to Live's fuzzy Bo Buchanan and swarthy Andrew; General Hospital's lightly furry Mac Scorpio; Another World's Carl Hutchens; Mike and Holden on As the World Turns; and Cooper on Loving.

So maybe I've been protesting way too much. Maybe you're like me and you've already discovered the sexual charge of the men of TV serials. If you have, drop me a line about some of your personal favorites. But if you haven't, check 'em out.

Whaddya think? Me and the guys at the firehouse are gonna steer you wrong?

I don't think so.

As to your comments, Mack was just hanging around, visiting friends next door when we snagged him. He wasn't shy. I gave him your letter. We do our damndest to forward all the mail we can. And when you're here you should give Mack a call and teach him how to do it Alaskan style.

woof?

I don't get it. On page 77 of BEAR 30 there's an ad asking the question, "What sound does a bear make?" The t-shirt pictured reads "Woof." The ad goes on to say, "It's become the mating call of the great international bear," and so forth.

So when did bears start barking like dogs? And not just like a dog, but not a very big one. I thought only the little ones went "woof."

Your magazine insert had a couple of shirts with sounds that bears might make. One says "GROWL!" The other says "GRRRRRR!" That's a long way from "Woof," and a whole nother species to boot.

What the hell is going on here? E.P., Texas

I've always thought big dogs went "WOOF" and little dogs did more of a "yip" or an "arf," depending on type.

Actual bears don't make any sounds that you'd care to hear, since they usually only make them while ripping your flesh to bits on the bank of a river.

If you're talking about big, beefy men, well, they say "WOOF" when they're shit-faced and think someone might wanna plug their butt. Give it a try. You might be suprised at the response you get. But if this still really bothers you, then stay off p. 57 in this issue. It gets worse.

More Videos

I must tell you BEAR 30 was great! All the men are very sexy. Mack, the coverman, is a big, strong, sexy hunk—I love his broad, hairy chest. Seeing him in the shower all wet and soapy, and with his jockstrap pulled down, still gives me a raging hardon.

Doug and Bob are a couple of studs, too. Please do videos of these incredible men. I'd love to see them in action. And seeing Kirk and Randy making love would be great, too. I'd buy any video with these guys in it! F.S., Nebraska

Our video production has gone to near zero in the past few years. But you can bet we're looking at beefing it all back up and cranking out live action filth.

Some of the models in BEAR are suprisingly hesitant at being on video as well, but we keep working on them. We just tell them about fans like you, waiting, poised over the "pause" button.

By the way, for a lot of us, Mack's sexiest body parts are his barrel chest and full waistline. It's the beautiful beef that keeps us coming back for more.

Greetings from Greenland

After receiving my assignment to Thule Air Base, Greenland, I thought I was going to end up in something out of a science fiction movie. Remember "The Thing?"

Actually, I've landed in a bit of heaven. Because this area belongs to Denmark, they virtually run the place. The Danish contractors are something else—some of the most sexually exciting men I've ever seen. They mostly have light, reddish-blond hair and beards with furry bodies. And the contractors usually wear overalls with heavy belts. It's getting even more interesting now that we're in the dark period all the time. Hope to catch some first class prowling while I'm here.

I'm having my subscription to BEAR redirected here by a friend. I look forward to the next issue. Thanks for the good work!

J.K., Greenland

It's interesting to see the places BEAR gets to. And we use you as an example to the world that no one's ever too far away from the hunky, the hairy and the possibly horny under the right circumstances.

Donde Esta El Bano?

Howdy. I thoroughly enjoyed your Texas issue (BEAR 29) last summer, but on page 12 the artist TC needs to find out the difference between the Texas flag and the Puerto Rican flag. No offense to Puerto Rico, but it was a Texas issue. Keep up the good work. Tom of Texas

Boy, we're glad there's guys like you out there to keep us in line. God knows we'll take any liberty we can get. While acknowledging our mistake and promising to do better in the future, IT'S ABOUT DICK, FELLA. Hope we didn't blow any orgasms for you.

Island Madness

Thank you for honoring my subscription. I have received BEAR 30 and am looking forward to BEAR 31.

In Cyprus, homosexuality is forbidden by law. Human contact (sex) is rare. As you might understand, BEAR Magazine is really a solace, at least for me. I read it, I fantasize, and I am really contented.

Thank you once more.

G.M., Cyprus

We never quite get over the different places in the world that have found BEAR. It's easy to take for granted that someone can go to a picnic in one part of the world, grab some crotch, do a fella and forget about him; while others face prison—or worse—for even looking.

You deserve all the nasty sex you can get your hands on. Hopefully it'll piss a few people off along the way, yet still keep you out of trouble.

Keep writing letters and making friends around the world. Who knows? You may find some kindly gent willing to send you a plane ticket to Fire Island.

Then you can fuck all you want.

This is reader Lucky D. from North Hollywood. He has a nice dick and a wicked smile.

So go ahead.

Found this fella standing in the woods, looking quizzical. So we gave him some money and asked to see his dick. Turns out it's Mike, Mr. New England Bear. He was out sniffing around San Francisco not long ago, waiting for innocent victims to spring his genitals on.

If you like your men shy and retiring, you'd better forget about this one. He's pretty up-front. Mike likes to make love, but knows how to combine that with a throwing-around-the-room, furniture-breaking kind of sex. He's into sweaty, loud screwing with beefy, confident men who know how to keep up with him. Says he's thinking about settling down, but somehow I can't see him being anyone's Little Missus.

Mike works in cancer treatment; he's into photography, summertime and hanging out at the beach. You can also find him playing softball and watching hockey any chance he gets.

He's been a New Englander all his life, and has the greatest accent to prove it. But he's thinking of moving out West. Seems he liked what happened to him in the 'pahk' the day we got him naked. Can't say I blame him. Until then, you might see him on either coast. If you do, go up and introduce yourself. He won't bite.

At least, not real hard.

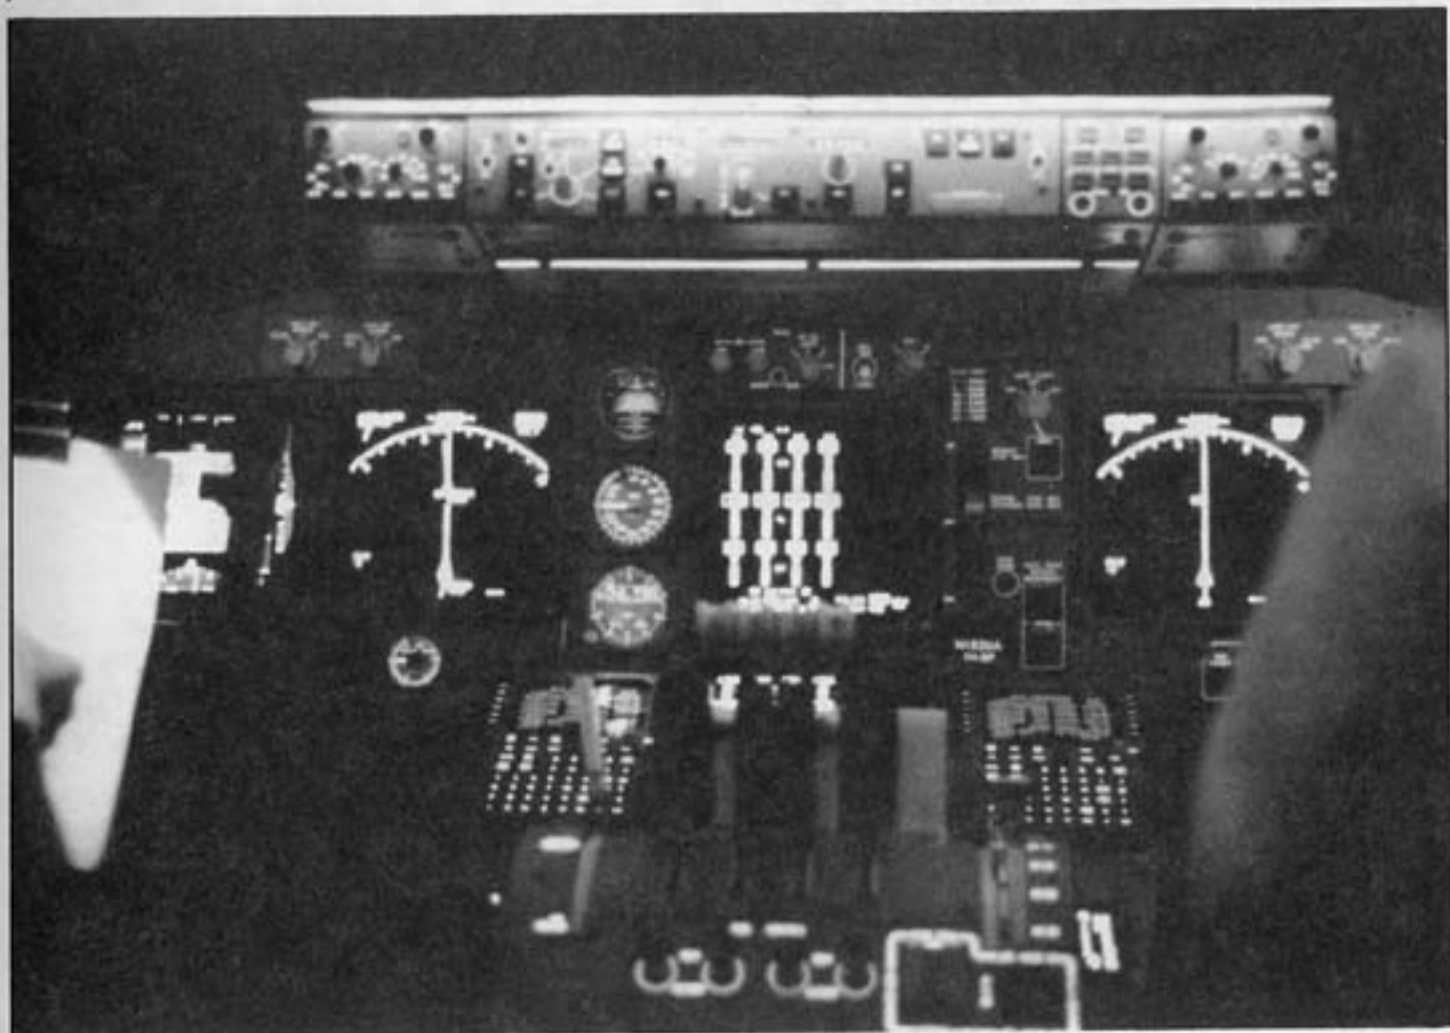

In The Clouds

by SeaCub

I always get to the airport early when I fly, and find myself parked in the seats at the gates, killing time, hoping to catch a glimpse of a hairy man or two passing through. If I got lucky, one of them may sit near me in the waiting area, giving me ample time to drink in those body parts I can see, and fantasize about those I can't. I've entertained thoughts of trying to join the Mile-High Club with some hairy guy, but I've never been able to overcome my innate shyness or figure out exactly how we would manage to do the deed, even on a sparsely populated flight.

This particular slam-bam Thursday-Friday trip, from my headquarters to the regional office in Kansas City was no different. I had, once again, been booked on an ugly flight, seated somewhere between the hyperactive non-stop talking section and the one reserved for screaming babies. I arrived in Kansas City late in the evening and took a cab straight to my hotel.

I awoke the next morning, my hand grasping my cock, which was at full attention. I stepped into the shower, and had just begun to work out the problem of my hardon when the phone rang. It was the front desk telling me my first meeting had been moved up a half hour. To complete the picture of a lousy trip, I found I'd forgotten underwear for the day. Nevertheless, as I slid on my slacks, I found something mildly exciting about the idea of standing up there in my meeting later, pitching our new marketing plan to a bunch of straight Midwestern bureaucrats with only a thin layer of fabric between them and my most prized possession.

