LETTERS TO BEAR

We're SMOKIN'

Thanks a heckuva lot for the righteous cover on BEAR 31. So far, you're the only magazine I remember that's had a shot like that, on the cover. More cigar-smokin' fellas would be welcome any time. Keep it up.

E.P., Texas

Hey there—we'll keep it up if you will.

Men Are Back

Like so many before me I couldn't just send a check for my subscription without telling you how impressed I am with BEAR. You have managed to put together the perfect mix of humor, wit and style.

When I was a kid my brother and I used to shave each other's backs in an attempt to fit into that Alan Alda sensitivity bullshit that was so popular back then. You couldn't go out of the house without a comb to make sure your hair was in place at all times. Spitting was a social error and God forbid you should scratch yourself. Things have sure changed, and BEAR is the perfect representation of how men have finally taken the bull by the balls and said, "Enough." Manliness is back and you guys got it in the pages of your magazine.

Now 'scuse me, I need to go spit and scratch my nuts.

Tiger, Florida

Here, lemme do that for you...

Yeah, isn't it great to know that now we can do whatever the fuck we want? I've taken to pissing in line at the bank.

Awww, Piss!

The idea of watersports is getting more and more appealing to me. Are there any health risks from drinking your own piss? Is HIV carried in piss?

Thanks for providing such a great magazine—the men are the best!

T.D., New York

They still don't really know about HIV in piss. It can be present some of the time in some people. So you have to use your judgement. Will it be worth it?

Drinking your own piss never tastes as good as drinking someone else's. You can't re-infect yourself with anything you may already have. As for toxicity: Yeah, there's some. Your body'll work to filter it out again, just like it did the first time.

Bottoms up.

THE WITTKE WIRE

At a recent story meeting with my research assistant/intern, the gorgeous Casey E. (no relation to Sheila), we were talking about the kind of men-in-media that we—and by extension you, the BEAR reader—find sexy, hot and desirable.

"Cartoons!" yelled Casey E. I looked at him as if he were out of his mind and explained for the hundredth time that I, for one, take his internship here at The Wittke Wire very seriously and that he ought not be making jokes so close to the deadline if he ever hoped to find himself climbing up the ladder from research assistant to cub reporter.

"I'm not making a crack, your Wittkeship, sir," he said with a smattering of sincerity, a beaming smile and a sparkle in his eyes that made my heart grow three sizes that night. "So many of the men I felt myself drawn to as I was growing up were cartoon characters."

"It doesn't stop when you grow up, Casey E.," I said pedantically. "Eight out of 10 men I'm attracted to nowadays are cartoon characters."

"See what I mean?" he said, kind of missing my sarcasm. "Remember Race Bannon and Dr. Quest on Johnny Quest and Clutch Cargo?" he asked. "I loved those guys."

"You've got a point," I replied. "Clutch Cargo did have an amazing jaw line. For a cartoon, I mean. But maybe my Wire readers won't be able to relate to this. Several issues ago I mentioned Wolverine, this incredibly hot mutant character from Marvel Comics. He's one of the X-Men in the comic books and the Fox network cartoon show. He's a potent little fireplug of a furball. I also mentioned that I have a thing for The Punisher, another Marvel character whose politics I despise but whose butchness makes me throb. I swear, the weekend after that column came out in BEAR people were looking at me funny at my local leather bar."

"And you're blaming the column for this?" Casey E. asked naively.

"What else could it have been?" I replied, hoping he wouldn't answer. "And another thing," I continued, "I went to see that documentary film about Tom of Finland called Daddy and the Muscle Academy—"

"I loved that movie!" Casey E. blurted.

"Well, sure, it was good and everything," I stammered, "but it creeped me out that the men interviewed in the movie kept saying things like 'I'm a Tom's Man,' or 'I've always wanted to be just like on of Tom's Men,' while they flashed on all of these drawings of Tom's hyper-muscular 97-inch-dicked studmuffs. It was all I could do to keep myself from yelling, 'You want to be a cartoon? These men don't exist!' I mean, people didn't want to be Roger Rabbit, did they?"

Casey E. blinked his wide eyes at me. It was as if this were the first of my daily tirades he'd ever witnessed. "Look," I said with a deep breath, trying to calm myself down, "I usually like to write about real human guys. Like this Chicago actor Pat Finn who plays George Wendt's brother on his new sitcom, The George Wendt Show. Or Eric La Salle who plays the swarthy Dr. Petey Cavanaugh on E.R. Not to mention the guy who plays the

I Say....

What is going on presently? I dined on Butthole Banquet I, II and III; then came Butt of Course. Now I'm starving for more butt and you haven't done anything about it in years.

Get on the ball, or on the pot and take care of us butt-lovers. Looking forward to good buttwork with no excuses. H.R., New Jersey

Yeah, our video production took a powder in recent years. But you've already heard that we're getting our shit together. Hell, they're making us alphabetize the butthole pictures in the back room. So you can bet we'll get on the stick and make more videos. Hang in there. We'll make more than enough noise when that happens.

BEAR Makes a Difference

I first came into contact with BEAR Magazine while on vacation in Alaska, years ago. I loved it, but was too much in the closet to order a subscription.

I've known since sixth grade that I liked men's bodies better than women's, but growing up in a small Minnesota town I couldn't admit to myself I was gay until college. Even then I tried to deny it and follow the straight example. My dating life has been non-existent and more and more I'm running into the fact that I am gay.

In my confusion I decided to take a trip to San Francisco last summer, to see if I couldn't get laid. I couldn't. But I learned that many men who are gay like me are able to celebrate life and have a good time without hiding in the closet. I realized I couldn't go back to the way things were. No more dreams of having children and a family. So I have mentally opened the closet door and I'm at the edge of stepping out.

I ordered a subscription to BEAR to ease the pain.

In back-issue BEAR 26, Mel Dahl's CYA article hit upon most of my fears of coming out. Mr. Dahl's line, "How happy can you possibly be, knowing that you have to keep the two most important parts of your life hidden from each other?" made me realize I can't remain in the closet too much longer. Reading about the very problems that frighten me makes me realize others have faced these same problems and survived.

So I just had to write and thank you. D.E., Alaska

Magazine of the Gods

I'm long overdue to sit my ass down and write to you folks at BEAR. It all started with BEAR 11, Jack Radcliffe. What a dream cum true. Not only does he have a wonderful dick and body, but a wonderful smile to top it all off.

Would love to see more of him in print soon.

Mack, from BEAR 30, is one hell of a stud as well. I would be more than happy to be submissive to him any day, month or year.

Where do you find these gods?

W.T., Michigan

We're lucky that not only do we find these gods, the two you mention live here in town and we get to see 'em every now and then. They're both fairly acceptable specimens in person.

By CHRIS WITKE

orderly on that show. He used to be that Jethro Bodine-like school bully on Fox's Parker Lewis. These guys are big, furry, sides of beef and they're flesh-and-blood not pen-and-ink. Also, look for Louis on the new NBC sitcom Hope and Gloria. He has a five o'clock shadow at any time of day. You know, the kind of guys viewers like me can develop crushes on."

I wanted to say, "Like the crush I have on you Casey E., but you don't seem to know I'm alive." Instead I bit one of my knuckles as I heaved a sigh of frustration and avoided his startlingly handsome gaze. A few uncomfortable moments of silence passed before I said, "Oh what the hell, let's do a Witke Wire about butch cartoon men...."

A smile brighter than Katie Couric's crossed Casey E.'s face. "I know," he yelled excitedly. "You can call it 'You Always Want the One You Can't Have.'" I must admit I panicked, thinking that he was trying to send me a message about wanting him.

"No," I said solemnly. "Let's quote Mia Farrow's character from The Purple Rose of Cairo: 'Well, I've finally met the man of my dreams. He's fictional, but you can't have everything.'" And so, we proudly present, in no particular order, The Witke Wire's Top 10 Butch Cartoon Men (with research assistance by Casey E.):

- Hagar the Horrible. If you like 'em unkempt and uncouth, go for the Hagar man.

- Tank McNamara. He's that lantern-jawed guy in the jock comic strip they usually run in the sports section. Those are the pages you probably scan for the crotch and body hair shots on a daily basis.

- That Bearded Janitor on The Simpsons, whose name we can't remember, which we admit is pretty bad for The Witke Wire. It's just that we're always so distracted by the various states of undress they manage to get the guy in.

- The Red Baron Pizza Man. This is regional, but those of you in the know know.

- Brawny, the paper towel guy. Almost goes without saying.

- Handy Andy, another regional reference for the in-crowd, or so Casey E. tells me.

- Rusty Jones, the rust-proofing spokesman who always reminds us of that certain special something possessed by certain special redheads.

- Bluto, later known as Brutus, from the Popeye cartoons. As Casey E. so aptly put it, "What the hell was Olive always screaming about?"

- Harry Chess, up from the underground, a reminder that great pop art can sometimes be nasty and furry too.

- Duke Phillips, the network boss on The Critic, which has gotten much funnier since it moved to Fox. Phillips is like Ted Turner on testosterone overload, and with better teeth.

- Honorable Mention: Wolverine and The Punisher. Because, if you ask me, you can't over-praise those Marvel Comics artists who take the time to actually draw acres of body hair on these furry action adventure stars.

And there you have 'em, real men who are totally unreal. Welcome to life in the '90s.