My meetings went well and the day wrapped up earlier than expected. When I got out of the final pitch, I had a phone message telling me that I didn't have to fly back commercial, that a driver would take me to the corporate jet to bring me back directly home.

At the airport, I was driven directly to a small jet. The captain, who introduced himself as Paul, was a short man, somewhat squat, in his early 50s with close-cropped, thinning gray hair. We exchanged pleasantries and he explained that I'd be the only passenger on the flight. He showed me where to stash my suitcase in the hull of the plane and told me to go ahead and get on board, that we would be leaving as soon as the co-pilot, Andy, finished the pre-flight check.

I settled in a seat a couple of rows from the door, where the seats face one another. Finally able to relax, my morning's hardon drifted back to me. My cock began to twitch.

"Damn!" I thought as I reached down to adjust my cock through the thin fabric of my pants. After pointing it down my leg, I couldn't resist the temptation to give it a few playful squeezes, just enough to tide me over through the long flight.

The co-pilot, Andy, had just entered the airplane. I was in the process of giving myself one last squeeze when I looked up and saw the man staring down at me.

He had coal black hair, thinning just a little in front, and just a touch of gray on the sides. His beard, however, was as thick as carpet and black as a crow. It was neatly trimmed, but not excessively; enough so that there was some shape and contour to it. His blue short-sleeved pilot's shirt let enough skin show to convince me that this stud was fur-covered from head to foot. His arms were covered with dark black hair. He had reached up and removed his sunglasses, which he still held in front of himself. I could tell, even from as far away as where I was sitting, that the backs of his fingers each had its own patch of black hair. I stopped myself in mid-grope, my mouth suddenly dry. Andy nodded my direction.

"Hi," he said, his voice deep and resonant. "Getting comfortable?"

I still had my hand on my cock, which had stiffened even more at the sight of him. "I...er...was...ahh..." I began to stammer, unsure of what to say and afraid to move my hand for fear he would clearly see evidence of my erection through my pants. He had to notice, I thought, but he did not let on that he had.

"Good idea," he said. I must have looked confused. "Getting comfortable. We could have a long and bumpy ride ahead of us." With that double entendre he turned and climbed into the cockpit, but glanced back over his shoulder long enough to let me see a slight smile pass over his lips beneath the thick bush of moustache. And was that a raised eyebrow I saw?

I was still stunned and hadn't moved when I heard Paul on the stairs. I hastily grabbed a paperback I'd been ignoring and spread it over my crotch. As he closed the door behind him, Paul said, "Better go ahead and buckle up, Mr. Ralston. We'll be taking off in just a few minutes."

Andy continued to check the instruments from the cockpit, but once again looked in my direction over his shoulder. "After we level out, you might want to come sit in the jumpseat behind the cockpit," he said. "You might enjoy the view."

Another double entendre. Was that a come-on to sit up there and drink in his furry good looks? Could be.

Takeoff was routine, and we had soon leveled off. I found myself bored, reading through my mystery novel, but not really paying that close attention to what was happening. I caught myself having to go back and re-read passages over and over.

What the fuck, I thought. We were at "cruising" altitude. Even if Andy was somewhat of an egotist—and who wouldn't be if they looked like him—he was still a hot egotist. Nothing wrong with taking in the sight of him for a while, breathing deep of his manly scent.

I unbuckled from my seat and walked the short distance to the doorway of the cockpit, folded down the jumpseat and sat.

"Thought I'd take you up on that offer of a better view," I said, making it a point to address my comment to both Paul and Andy. I then turned to Andy, extending my hand. "I'm..."

"Don Ralston," he finished for me. He turned slightly in his seat and grasped my hand in his beefy paw, squeezing just slightly. I squeezed back, gazing down into the valley of the "V" of his shirt that was created when he turned, staring into the dense forest of dark curly hair. "I always check the manifest to see who our guests are."

He was looking at me, and it was then I noticed his eyes. They were deep blue, the same deep blue as the sky outside the window that separated us from the stratosphere. I couldn't quit looking at them, long after I should have. I felt the color rise in my cheeks, and well as the blood once again surging into my dick. Andy squeezed again, and it was only then that I realized we were still clasping each other's hands. He smiled slightly as he broke contact, the corners of his eyes crinkling slightly. I felt flustered again, and quickly turned my gaze to the front, where I could see the sun beginning to slip toward the horizon.

"It's really beautiful," I said, then decided to plunge ahead with a not-so-subtle double-entendre of my own. "The sights up here are breathtaking."

I looked out of the corner of my eye and thought I saw another smile pass over Andy's face. Good. It wasn't lost on him. Every once in a while I would see Andy's eyes dart sideways, as if he was trying to catch me in the act. And every once in a while, our eyes would meet, and we would both quickly look away.

I managed to glance, too, at Andy's hands. No rings. Hmmmm, another encouraging sign.

"I think I'm going to head back," I said finally. "It's nearly dark, so I guess the show is over." I stood to leave, and realized that my cock had remained hard throughout my visit. I remained stooped over to hide that fact as I backed up enough to get out of the line of their peripheral sight. I went back to my seat, stretched out with my feet on the seat facing me, and tried to find the thread of the story I had long since lost. I found myself nodding after a short while.

"Hey," was the next thing I heard as I felt my shoulder being shaken slightly.

"Mmmmm..." I muttered sleepily, opening one eye enough to let my gaze travel up the hairy arm attached to the hand that was shaking me. I opened the other eye as my vision focused on the silhouette of Andy, backlit by the cabin lights.

"Care for some company?" he asked. "Paul can handle things for a while."

"Sure," I said, still a little sleepy. Even in the dim light, I could see that Andy was smiling, and I heard the amusement in his voice as he asked, "Are you done with the light?"

"Hmmm? Yeah," I said, and it was then I could see what had amused him. The spot of bright light was focused on my lap, where the book had been earlier. But now it was as if the circus had come to my pants: The big-top had risen in my slacks, and even the pleats were stretched to their limit as my turgid unrestrained cock was standing upright inside them. A dark circle on the fabric indicated I had leaked some pre-cum during my short nap.

"Mind if I sit?" Andy asked as he clicked off the light, the amusement still in his voice, knowing that I must be embarrassed by being caught with a raging hardon.

"Please do," I said as I removed my feet from the seat across from me, expecting Andy to plant himself there. Instead he crossed in front of me and stood by the seat to my left. He grunted as he stretched his arms overhead, leaning back and slightly arching his back. He was all but rubbing his crotch in my face. I could see a good-sized bulge inside his navy blue slacks, and I actually caught myself reaching upward, only to realize what I was doing in time to instead use the hand to brush back my hair.

"Rrrrr," he growled as he stretched, putting his hands on his hips and thrusting his pelvis even closer to my face. "I sure get stiff sitting up there."

He flopped down on the seat next to me and turned slightly, facing me. "I'll bet you do, too."

There was almost no doubt what he was doing here, but I decided to play the game. "It comes and goes," I said casually.

"We've never flown you before, have we?" he asked. "I'm sure I would have remembered you." He let his left hand dangle off the armrest separating us, just an inch or so above my thigh.

"No, this is my first time with you...and Paul. I usually fly commercial."

Andy uncurled his fingers and let them brush lightly the top of my thigh. I inhaled sharply and spread my legs slightly to send him the message to continue.

"That's no way to enjoy flying," he said, curling and uncurling his fingers so that just the tips brushed my thigh. I felt my cock, already hard as steel from the nap, stiffen even more. All the way down to my now-tingling buttocks.

"I must be living right in the eyes of my boss for him to let me fly back on the corporate plane," I said.

"You must be a pretty special guy." He let his hand drop heavily on my thigh and gave it a squeeze.

"No, just your average working stiff," I said smiling, knowing full well he knew what I meant, and what I wanted him to do. He did it.

"There's that word 'stiff' again," he smiled, sliding his hand up my thigh to grasp my cock through my slacks. "Sure seems to be coming up in conversation a lot tonight."

"Uh, yeah," was all I could manage, my mouth suddenly dry. I leaned my head back and closed my eyes.

Without a word the pilot was down on his knees in front of me, pulling the waistband of my slacks upward with his left hand so that he could tug my zipper down with one smooth motion. His hand snaked inside my pants and wrapped around my cock, snaking it outside my fly.

I uttered a guttural moan as his warm hand held my thick rod, his thumb caressing the underside just below the head.

"We'll have to see if we can't work some of that stiffness out," he said as he released my cock long enough to reach back into my pants and pull out my balls. They hung down from the gaping fly of my slacks, heavy, full and loaded for action.

"Nice balls, man," Andy growled as he hefted the twin orbs in their loose sack. "Real nice."

"Mmmm." I leaned back further in the seat and spread my legs as much as I could. A thought suddenly crossed my mind. "What about...?"

"What about Paul?" Andy asked, then leaned forward to lick my cock from base to just below the head, pausing to flick the delicate underside with his tongue. He leaned back and looked up at me, smiling, the whites of his teeth contrasting sharply with the blackness of his beard in the half-light of the cabin. "What do you think, he's going to walk back here? I don't think so. We can get down to business."

He reached up to my waist, undid my belt, the clasp of my slacks, and the inside button, all within about two seconds. He reached under my ass, grabbed a handful of the seat of my pants, and tugged my slacks down to my knees. My cock slapped upward against my stomach, leaving a small wet spot of pre-cum on the tail of my shirt.

"There. That's a good start," Andy said, reaching forward and grabbing my pecs through my shirt, massaging them roughly.

"I'll race you the rest of the way."

I needed no encouragement. By the time I had shed my shirt, shoes and socks, the man was standing in front of me, naked but for his shirt.

His thighs were massive, muscled and pelted with thick curly hair. He stood with his legs spread about shoulder-width apart, and the heady musk of ball-sweat, manly but not overpowering, wafted toward me. His cockhead poked slightly through the parted tail of his shirt.

"I guess you win," he teased, saving the unveiling of his chest for last. He reached up and began unbuttoning his shirt. "That means you get the prize." I gasped audibly as his shirt fluttered to the cabin floor. His chest and torso were even better than I had imagined. The fur covered his full front, thick on his pecs and thicker still over his sternum. His stomach was also covered from side to side with the same pelt. He had a marked tan line. In the semi-darkness, it almost looked as if he were wearing briefs, the whiteness of his skin was so stark. The trail of hair leading down to his dense bush of pubic hair stood out against the paleness of his skin. His dick was not overly long, but certainly not lacking. It was thick and barely narrowed behind the flared mushroom head, as so many dicks do. His balls were covered with a wiry fuzz that all but obscured them.

He took a half step forward and again reached out to my chest, this time grabbing my erect nipples and giving them a twist. The twinge of slight pain mixed with pleasure was all the inspiration I needed to lean forward until I could nuzzle his soft belly, licking from side to side. I brushed it back and forth with my moustache.

I reached behind him and grabbed the cheeks of his ass, delighted to discover that, as I had expected, they too were covered with fuzz. My hands moved upward and I felt the fuzz that covered his lower—and I surmised, his upper—back as well.

I nibbled my way down the trail of hair as Andy placed his paws on my shoulders, a steady growl rumbling from his throat. I felt his cock poke against my neck as I licked and chewed my way through his bush. I reached up with one hand and lightly cupped his balls, my fingertips brushing the fuzz that covered them. With my other hand I grabbed his dick, positioned it, and swallowed it to the base in one gulp.

Andy thrust his hips forward violently, burying my nose in his bush even further. I breathed deeply of his musky maleness through my nose as I used my tongue to lap at his cock from the base to just under the head. He moved his hands to either side of my head, cupping my ears. I could still hear his growl of approval.

I relinquished the cock up to the head after several seconds, and opened my mouth around it enough to draw in a couple of deep breaths of air before plunging back down its length. I bobbed my head up and down his shaft, now slick with my saliva. Andy rocked his hips in rhythm as I reached between his asscheeks and gently massaged his puckered, hairy anus with the middle finger of my free hand.