Turning Truck Tricks

Thanks for such a great, hairy magazine. I am a 32-year-old guy, about 6'1", brown hair, bearded and moustached, 220 lbs. I'm very hairy.

But where I live there aren't enough gay men. I'm totally lonely for a hairy, HAIRY, bearded guy that I could hibernate over winters with.

I wanna share an experience from last summer. There's this bar in Fargo that's full of truckers of all shapes and sizes. It's supposedly straight. But I was at the bar when this real good-looking fella sat right up to the bar next to me. He was about 6'4", dark black hair, bushy moustache, baby-blue eyes and talked very low and heavy. I started talking to him about anything and everything. But as the night progressed he started hinting about women giving blow jobs and how he loved to have his dick sucked on.

By this time I was feeling horny. While staring at me with his glaring eyes, he swung his barstool around so he was facing me. I turned my stool towards his, and we locked knees. His shirt was unbuttoned at the top and a mat of thick black hair rolled out real nice. Then I caught a glimpse of his basket which was huge. I took a deep breath and looked back up into his eyes. He caught me checking him out. He asked me if I'd like to check out his new truck. Believe me, his truck came very well equipped!

I thought things like this only happened in the fiction stories in BEAR.

So I just wanted to tell you all that, plus to let the men who read BEAR see that I'm available here in North Dakota. P.F., North Dakota Cum do us next, damnit! Me first.

We gotta tell a story like yours, though: I was waiting in line at the post office here in SF. A huge, incredible bunk of a line-man, complete with tool belt and hard hat was waiting behind me. Behind him comes up this fussy guy in a sweater with hairspray out to here.

The not-so-masculine citizen confidently starts chatting up a storm with the lineman about his work boots—where he got 'em, if they're steel-toed, all that.

You know what? They practically walked out of the post office arm-in-arm. I'm sure they went and did it. A more unlikely pair you could never hope to see. I feared the poor waif may have even snagged his sweater in the process.

Our point is not that we suspect you were wearing a sweater that night. It's that no one should ever assume they aren't good-looking enough, or hairy enough or anything else enough to go out there and get the dick they want.

This is Mr. P himself, seen just before jumping into a Wyoming river. Think his nipples are perky in the picture? You shoulda seen 'em when he got out of the water.

Oh, if you wanna do him, send a letter to us and we'll forward it.

Man Gives BEAR Fat Head

I don't normally write letters to the editor, but I've read your magazine for a couple of years now and decided it was time to dust off the old ballpoint and thank you all for a thoughtful, well-crafted, and just plain sexy publication.

You've opened my mind (and certainly my eyes) to the many different meanings of that elusive term we know as "bear." The work you do educates as well as pleases. Before your magazine, I honestly didn't know that there were regular, everyday guys out there looking for average guys like myself. And with any luck, someday soon I'll find the right fella for me—who knows? Maybe it'll happen through the magic of these very pages.

N.M., California

Well, we don't normally read letters to the editor, but liked yours.

Just kidding, guys. We read 'em all. Especially when they're warm and gooey. And even when they're not—we dig knowing what you guys are thinking.

One More Letter

Because of BEAR 30 featuring burly Mack, there was never a better decision than to subscribe to your awesome magazine.

And that's not all. All of the hot and horny guys—Doug, Bob, Kirk and Randy—got me roaring in issue 30. These guys would get anyone out of hibernation.

Because of your magazine, Hawaii has become more of a paradise than ever. Take care, Mahalo and Aloha! Your new pal, Richard in Hawaii.

You mean we were able to get your eyes off the guys on the beach long enough to read a copy of BEAR? Dude! What can we say?

I know more than a few hot, hairy and hunky guys who've headed down your way to see if they can get their hair and pits all sweaty and tropical. Seems to work pretty good. You'll have to keep in touch, maybe roam the beaches with some sort of BEAR-CAM™. You can be just like on David Letterman, and we can all vicariously get our rocks off. Think it'll work?

MIKE

He's got an unassuming presence that'll sneak up on you. About the time you realize how pretty he is to look at, you also discover that he's got a lot going on under such a quiet, commanding exterior.