Suddenly, I felt his hands in my armpits, and the next thing I knew I was on my feet, his mouth covering mine in a warm kiss. His arms were around me and he squeezed me in a breathtaking bear hug.

He broke the liplock and asked in a deep bedroom voice, "Do you like to fuck?"

"Mmmm, yeah," I moaned as I nuzzled the five-o'clock growth under his beard line.

"Me too," he whispered. "Do you like to get fucked?"

"Mnnn, only by hairy pilots," I said, licking upward toward his ear.

"Then let's do it," he said, grabbing me by the ass and lowering me to the aisle between the seats. I looked anxiously toward the cockpit and noticed the curtain had been drawn shut.

With one hand Andy reached down and massaged my pecs again, while he rummaged through the pocket of his shirt with the other. He produced a small leather pouch and removed a small clear bottle of lube and two rubbers. "You are going to remember your first flight on the company jet," he said, flicking open the cap on the bottle and squeezing a glob of lube onto his fingertips. He walked toward me on his knees, then lifted his legs over mine until he was straddling me. He reached his hand behind to apply the lube to his buttocks. "Oh, yeah," he moaned as he massaged the slickness into his hairy rectum. With his other hand he reached down and picked up one of the rubber packets, tearing it open with his teeth. He stopped his lube job long enough to squirt a small glob inside the condom, then rolled it down the length of my cock. He squeezed a third mass of lube into his fist, then grabbed my hooded dick and fisted the lube thoroughly over it, preparing it for entry.

He scooted forward on his knees until his asshole made contact with the head of my dick. The heat of his hole made me gasp. Andy reached behind himself with one hand to steer my cock inside him while bracing himself with his other hand firmly on my chest. He hissed as he sharply inhaled, slowly lowering himself onto my cock. The sight of this hairy beast grimacing slightly above me as the heat of his tight chute enveloped more and more of my dick caused my eyes to roll back in ecstasy.

My rod was about halfway planted into his ass when the airplane hit an air pocket. The craft descended suddenly, and in a flash my shaft was buried to the hilt in Andy's furry butt. He hissed again, the grimace on his face turning into a blissful grin of pure lust.

"Sorry 'bout that," Paul shouted from behind the cockpit curtain. "It might get a little rough."

"No problem," Andy and I shouted back in unison, smiling at each other as our eyes locked. The vibrations of the airplane were traveling through my entire body, especially my pelvis, and I was sure Andy could feel the slight rhythmic pitching of the airplane through the cock buried in his butt.

He raised up on his knees, his asshole tugging tightly at me as it slid up the length of my pole. He moved back down just as slowly. He repeated the motion, this time a little faster, then again, faster still. Within a few seconds he had begun a steady pumping motion, while I began to pump my hips in time to him.

I reached up and cupped his furry pecs in my hands, waves of man-lust rushing through me. Andy threw back his head, small beads of sweat breaking out on his forehead as he rode my cock with increasing abandon. I thrust harder and harder, my dick held tightly by the sweet suction of his manhole. Andy's cock bounced against the soft, brown fur of my chest, a ribbon of pre-cum hanging from the head.

I was getting closer and closer, my balls tightening as the sweet joy in them prepared to burst forth. The plane's pitching and shuddering had also become more pronounced, only heightening our pleasure.

I stifled a scream as the red-hot jism boiled out of my balls and shot again and again and again into the tight confines of Andy's ass.

"Oh, yeah, man, do it. Do it!" Andy panted as he worked his asshole to milkevery last drop from my dick. It took what seemed like several minutes for me to finish pumping my hot load into his ass. As the last spasm of release subsided, Andy leaned forward again, reaching back to remove my still-hard meat from his behind, gently squeezing the last bit of cum into the rubber before removing it. He held up the condom in the dim light.

"You should be about a quart low now," he smiled as he held up the rubber for me to see the spunk that caused it to sag heavily between his fingers. "Not bad," he added as he tied it off.

Meanwhile, I had found the bottle of lube I had been fishing for on the floor. "I think it's your turn," I said as I squeezed a generous glob of the slickness onto my fingertips.

Andy took the hint and moved off me, leaning back on his haunches to stroke his fat dick, watching me as I braced my feet on the seatbacks on either side of the aisle. I inserted first one, then two, then three fingers up my now well-lubed butt. He watched fascinated as he tore open the second rubber and rolled it slowly down his cock. He scooted forward on his knees and positioned his cockhead at the entrance to my chute.

"Don't just stand there, Fuzz Face," I joked. "Do something..." I gasped as Andy followed my orders, plunging his shaft past my tight pucker. Only half a beat after achieving entry, he pressed forward steadily until he was balls-deep into my hole. I looked up to see an animal-like glow in those steely eyes as he began a slow pumping motion.

I concentrated on tightening and loosening my hole to provide him the same warm milking action he had given me. Andy leaned forward, bracing himself with his arms on the seatbacks, giving me a good view of the forest of dense hair in his armpits, and a whiff of the musty maleness that emanated from them.

Andy's thrusts began to quicken and I could feel his furry ballsac brush against my ass. He began a deep growl, a growl that grew louder as he pounded my chute harder and harder. I could feel his fat dick expand even further, and I sensed the onset of his orgasm. I rubbed my hands back and forth across his furry chest and grabbed a handful of the longer fur between his pecs. I tugged at the fur with one hand while tweaking first one, then the other nipple with my other hand.

"Huhhh-ummm." Andy's growl had turned into one of animal pleasure as I felt wave after wave of his hot cum fill the rubber inside me. Sweat dripped off his beard and sprinkled my chest. I reached down and grabbed my own dick, made hard again by his fierce ride. Just a couple of tugs and I shot a load over my chest and stomach, the throes of release causing my asshole to clench and unclench and milk his cock even more.

When the last wave had passed, Andy leaned forward, collapsing on top of me, his mouth nuzzling and nipping my neck as his beard caressed my chin.

I don't remember much of the rest of the flight. After we had recovered, we stood up and dressed. I remember how sad I was to watch him tuck that now-soft but oh-so-wonderful cock of his back into his underwear. And the regret at seeing those hairy pecs once again covered by his pilot's shirt. But as I finished dressing, I reached out and adjusted the wings on his chest and smiled, knowing that we would certainly be recreating this little bit of turbulence on the ground again and again.

HINDSIGHTS

Contests: Gorgeous men with sweaty (perhaps hairy) palms, making themselves vulnerable before crowds of their peers. They seem to be happening all across the world, culminating in the quest for Mr. International Bear, that end-all, be-all contest taking place President's Day Weekend in San Francisco. Following are some of the regional highlights on the road to Bear Rendezvous.

The denim was wet. The leather was wet. So were the crowding and panting men at LA's Faultline on 14 January 1995.

It was the Mr. Southern California Bear Contest. The best flesh of the Southland was out that night.

Twelve men entered. Three men placed, with first place being won by Will Pettite; first runner up was David Davis; second runner-up was Mark Malan.

Judges included David Dysart, founding member of the Bears of San Francisco; David Allison, International Bear Cub 1993; Bruno, Producer/Director of the Gay Erotic Video Awards; Luke Owens, Editor of Cuir Magazine and George Puddephatt, founding President of Blackjack Bears of Las Vegas. The emcee was Bill Byrne, winner of the 1995 Mr. San Francisco Bear title.

It All Comes Out In The End

By Luke Mauerman *

Assuming you actually read this magazine instead of just looking at the pictures ("Huh? Is this going to get me laid?"), you'll notice someone really read our beads for not covering the contest stuff in Washington, DC in October.

Tim Reynolds from Maryland won. Millions more entered, and the event was a huge success, even though we couldn't make it. You'll be hearing much more on next year's event from our new Maryland correspondent.

Every October the large and the small converge on Orlando, Florida, to see the sights and to prey at the walls of the Full Moon Saloon. It's rare to have such a great place to hang out as can be found here. Bob Graves, Full Moon Proprietor, is deservedly proud of his open-air, patticed bar. It's like a picnic every day at the Full Moon Saloon. Only the guys get raunchy, if you think you can handle that.

They have a contest too. Theirs is one of the best in the country, which could just be because it takes them all of a sunny weekend to do it. San Francisco's infamous and large Lurch emceed the event. Winners? Papa Bear was Bob Cassie; Grizzly Bear was David Woerner and the Cub slot was tied up between Dale Bowman and Jim Anderson.

See the calibre of people who can get together in the name of a contest? Next time we want to see your ass there up on stage.

Take a look at what you're missing if you don't go to Columbus, Ohio, every now and then. Pictured above are some members of the CUB, Columbus Ursine Brotherhood. This was their 2nd anniversary party.

....Hindsights continues on page 18

We've already proved to you that Texans know how to party. Did that in our Texas issue awhile back (just you never mind how long ago it was...). Pictured here above are the Lone Star Bears, Dallas's answer for fine fur festivities. This was taken last summer, just to give y'all a good reminder of the parties you can expect just a few rainy months from now. It was their Grizzly Hunt 1994. If you behave, they might let you come along in 1995.

Remember the insightful piece in last time's Hindsights about the Blue-Grass Bears guys camping in concrete tee-pees at Mammoth Cave and shit? Well it was written by the ubiquitous and very alert Jim Adams. Sorry we forgot the mention. He deserves all the plugging he can get. And best wishes to him in his new life in Washington, DC.

"I apologize that my hind end is not hairy. It's the big dick that counts, anyway. If you, or anyone you know has a hairy ass, please forward pictures to me quick, before my mom sees this. Thanks."

Old Leather Strap Gag

Where to use it

It's up to you to find a place to bolt your buddy. You can make something similar to the rack in this drawing, but any old place'll do. Try squatting, bent over at various degrees, face down. Hell, you can even bolt him to the floor and work him over from there.

What you need

1. A old, hopefully funky leather belt, cut to a size that will fit around your head like a gag, leaving the buckle intact.
2. A carriage bolt, 3/8" x 5" with washer and wing nut.
3. One piece of PVC flexible tube, 3/8" by 12" long.
4. A pack of rivets big enough to hold the belt when doubled in half. Nuts or bolts will also work here.

To assemble

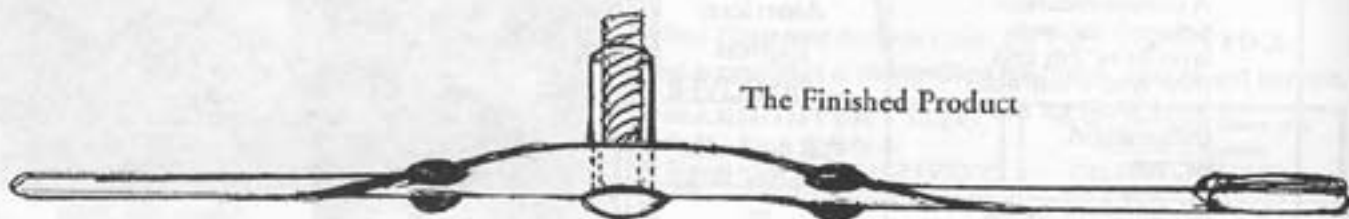

After belt is cut to size, poke a hole in the center big enough so the carriage bolt will fit snugly. Then poke holes for the buckle.

Push the bolt through the center hole from the inside out and slide washer on.

Double the belt over the bolt. Measure about 3" from either side and mark the center. Poke holes and attach rivets. This makes the gag 6" long.

Slide the PVC tube onto the bolt, making sure the butt's right up to the washer. Cut excess tube off. This is what he'll chomp on. The tube prevents his teeth from contacting the bolt—this could piss off a good fuckbuddy.

BARE PAUSE

John Dibelka

Commencement

Hubbel Gardner raises his mug, toasts, "Hey—here's to commencement," and drinks.

Katie Morosky sips, bites her lip, glances at Hubbel and answers, "A funny word for 'the end.'"

It is 1936, sometime in spring, and they are drinking to the fact they're both about to graduate from college. But poor Katie is trying to hold onto all the wrong things.

Commencement has much less to do with what's ending than with what's about to begin. The whole point of going to college, like the whole point of our every experience, is to come out of it better prepared to move on. Life flows in just one direction. The wise and healthy learn how to go with it. The strong and the lucky learn how to adapt the course so they can have a good time on the ride.

What's past is prologue. Useful, but only for telling us where we are.

Summer has just ended as I write this. It is 1994.

No leaves turn red, or gold, or yellow where I live; few fall. No geese flock off southward honking, towing hordes of hapless tourists. No rainy season starts—or ends. Nothing dramatic shifts. No cosmic gong goes off, much to my non-native neighbors' disgust.

The days just go on getting shorter; the nights cooler and more conducive to sleep; the shadows at midday less perfectly outlined but longer, more complex and charged with an oblique intrigue. The wind feels different. Sharper, somehow. More important, maybe. Newly old.

But I find I don't mind autumn's advent. I'll put up the top on my car. Some night soon I'll shut my kitchen window. This Saturday I plan to clean the heater flue and check the pilot light.

All these tasks fall in a cycle I find comforting and right. In turn, they're all The Thing That Happens Next. I grasped long ago how to go with them. I figured out recently how to adapt their course. Now I've commenced to have fun with the ride.

And I have gone back to school. Not, the way Katie might want to, to try to stay young or to be young again, but because I have so much to learn.

To me it seems correct that school should start again in autumn. Fall is for harvesting; fall is for gathering; fall is the time to connect and appraise: all of the processes which lead to learning. Summer is too energetic to teach, too full of everything everywhere and all at once, too completely dedicated to pursuits which all appear to have no end.

Autumn teaches us, however, these appearances deceive.

Everything, everywhere, at some time ends.

All of the most ancient peoples knew this, which is one of the limitless numbers of reasons to go back to school. Everything a human being can experience is cyclical, from alpha to omega and, eventually, back. Anyone who thinks he can't learn something from the past to help him grow into the future is a fool. Anyone who lets himself imagine he's exempt from death is doomed.

I spent my summer with crowds of the doomed. Feeling ever more like some Greek Chorus, I tailed troupes of actors bent on mouthing lines and hitting marks, observing and commenting on their rote actions and waiting to sum up the story they told.

Every story they told reeked of hubris.

The Greek concept hubris: another great reason to go back to school. The wellspring of every tragedy; the quintessential human failing; the one thing that separates us from the animals: the complex delusion that lets us all tell ourselves, "I am better than and separate from the world."

Ah, what fools we mortals be.

We are natural phenomena, certainly complex and glorious but no less subject to the checked and balanced systems of our infinitely interdependent existence than ants and oceans, sunflowers and puffs of smoke. We have no real power over anything outside ourselves. The most we can do is speed up or slow down the dynamics by which we live, and even that the best of us can manage only for a while.

The Greeks knew this and couldn't bear it. They decided to cope by inventing some gods to take some of the lumps out of living their lives in a cosmos which could not have cared less for them. All of us do this, and we always have. Most humans like to see those who come after us learn what we learned, but more quickly and easily, so they can go on to learn something new. We ease this process by making up gods, like sets of training wheels for our kid philosophers whose sense of balance hasn't yet matured.

Lately, however, it seems we reward most those kids who refuse to grow up. The ones who try hardest to hold on to all the wrong things. The ones who zoom around, tottering from one side wheel to the other hollering "my god can beat up your god with a blindfold on and both hands tied behind his back."

We indulge these children because they attract us. Nobody likes to feel powerless, and they appear to have power. We watch them to learn to be like them, without understanding just how much like us they are. They have no power over nature. Every one will die. The sole power they have is to make us keep watching them. When we stop they become powerless, too.

But we don't stop very often. And when we do, we do not stop for long. We prefer the illusion. We prefer to exercise the power others give us over them to blunt the pain of knowing we give others power over us. We prefer to think someone can make us all matter, when matter is all that we are. We prefer not to see we mean nothing at all other than what we mean to each other. We prefer not to look at our vast human past and learn nothing unchanging can go on forever.

This is the way of the world.

Without end.

Amen.

So now you know why empires fall, and why there will always be Things To Do, and why those who finally inherit the earth will be most likely some form of cockroach, and why sports stars make lousy heroes.

Which means you know everything I know, now, too.

Including, if you think about it, why I've decided to stop writing "Bare Pause."

I have learned and grown writing this column. I hope you have learned and grown reading along.

I have always, however, had a special respect for those people who shut up as soon as they've said all they know.

I've commenced to be one of them while I learn more.

Protecting Gay Unions

I'm not old enough to remember who it was that sang "We Are Family," but I don't think it was Anita Bryant.

Society still does not recognize, for the most part, gay relationships. Some cities now have domestic partnership laws which, although not quite the same as a full blown marriage, is a pretty good start.

Most gay couples I know aren't particularly interested in whether or not straight society approves of their relationship. We tend not to give a damn if the church declines to pat us on the head and bless our unions. And we frankly don't care if the likes of Pat Robertson and Jerry Falwell alternate between ignoring our existence and wagging their fingers at us.

But we do care when it comes to getting the same protections for ourselves that other couples have.

If you live in a jurisdiction with a domestic partnership law, register your domestic partnership. Such a registration won't quite give you a government stamp of approval; but it will provide precedent and documentation for your relationship, and therefore, some degree of legal protection.

The theory behind domestic partnerships is that many different kinds of social units exist beyond traditional marriage. Some people, like gay couples, simply cannot marry because the law does not allow it. Others, like unmarried heterosexual couples, may choose not to marry for a whole host of reasons. Whatever the actual circumstances, enough tax-paying people have abandoned the Ozzie and Harriet mold that it simply no longer makes sense for the government to completely ignore them.

In fact, census data suggest that traditional families, as most people understand the concept, make up a minority of households in the United States. Thus, to deny any recognition to couples other than legally married ones is tyranny of the minority over the majority.

More and more jurisdictions are allowing unmarried domestic partners to register their unions. This is the good news. The bad news is that we don't know at this point just how much protection a domestic partnership provides. There has been no litigation over the extent to which a domestic partnership goes. Thus we do not know if it automatically allows partners to make emergency medical decisions for one another, if it allows a partner to inherit property if there is no will, if it will shield one partner from being forced to testify in court against the other, or what impact it has on child custody issues. We just don't know. We won't know until litigation actually takes place on these issues. And until we do know, you are well-advised to assume the worst and add as many layers of protection as possible.

Every gay couple should have in place durable powers of attorney, wills and authorizations to the other to make decisions concerning medical care. You may also wish to place your assets in trust, with each other as the beneficiary. Let's take the last one first. Wills are wonderful things but they can be challenged by greedy or homophobic relatives. Sometimes those challenges succeed; other times they don't.

A trust accomplishes the same thing in a much more efficient fashion. Control is more important than ownership. That is, the person who uses and benefits from property is in a much better position than the person who owns title to it. By placing your assets in trust, you give up official ownership of them but retain control. And, when one of you dies, the other automatically continues to have full control over the property; it doesn't even need to go through probate court. It is also virtually impossible to challenge.

The drawback to a trust is that once property has been placed in trust it cannot be removed from the trust without the consent of the trustee. Since most couples creating such a trust will appoint both themselves trustees, it means that if the relationship breaks up you can only get your own property back with your lover's consent. There are ways around this issue, but none of them are easy. So, whether you wish to create a trust depends entirely upon whether you are reasonably certain that your relationship will last until death do us part, and if you trust your lover, in the event of a breakup, to do the right thing.

If such is not the case for you, then you should have wills in place. Do not say anything in the will that indicates you are gay or that the beneficiary is your lover. That will give homophobic relatives and judges just the handle they need to have the will set aside on grounds that it violates public policy.

What you should clearly and unequivocally say is whom you wish to handle your affairs in the event of your demise, as well as whom you wish to inherit your property. If no such will exists, decisions will be made by your relatives, who may or may not follow your instructions. Your lover will have no rights to inherit or to make any decisions about you in the absence of a will.

Also very important are durable powers of attorney and letters of instruction concerning emergency medical care. Simply put, your lover will not be part of the decision-making process, and may even be excluded from the hospital, unless your instructions to the contrary are clear. Remember the hell Sharon Kowalski's lover went through? You don't want the same thing to happen to those you love.

One important thing to consider is what exactly your wishes are in the event of a medical crisis. There are those who want to be allowed to die with dignity and with as little pain as possible; there are others who want to cling to life as long as they can; there are others whose wishes fall somewhere in between those two extremes.

You are entitled to decide into which of those categories you fall. Having made that decision, you need to find someone—your lover or a friend or relative—whom you are confident will carry out your wishes. If you want to be allowed to die with dignity, don't choose someone who will have ethical problems about that; by the same token, if you want to live as long as possible, don't pick someone from the Hemlock Society. I know that sounds like common sense, but you would be amazed at how little common sense people display over the most important decisions. And hospitals and doctors are notorious for ignoring clearly expressed wishes of patients; whomever you pick should be someone not afraid to stand up to those in positions of power and demand that they do as you said.

We do have the right to establish our lives in such a way that those we love have protection in the time of need. That protection is readily available. One never knows how soon it will be needed; it is therefore urgent that all gay people protect themselves to the extent they can.

HOW THIS AD SHIT WORKS

1. Dialing BEAR Voicemail. To use your credit card, call 1-800-347-BEAR. Don't panic, dude. The Bear Computer will tell you what to do. If you wanna charge it to your home phone, dial 1-900-HOT-BEAR. You can record your own personal greeting, answer someone else's, or talk to whoever else is jacking-off on the line.

2. To collect your voicemail messages. At the main menu, hit the star key. This takes you to your mailbox. Always press keys slowly and firmly. If you get stuck, the star key also takes you back to the main menu. If you're on a dirty bulletin board, leave your area code so the guys know where on the planet you're calling from.

3. Constructing your ad. When you're out to write your ad, keep this in mind: talk a bit about yourself and be real clear about the types of folks you'd like to meet through your ad. As much as possible, avoid telling us who you don't want to meet. No "no fats, no feds, or Lithuanians" shit. Be positive. And if you aren't, we'll edit the fuck out of the ad and turn you into more of a Pollyanna than you can believe.

4. Cost and duration. Personal ads are free if you're a BEAR BUDDY. Otherwise, they're $0.25/word/issue. Wanna change your ad? Send in $5. Wanna discontinue your ad? Write in and we'll pull it. You will have to pay to have a pulled ad put back in, though.

5. Deadline for BEAR 32 classifieds is March 8, 1995.

6. BEAR Postal Box Numbers. Available to US subscribers. Free to BEAR Buddies, including Foreign Buddies. Otherwise, add $5 to the total of your ad. A word to the wise: your own address will get you more responses.

7. Replying to a BEAR Postal Box Number. Listen good, 'cause you'd be surprised at how many guys fuck this up: Write your letter, put it in an envelope and seal it. On this envelope, put the fella's box number IN PENCIL, where you'd normally put a stamp. Put this letter along with $1 in a larger envelope and mail it to us. We always forward letters unopened if you've done what's called for here. But if you screw up, we open your letter and laugh. So do it right.

8. Personal vs. commercial ads. You know as well as I do what a personal ad is and isn't.

9. We reserve the right to edit personals for editorial consistency and clarity. We reserve the right to refuse any ad for any reason whatsoever.

11. Changing your ad: It's cool. But it'll cost you 5 bucks, and must be in writing.

12. Photo ads. We'll run a shot of your face or dick—but only once. Your photo must have a signed model release. Each photo sent to BEAR must be signed with your name and address on the back. They're printed first-come, first-served, so you may have to wait a few issues.

ROB

By day: a commercial real estate manager. By night: a sexy, oft-shirtless, tactile man who smokes cigars, rides horses and rides big hairy men's butts.

Rob is 37, and weighs in at a comfortable 190 pounds. Born in Arizona; moved to South Florida. Nowadays he's looking to head for the Cascades or Rockies with his lover. Wants to open a guest lodge with horses, water-skiing and a sling in every room.

Yeah—he's had his hand up a few men's butts along the way. Gets him off.

He's currently a member of the Gold Coast Bears in Florida. It's a good way for him to find the kind of men he likes: masculine, beefy, football-coach kinds of men. He has what it takes to give them something to get sore about.

The way Rob lives his life tells you he's a rugged sensualist. He's always working with his hands. His love of leather, cigars, horses and the mountains demonstrates the taste of a realistic, physical man. It's something he loves to bring out in others when he can.

But don't think all this slows him down much. When at Mardi Gras in New Orleans, Rob wound up atop a pool table with two other guys just going at it for the amusement of the crowd. It was quite a show until they ran out of lube. I hear they left the pool table a pretty sorry mess, too.

WOOF!

For those of you who had your PE electives converted to German and Home Ec.: WOOF originated as college football talk. It meant "cool" or "right on" or even "we're gonna whup yer ass on the playing field." Now, however, many people have adopted it as a mating call. Whatever significance it has for you, you can now experience this poignant phrase while riding Seattle's Metro buses.

We got a guy here at the shop who went to the University of Washington. He knows all about Huskies. They do "woof" quite a little bit. It's a culture thing. Useful for getting fucked, punched in the nose or fucked and punched in the nose at the same time. Hey. It's the '90s. Go for it. Woof!

BEAR in England

We made mention last issue that this publication has now legally made its way into the Kingdom of Britain. What we neglected to tell you was how you can order it while living there. Write SPB Distribution, Flat 2, 28 Carlton Road, Bournemouth, Dorset, BH1 3TG.

This is Graham, a kindly man from Düsseldorf. The above photo was taken on his last vacation through France's Brittany Region (Bretagne). This road sign, welcoming weary travelers, states the name of the approaching town as Bégard. But the Bretons don't take kindly to too much influence from those silly French who've occupied their land for the last several hundred years. The traditional Breton name is BEAR.

Now you know why it's here? By the way, Graham wants letters from guys all around the world. So drop him a note, through us here at the shop. If you're nice enough to him he may show you his dick.

DO NOT DO THIS!

According to a Sydney news article, an Australian man was recently hospitalized for having cut off his penis and testicles with chicken scissors.

Police dashed to his Canberra flat to retrieve the severed genitals in hopes they could be re-attached. But they found he had mashed them in a kitchen blender.

Come on, what could your wonderful sweet jewels have done to deserve such hatred? Besides, we always heard Australian men were uncut....

SHITS AND GIGGLES

These two North Carolina boys regularly strut their stuff in the mid-Atlantic area. They've got the fur, the cutes and the license plates to get what they want, and to scare more than a few North Carolinians along the way.

Ancient Chinese Secret

We recently came in contact with one of those timeless Asian things that gets revived in the Western world every now and again.

Ben Wa Balls are hollow and shiny, with bells inside. They tinkle. Or clang, depending on size. The traditional use for this pair of balls is to twirl them in your hand. The fluid motion stimulates the pressure-points in your palm and fingers, easing tension, curing irritability, dizziness, headaches and ignorance.

But wouldn't you know there's another application for the little fuckers? Put 'em up your butt and get fucked with them in there. It makes a pleasant noise, and will probably cure your irritability. At least for a day or so.

Wouldn't you also know, they're now available through Brush Creek Media? Kind of figures, doesn't it? $7.95 for a pair, and it comes in a killer fabric box. Like with all our mail order stuff, you have to add $3 shipping for the first item, $1 shipping for each item after that. And, you guessed it, California residents get to add 8.25% sales tax ('cause Asshole California Gov. Pete Wilson wants to buy his own set of Ben Wa balls, too).

The Ban on Boners, Revisited

In BEAR 25 we wrote about an Ohio law that would ban having boners in public. Well, the fundies in Montana are trying it there, this year. It's aimed at harassing nudie dance clubs, making them easier to close down.

But certain civil liberties go by the wayside with laws like this. What happens if you've just got a naturally big schlong? Does it mean you get to be frisked by a cop who thinks you're being turgid (means you have a hardon, guy) at the mall? If so, we encourage all readers to stop by Billings, MT, in tight cut-offs and cockrings. Put our police to work.

Stop, men. Take a breather and enjoy....

We had to share this with you.

His name's Dave, he lives in Northern California. He's kind of taken, but that doesn't mean we can't look.

Like The Nun Says.... I'm Dyin' to Surf The Net

The Internet. If you haven't already heard about it, well, you're living under a rock. So your big pal BEAR will rescue you from your hole and teach you how your life will be in the next century.

The Internet is not an actual computer waiting to take over the world. It's the sum of hundreds of computers linked together and run by various universities, government agencies and civilian computer hacks. Through it you can access instant, global electronic mail; participate in news discussions; subscribe to movies, pictures and articles; store data and talk live with other folks all across the planet. Picture it like a combination telephone, TV, personal computer and library. Different groups make different things available. They all do it through the Internet of linked computers.

With us so far?

The Internet is a loose defined, largely unregulated world. Which means you can't call the Internet Co., Inc., to get started. Local companies run their gateways into the Net, called nodes (yeah, here comes the geekspeak). You pay them a fee and they give you access.

Big companies like CompuServe and America On-Line may be good places for a beginner to start. They have global electronic mail and a wide array of services. But they aren't true Internet sites, so you won't get immediate access. They've been known to censor nasty material. And between you, me and the fence post, they're expensive as hell.

The first time you actually get onto the Internet it doesn't look like much. Words, bizarre lingo—where's this new world of information? It takes a little digging. Everything has a strange name. Here are a few relevant geek words:

-Live talk is called IRC (Internet Relay Chat). Discussion groups range from Islamic studies to cooking with persimmons to, #bearcave and #bearsden. Remember, this is global, and instant.

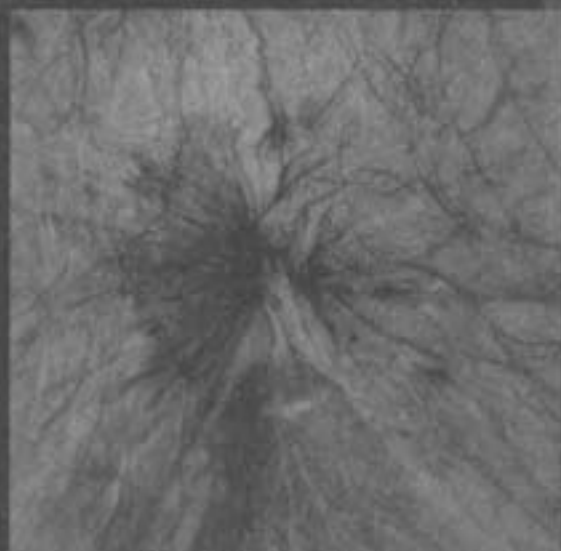

Asshole? Or Art?

Make no mistake, this is art. If it happens to be an asshole too, well, who are we to complain? A pictorial collection now exists in book form, called Sexual Art: Photographs That Test the Limits. It is by well-known photographic artist Michael A. Rosen.

Just to let you know: If your mother happened to see it lying on your coffee table, it would be a close contest to see who would hit the floor first—your unconscious mother or the book. It's that nasty.

Sexual Art features a wide array of gritty sexual activities performed by both men and women, including piercing, fisting and bondage.

The book's original photographs are currently on display at Mark I. Chester's studio-gallery in San Francisco, 1229 Folsom Street. They are up from March 3 to April 1. For information, call 415-292-3223.

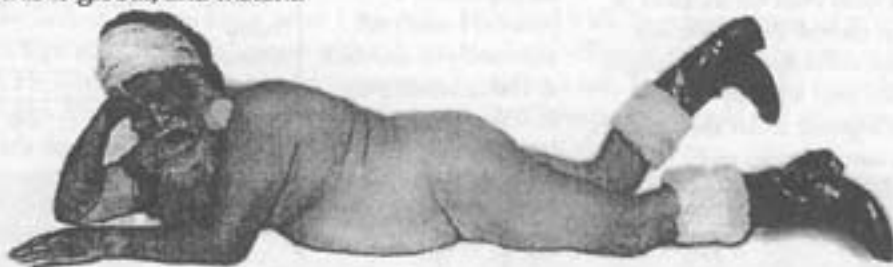

-Usenet Newsgroups carry on conversations by leaving a series of messages, one after another. It's like a bulletin board; every time you come back to it, someone else has added to the discussion. Thousands of newsgroups exist. I currently belong to alt.sex.bears, soc.motss (gay social issues/members-of-the-same-sex), alt.binaries.pictures.erotica.male (this is where you get dirty pictures) and alt.fan.blade-runner 'cause I wanna fuck Harrison Ford. My server adds at least 15 new newsgroups every day. Even saw something called alt.binaries.pictures.hamsters.duct-tape go by the other day. Something for everyone....

-The Bear's Digest is like a newsgroup. By subscribing you receive daily discussions about fucking, getting dumped, being furry or hating Wesley Crusher.

-ftp sites, or File Transfer Protocol. This gets a little complicated. Basically ftp means you're logging directly into someone else's computer. Most of us have little business inside the University of Paris' faculty phone directory. But if you want it, it's there. And you can get dirty pictures by ftp, when you know the right computer to talk to. This is how, eventually, movies and music will come straight into your home—upon request. For a fee.

Now you're catching on!

This is Bear/LA member Harry. Made it to the big time; here he's pictured in a "Santa Claus doesn't wear khakis" billboard ad that was plastered all over Los Angeles. "...till the sun comes up over Santa Monica Boulevard..."

GRUF Magazine
GReat Unshaven Faces
2235A Market St.
San Francisco, CA 94114

San Francisco has, since many of us can remember, been a source for alternative views, alternative lifestyles, alternatives all around. It is known among truckers across this country as "the Gay Bay." It has a reputation.

Keeping up with this reputation comes a new magazine that promises to bring onto the scene a new movement, a generation of men who finds that what they are really into is not just hair on men, but on their faces. From mutton-chops to mustaches to full-on beards, this new publication is, and will be, aimed at the promotion and appreciation of GRUF, GReat Unshaven Faces.

Stylistically done with all the tools that the computer age has brought, the premier issue speaks not only of facial hair, but of the interests of today's urban male whose life, while abundant with fornication and kink, also integrates alternative methods of healing, eclectic waves in music, and a sense that a GRUF man need not be one thing or another, but a compilation of all the forces of nature: sex, drugs, and rock-and-roll. "The GRUF sexuality spans from the hard leather look to a GRUFaced goatee on a 20-year-old homeboy who has never had on a pair of chaps," say the publishers, Sam Zifferblatt and Steve McDowell. They've taken what was a year ago a simple idea, a brainstorm, to the materialization of a dream that many of us have had—to market to the world what we, ourselves, look for in others.

GRUF is fresh, sexy, and ready to move into your hands with an alternative to the alternative. From steamy stories by Richard Locke to evocative photography that spills from the darkness of the libido. The GRUF movement has started. Bears were out there long before there was a magazine about them that brought them together. Now is the time for the men who have raised unique facial hair to a fetish to come together under the umbrella of GRUF. For a taste of GRUFness, sample copies and a sexy 1995 calendar are available through Brush Creek Media for $6.50 each, including shipping. Check it out.

The Guide to the Relationship Galaxy for Dates & Mates
Helen L. Grieco
Celestial Arts Press, Berkeley (it figures), CA
$9.95

This one's a little different. Not much fur; no dicks or buttocks. It's about feelings, relationships. It's about love.

Whump! Just lost your boner, didn't you? Well, keep reading, fella. This'll be good for you.

You see, here at BEAR we emphasize getting people's rocks off. Hopefully it's something we do a good job at. But what happens later? Say you find the perfect warm furry critter and want to keep him. We hereby bestow upon you tools for that very process.

I was at first drawn to the book by all the bright colors and spaceships on the cover (after awhile the penises around here get a little boring). Upon deeper probing into the book itself, I even learned a little bit.

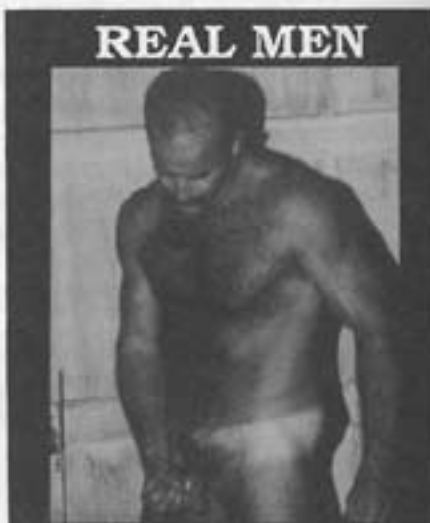

Helen Grieco writes in an up-to-date, somewhat touchy-feely, flower-child-like way and takes an oh-so-politically-correct approach to making relationships work. Her psychological information is sound. She understands how our childhood needs are the primary motives for the types of love we seek, even when such love is destructive. And she delivers complex, painful self-assessment exercises so well that you don't feel a thing.

Yet suddenly, you understand.

Sometimes the book bogs down in adolescent attempts at its space-travel theme. A big section on how to ask the right questions of a prospective "galaxy mate" gets a little sophomoric. But the information is sound. How many times have you been the last to discover your latest Mr. Right is actually an axe murderer? Happens to me all the time. The Guide teaches you how to fight, talk with, love or leave that special person.

Not many people out there can honestly say they don't need a book like this. You might even find use for it yourself; I promise I won't tell anyone if you do. And as Helen herself puts it, "You could just learn the Zodiac instead." Trust me, this is better.

Paul

This one's a home shoot. Paul headed for his Big Sky backyard with a good buddy and a camera.

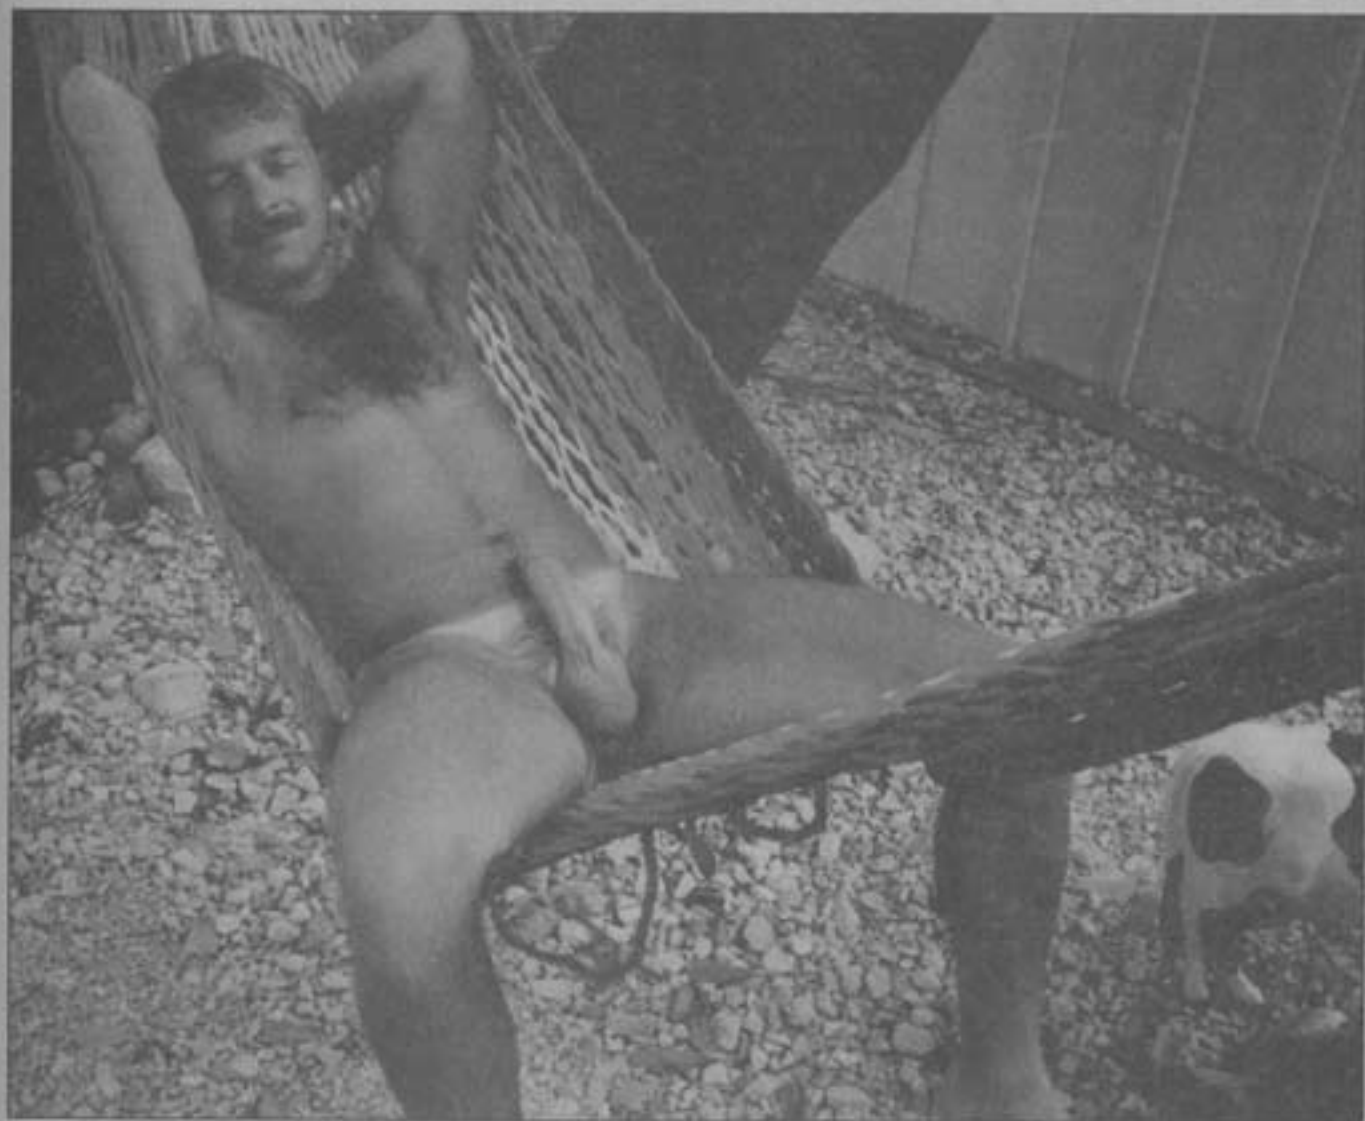

You're looking at a 33-year-old former farmboy. Friendly, spontaneous and not afraid to get into any trouble that comes his way. I asked him exactly how nasty he likes to get, because you can tell something gritty lurks behind that country-boy look of his. You know what? I was right. He's tried it all. Even been strung up to a tree and fucked raw.

Paul's a high school teacher—works with kids no one else is willing to take. Says he aims to be the role model he never had. He spends a lot of time in his community providing a safe, positive space for messed-up kids.

This is him After Hours. Paul's a man who can make a difference in the world and still show off his dick with a smile. That's the kind of balance that'll make this planet a better place to live.

Helping Hand

One of the more obvious reminders that our society isn't perfect is the homeless people on the streets of almost any city these days. Most of them are pretty sorry sights, but I have to admit I've found a few of them to be hot-looking.

One in particular had caught my attention. He seemed to hang around near where I worked. My company's offices were above a gas station and the dumpster for the building seemed to be one of his favorite places to look for stuff to recycle for money.

I took particular notice of him one evening as I was coming out the back door of the building near the dumpster when it seemed like he was heading straight for me. The thoughts I had about getting mugged vanished from my mind as he walked right past me, vaulted into the dumpster and started sorting out cans and bottles. He was about 5'10" with a stocky build, curly strawberry blonde hair, and a bushy reddish-brown beard. His clothes, as you might expect, were black with grease and dirt.

That image of him purposefully leaping into the dumpster was brought back to me the next Saturday when I was taking a batch of cans to a recycling pickup in front of a grocery store a few blocks away. He was ahead of me in line. He got his voucher and headed off to the grocery store. I checked-in my stuff and was heading to the store to cash in my voucher when I saw him come back out with a small bag of groceries.

Curious, I watched him move over to a low wall on the edge of the parking lot, sit down, and pull out a quart of milk, a jar of peanut butter and a package of crackers, and start eating.

On impulse, I walked over toward him. He eyed me a bit suspiciously as I came closer. "How's it going?"

"Hey...."

"Was wondering if you might want some work."

He looked a bit surprised. "Sure. But why ask me?"

I grinned. "I've seen the way you work at recycling, and like the fact that you buy food instead of cigarettes and booze."

"Fair enough. What kind of work?"

"I've got a big yard that needs mowing, and I need some help cleaning out my garage."

"What's the pay scale?"

"How about $7.50 an hour?"

He smiled at me for the first time. "Hell, I'd have taken $5! When do I start?"

"How about this afternoon?"

"I'm yours," He smiled at me again. It finally struck me just how handsome he was under all the grunge, and I found myself fantasizing about the alternate meaning of his response.

True to his word, he showed up on foot not ten minutes after I arrived home. I started him on mowing the lawn as I worked on cleaning up the inside of the house, and noticed that he was really busting ass on getting the lawn mowed and raked up, despite the heat of the day.

When he finished, he refused to set foot in the house since he was literally dripping sweat, which had washed out runnels in the grime on his skin. He was set to start in on the garage right then, but I stopped him.

"Hold it—you've been sweating out there in the sun for hours—you need to get something to drink and cool off. I don't want you falling over with heat exhaustion on me."

"I just want to do my job...."

"You can't do your job if you pass out. If you insist, I'll deduct the time you take for a break—but I consider it only fair for you to take a break, given how hot it is today." I looked at him for a moment, then clapped him on the shoulder. "You don't have to prove anything."

He gave me a shy smile and a "thanks."

After a rest in the shade and a couple big glasses of lemonade, we started on the garage. I purposely kept the pace down, and after a bit of chitchat about the junk I had accumulated, I finally got around to asking him how he'd wound up homeless.

He sighed. "Bad luck and dumb pride, I guess. You know how the timber industry fell on its ass. I got laid off, hit the end of my unemployment, and was too damn proud to apply for welfare until I was so overdue on my rent the landlord tossed me out. No address, no welfare—makes it harder and harder to find a real job. I drank a lot for a while. Then decided I should at least try to keep what's left of my self-respect. So I dropped the booze and started the recycling bit. It's not easy, but at least it keeps me fed and most of my stuff in a secure locker."

I got him his money, then said, "I'd like to give you a little bonus. You really worked your ass off today, rather than trying to stretch the hours. My washing machine and dryer are yours to wash anything you want, and you can take as long a shower or bath as you want. When you're done, dinner is on me."

He smiled at me again. "Thanks, man."

He left the house to retrieve his stuff and returned about twenty minutes later with a substantial bundle of laundry. We set his clothes to wash, and I led him into the bathroom.

As he stripped out of his clothes, I did my best to keep from staring at him. He sat down on the toilet to pull off his boots and then his jeans. I bent over to pick up his clothes and said, "I'll put these to wash as well." A plausible excuse to get me out of the room before I pounced on him, even as dirty as he was. As I stood up, he was standing right in front of me, and I couldn't help but get a long look at every bit of him. I stood there looking for just a moment—noticing how blue his eyes were—then left to drop his grungy clothes into the washer.

I quickly returned to the bedroom and undressed, figuring I'd shower when he was done. I'd just finished pulling off my socks when I heard him call me from the shower.

I poked my head through the door to hear him ask, "Can you help me scrub my back?"

I wasn't sure what kind of control I could keep, but I hopped into the oversized shower stall anyway and started scrubbing his back as he worked on the front and shampooed his hair. The oil and dirt just seemed to peel off him, leaving behind an impressive pelt of red-brown fur, a shade somewhere between his dark beard and his lighter hair.

He finished and climbed out of the stall, and as I finished my shower, I heard my beard trimmer buzzing away. I climbed out and started drying off as he worked on his beard. He was only about half done when I finished, so I went out and stretched out on my bed to relax.

"So how do I look?"

He was smiling again, and his beard was still thick and full and long, but it was now clean and neatly trimmed and shaped. He'd trimmed his hair up as well—still shoulder length, but like his beard, evenly trimmed and clean. Dried off now, his body fur was like a burnished copper halo in the late afternoon sunlight. I marveled at how well built he was after living on the street.

I finally let my eyes come to rest on a handsome hardon, sticking up out of its nest of auburn fur. My eyes snapped back up to his and locked there as he climbed up onto the bed and lay down on top of me, his coppery fur interlocking with my own dark brown pelt as he made himself comfortable on top of me.

"When you were in the shower I saw the magazines on your bookshelf. I've also seen the way you look at me."

I started to say something, but was silenced as his mouth descended on mine, and our tongues started a slow duel.

When we broke the kiss, I found myself saying, "But I don't even know your name...." We stared at each other for a moment, then dissolved into laughter.

"I'm Stan Jankowski," he said. "Pleased to meetcha...."

"Jake. Jake Strasiczyk."

"Polish?" he asked.

"Well... basically, yes. There's some Ukranian and other European in me, but I'm mostly Polish."

"Same here." He rubbed up against me sensuously. "I guess that explains these two big kielbasas we've got here!"

"Stan, you don't have to..."

"No, man, I don't. I want to." He silenced any further discussion with another lingering kiss. My hands went to his back, and stroked up and down the fur-covered muscular ridges as we snuggled and kissed.

My torso tingled from the furry friction as he slid down my body, brushed my dick with his beard, then slowly sucked it down to the root. He sucked me steadily, slowly, from root to tip and back again, corkscrewing his head back and forth and lashing his tongue up and down. I finally had to grab his head and lift him off my cock. "I don't want to cum yet!" I grunted.

He grinned. "You're right. The best is yet to come!" He rolled me up with his hands behind my knees, then brushed his beard over my hairy nucksack as he moved down to slide his tongue into my ass. I grunted as he not only slid his tongue as deep inside me as he could reach, but used his lips to massage the muscular ring his tongue was penetrating and teasing.

I reached forward to hold my legs up for him, and it wasn't long after that his greased cock replaced his tongue in my ass. He slowly sank his fat meat into me, and I wrapped my legs around his torso, my arms around his neck, and rubbed my beard against his as he slowly plumbed the depths of my fuckhole.

I expected him to pick up the tempo, but he fucked the way he sucked—slowly, deliberately, tantalizingly. I grabbed his muscular asscheeks to try and drive him into me faster, but he just moved my arms back up to his neck, and whispered, "It's better this way."

I closed my eyes, he licked my eyelids; I turned my head, he nibbled my earlobe. We took turns nibbling and nuzzling our way through each other's beards until both were damp and wildly askew.

The nuzzling led into another kiss, which lasted until Stan broke it and muttered, "I gotta cum...." I was surprised to realize that I was on the edge myself as Stan rammed home hard one last time. Our dicks started spewing hot cum, and we both roared our lungs out, egging each other on, until we collapsed from the intensity of it.

The next thing I knew, we were lying on our sides, hugging each other as if the world would end if we stopped, trembling in the afterglow—then drifted off to sleep twined together.

When I woke up later, I was surprised to find we were still locked in our embrace. I'm usually a very solitary sleeper. My movements woke Stan, and mutual hunger—for food this time—got us moving. He put his clothes into the dryer as I got a quick dinner together. We ate in a companionable, knowing silence that lasted until the buzzer on the dryer went off, indicating Stan's clothes were dry. He went and fetched them, then started to dress.

"Hey...."

"I'm sorry, Jake... I've got to go."

"What the hell for?" I asked him, surprised at my disappointment.

He smiled, this time sadly. "My stupid pride again. You've given me some decent self-respect here. But I can't live like a charity case, man. Especially not from someone who did as much for me as you."

An idea came to me. "Alright, Stan—but let me do you one more favor. You're welcome to use this address for whatever you need to get back on your feet."

"Thanks, Jake. I will." And he left.

Several weeks passed, during which I kept my eyes open and searched around, without seeing him at all. I had been one of those people who believed that "love at first sight" was a load of honest shit. But now I wasn't so sure. It may not have been first sight, and it may not have been love—but it was close enough, and there was no denying I'd never felt about anyone the way I felt about Stan.

The day the first letter arrived at my house addressed to "Stan Jankowski," I was both happy I'd get to see him again, and reminded that he wasn't with me now. When he showed up a few days later to collect that letter and others that had arrived, I had a difficult time controlling my reaction. He noticed.

He hugged me close. "You can't know how much it means to have someone concerned about me, man."

But he didn't stay. He did accept dinner from me, but refused to stay any longer, leaving me with another hug and a sweet kiss.

So I resigned myself to the idea of brief visits from him only. I went out occasionally, danced, had fun—but rarely brought anyone home.

It was getting to be time for another visit from Stan. A small pile of letters was waiting for him, and I wondered whether I should just put them outside with a note, or to keep them inside so I could see him again.

The doorbell chimed, and there he was—in a set of tidy work clothes I'd never seen before, with a couple of battered suitcases and a backpack. "Y'all wouldn't happen to need a roommate, would you?" he asked, with a luminous grin.

I dragged him bodily into the house enveloped in a bear hug with my tongue down his throat—and he responded energetically. When we finally broke the embrace, we dragged his suitcases inside, shut the door, and headed off for the bedroom leaving a trail of hastily removed clothing behind us.

I guessed that he'd found a job, and one that required a fair amount of physical labor, since his fur was moist and smelled of a day's worth of fresh, musky sweat... something that particularly turned me on. I quickly found out that his armpits were both extremely sensitive and extraordinarily ticklish. My tongue work there resulted in both a hard dick and peals of laughter.

"Well, if you like sweat..." He straddled my face and brought his thickly furred butt down into tongue range. I felt like I was drowning in silk as my tongue slipped up his waiting hole and I rubbed my beard into his sweaty butt fur. After a moment, he bent forward and started sucking me in his own toenail-curling fashion.

When my tongue had his butthole thoroughly relaxed, and his sucking had me rock hard, he swiftly greased my shaft, spun around and gradually sank down on my cock. When he'd taken it all, rocked back and forth on it a bit and gotten familiar with having it up his hole, he started riding me with the same slow rhythm he'd used when he fucked me.

"Oh, YEAH! That fat fuckin' piece of studmeat feels so good slidin' into my hungry fuckhole..." He ran his hands through my chest fur. "And it adds to gettin' my butthole stretched and fucked to look at this fuckin' fur rug you got on your chest, these big meaty damn nipples you got, and that sexy beard you've been rubbin' up my butt..."

I ran my hands up through his lush fur to his nipples and tweaked them in time with my own comments.

"Man... this silky, coppery fur you got, your hot tits... watchin' my dick disappear up that tight furry hole of yours... watchin' you break out in a sweat when you get all the way down on that fat meat—smellin' your hot armpits when you reach out to play with my nipples... watchin' your hard cock rear and bob, and looking forward to havin' it spit hot man juice all over my fur..."

"Not just your fur, man—I'm gonna nail you right in your fuckin' beard with my jizz while you're pumpin' your load up my ass!" I slid one hand down to pull on his lowhanger nuts as my other hand kept up the tit action. "Ohhhh, right on, man! Pull on those fuckers! Pull me down on your goddamn dick by my balls!"

I changed direction and pulled his nuts up towards my face. With the help of a couple of pillows, I curled up enough to keep my dick in full-stroke range as our faces got closer together.

Realizing this would be easier with him on the bottom, I managed to roll us over with my dick solidly planted up his butt. I hooked his legs over my shoulders and kept up his favorite rhythm as I started nibbling my way up his neck.

I licked around behind one ear, chewed my way through his beard to his mouth for some old-fashioned tongue-sucking, then out through the other side of his beard to tongue his ear, nibble his earlobe and start slurping my way down the other side of his neck.

"Ohhhh... yeah, YEAH! Mmmmm..." He hummed and whispered in my ear as I lapped at his salty skin, returning the tongue work on whatever part of my face or neck he was able to reach.

As I got close to cumming, I rolled us back over to let him finish us off. He kept the same rhythm, but started dropping down on my dick hard, rather than sliding down slowly.

"Oh, yeah! [Whump] Feels so GOOD! [Whump] Goddamn DICK! [Whump] Gonna CUM!!!" [WHUMP!]

The first two shots bracketed my face, one on each cheek, and the third landed squarely on my chin. I grabbed his hips and held him down on my dick as I unloaded a gusher of jizz into his hole, and his subsequent shots decorated my pecs and belly fur.

He slumped down on top of me, and we started kissing gently. My softening dick slipped out of his ass, we rolled over onto our sides and drifted off to sleep.

We woke up a few hours later, un-stuck ourselves where the cum had glued us together, and went to the living room to talk.

"So... what work did you get?"

He grinned at me. "Outreach to the homeless!"

I gaped at him. "You're kidding."

"Nope. Got myself into a program that retrains displaced loggers, and when they found out I had been homeless myself, they told me that my personal experience would probably help me get through to people better than someone who's never been in that situation."

"I can see where that would be true..."

"Not to mention a fair number of 'em remember me from that time, and know I'm not out to rip 'em off." He looked at me somberly for a moment. "You got me kick-started again, Jake. I had clean clothes, some money in my pocket—and something to work for. I wanted to tell you—but I didn't want to take any shortcuts. You said that afternoon that I didn't have to prove anything. Maybe not to you, but I had to prove to myself that I wasn't too far gone to make it back. I wanted to wait until I had more money saved up, but realized I couldn't leave you wondering again. Now that I can pay my share, I'm here to ask you: Do you still want this pig-headed Polack in your life?"

"You just TRY to get away this time!"

When this column was launched two years ago, its purpose was clear and simple: to expose new acts and releases geared toward the seemingly forgotten gay music fan who does not regularly wriggle to disco or shed tears over opera. Though we must confess to occasionally indulging in both these artistic idioms, we had also grown tired of the shocked expressions from friends who often hear Metallica or Confederate Railroad blaring from our speakers. The time to shatter a few stereotypes had arrived.

Unfortunately, sussing out much material by queer artists has proved to be difficult—of not impossible, at times. In the last few months our faith has been resorted by the onset of several new albums, all of which have reinforced the thesis that the creative corner of the gay community is as richly diverse as any other.

The New York club-scene is actually experiencing an invasion of a new tribe of singers, songwriters and musicians. The most empowering element of this movement is that these artists are not hiding behind the locked doors of queer-exclusive venues. Rather, they are showing up at such high-profile nightspots as the Knitting Factory, CBGBs, and the Mercury Lounge. One of the leaders of this tribe is Jesse Hultberg, who is deservedly warming the hearts of jaded critics with a self-titled album on the independent Wild Monk Records (212-677-3651).

Alternative music fans may remember Hultberg from his tenure with the caustic jazz-punk band 3 Teens Kill 4. In

Jesse Hultberg

THE SOUNDS THAT ANIMALS MAKE

MUSIC REVIEWS
By Larry Flick

the context of this solo outing, however, he reveals a more pensive side of his personality, comfortably swerving from string-lined acoustic-pop to more direct and aggressive rock and roll. His ballad rendition of Yvonne Elliman's If I Can't Have You will rope you in, as Hultberg taps into the anguish of the lyric with stirring honesty amid a quietly lush cello/piano arrangement. Once you are hooked, bathe in the poetic beauty of Open Your Eyes; the activist anger of Constant Thing (I Was Raised a Straight Boy); and camp humor of Am I Raquel Welch Starring in 'Fantastic Voyage'? Longtime gay media pundits are beginning to dub Hultberg the '90s equivalent to legendary singer Tom Robinson. It is a lovely sentiment, but we prefer to view Hultberg with the potential to reach a far greater audience. Robinson's work as a renegade would have been in vain, otherwise.

Hanging on the opposite end of the stylistic spectrum is Bile, a band that bravely blends the rebellion of thrash/metal with the electronic catharsis of industrial pop. The end result is Suckpump (Energy Records, 212-695-3000), an album of assaulting diatribes that would make Nine Inch Nails run for cover. Looking for optimism? Move on. With titles like Feeling Like Shit and URA Fucking Loser, this is not for the faint at heart. Although it takes a moment to adjust the senses to the endless screams and guitar crunches, an open mind may ultimately find Suckpump a psychosexual experience that leaves you in a heaving sweat—especially once you encounter R.H. Bear, the band's hunky, openly gay keyboardist. A devout fan of BEAR, he regularly dons a jock-strap and chaps for stage performances. Woof!

One of the weirder, but utterly exciting, queer-angled collections to land on our desk in recent months is the re-recording of the score to Jesus Christ Superstar by the Indigo Girls and various members of Atlanta's vibrant music scene. In a stroke of brilliance, Amy Ray takes on the role of Jesus with an appropriate blend of reverence and irony. Recording partner Emily Saliers plays Mary Magdalene to sweet perfection, with promising newcomers Viva La Diva, Big Fish Ensemble, and Lay Quiet Awake, among numerous others, all turning in top-notch performances. A must-hear project that is available on Daemon Records (404-373-5733).

Finally, for a taste of several intriguing novices who are out, loud and proud, investigate This Way Out (Trip Records, 212-274-0738), a multi-act compilation that is rife with contagious modern-rock and synth-pop ditties. Poet Christian Johnson is particularly striking on the midtempo rocker Steven while Special Head goes for the grunge à la Nirvana on Ruby Starr and Motorcycle Butt. And if you are inclined to the occasional dancefloor twirl, there is Drag Queen, John-Frederick's Peppy ode to cross-dressers and Entangled, which casts Wayne Numan in a jumpy groove akin to Erasure.

Scotland just got right down to it and ripped his clothes off.

It's why we're here, right?

He's a pretty bright and approachable man. None of our models are particularly shy—yet he's a good example of that sexy BEAR charm we look so hard to find. He'll talk about sex if you want, but'll also be quick to tell you about his upcoming novel. 'All-encompassing' is how he describes his writing; but it's a good description for him as well. Scotland's his real name, in fact. He grew up behind the Orange Curtain (that's West Coast Speak for Orange County, California), but lives up in Seattle now. When he's not writing, he works for a gay men's health service.

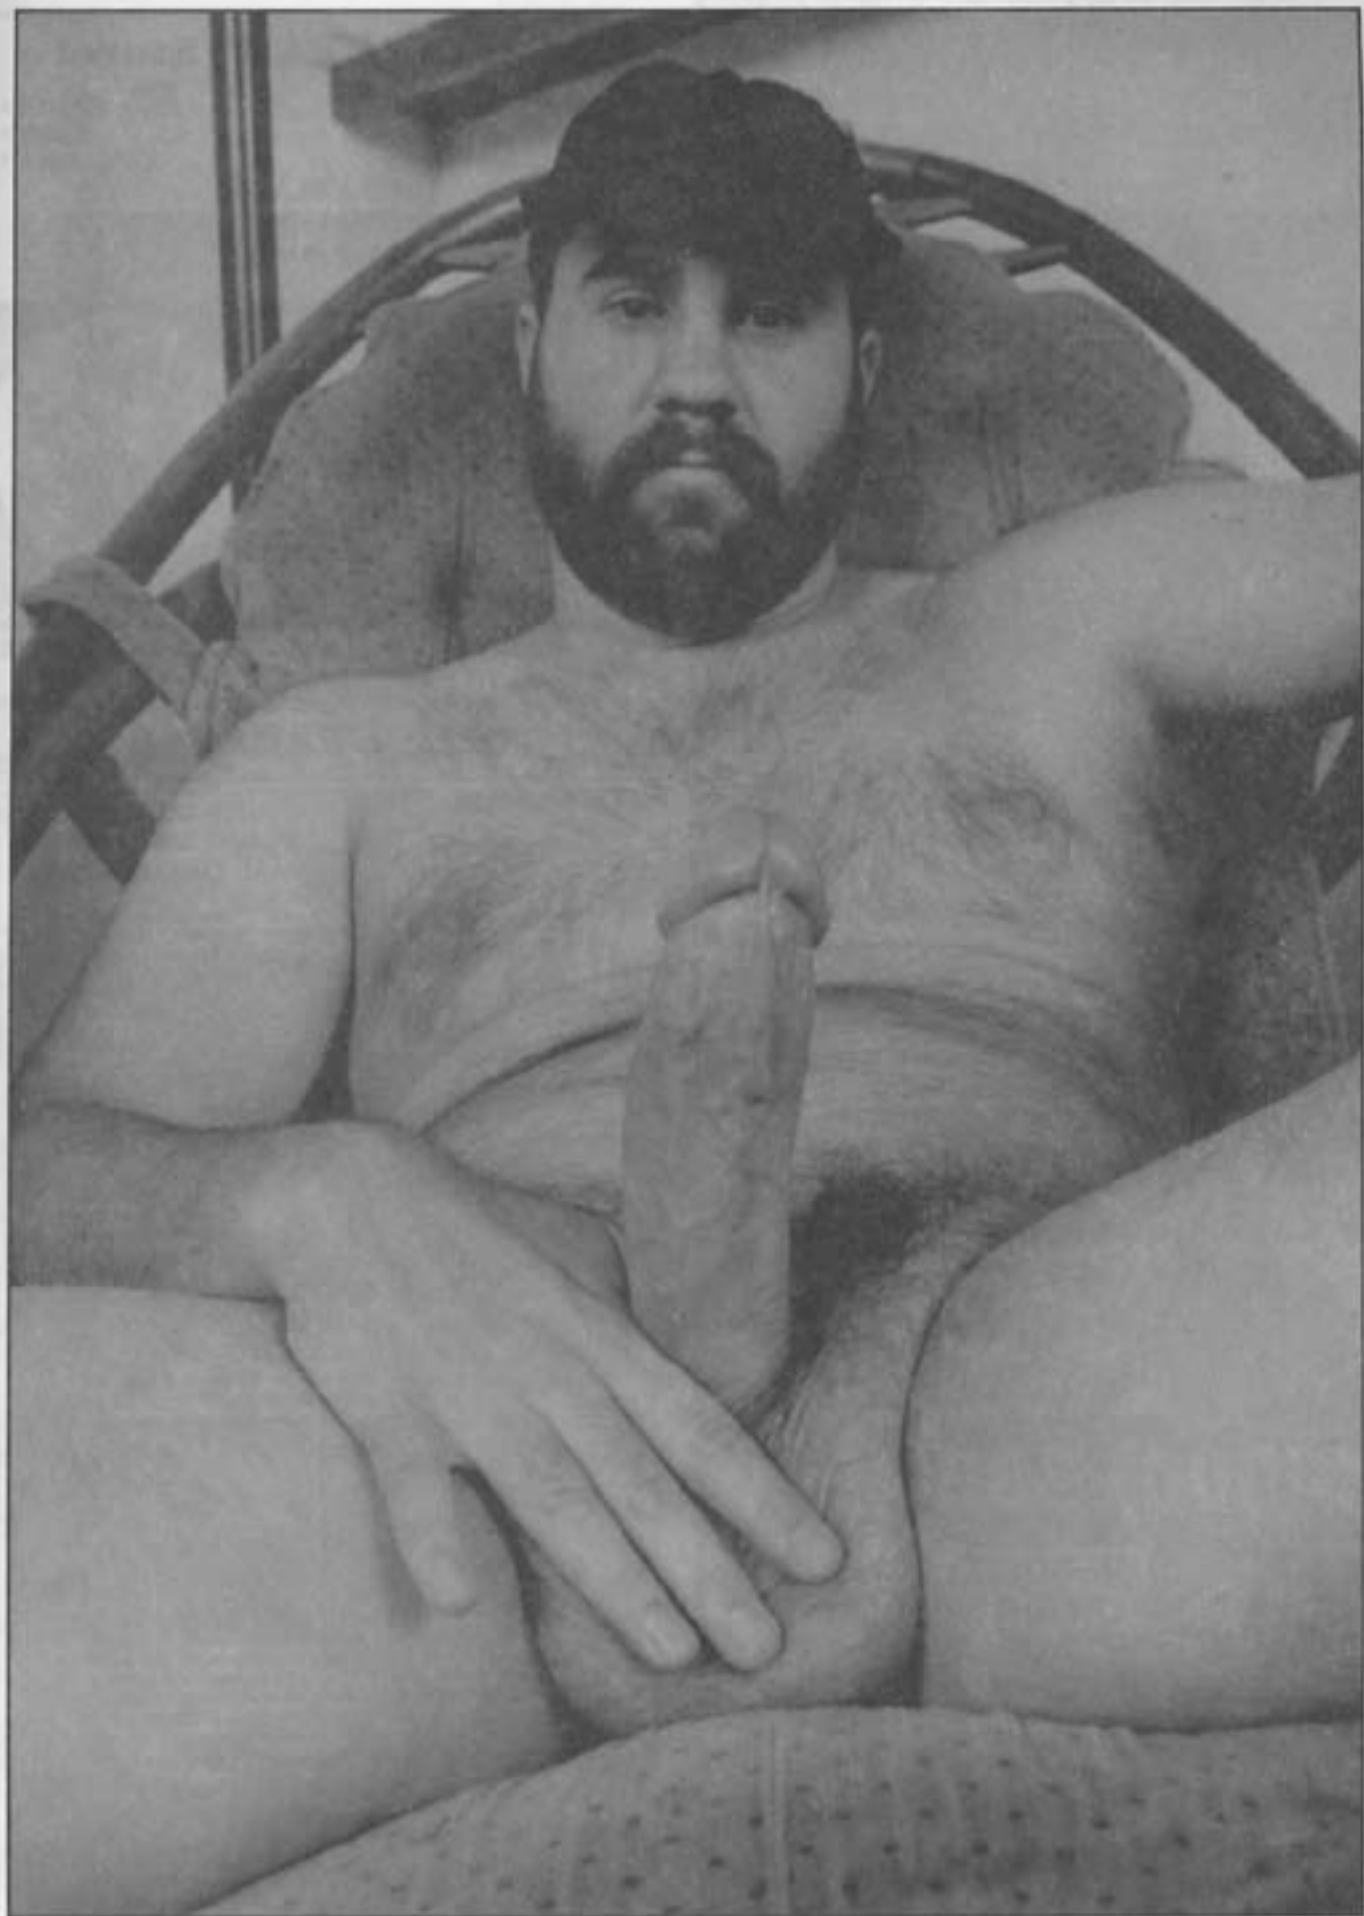

He says his best sex was when he got thrown over a kitchen table and fucked deep. But Scotland doesn't mind taking the lead in most insertive rectal behaviors. Penile/anal friction is an acceptable sexual norm for him, but he's guaranteed to get off on sucking dick and tweeking nipples when given the chance.

He also licks chocolate sauce and whipped cream off of guys' balls.