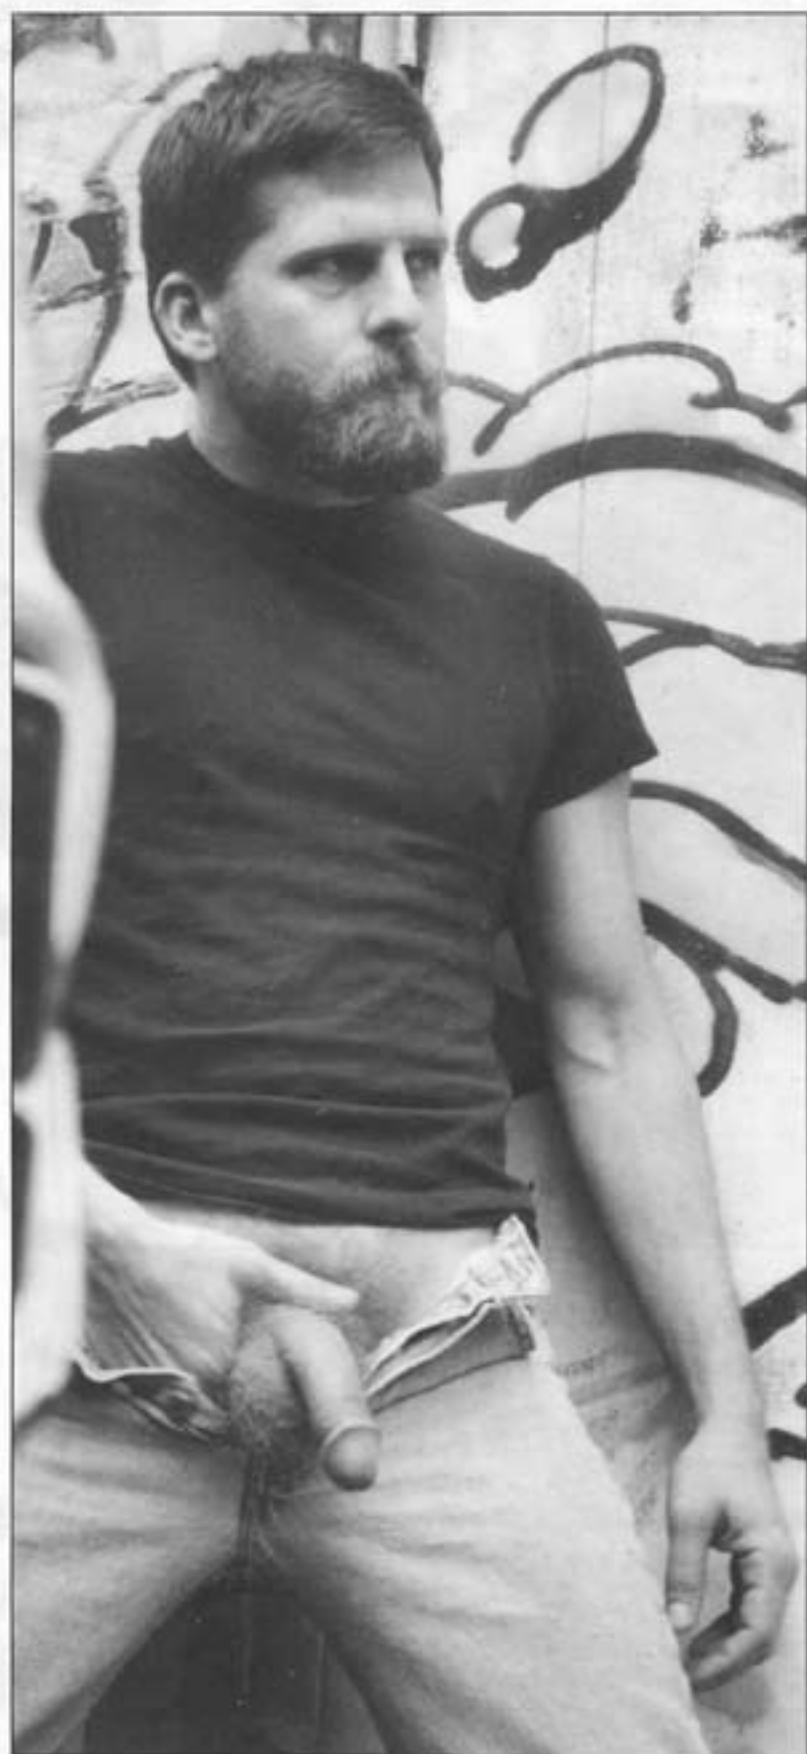

Besides. Check out that dick he's packin' around.

He's well-traveled. Spent a year and a half bumming around Europe before settling in Philly to work construction. Now he's a San Franciscan, where the real men live. He loves it here. Has a place in the Castro district where he can watch it all go by. Just like he likes.

You can turn his head if you're a rugged man into gritty, natural sex. But you gotta be believable. No bullshit accepted. Says he's definitely the marrying type, but will always get into honest sexual adventure. These days he's really into fucking butt.

When not working or fucking around, he spends his time scoping out Northern California: Carmel, Napa and camping in Yosemite. His new passion is working as a production and graphics designer. He plans on living right, working hard in the visual arts and getting the most out of it all.

Photos by Myung

"No, sir, I cannot say." My throat was sandy dry.

"Then I won't bore you with elaborate details you cannot hope to comprehend. Whatever happens to you, Mr. Weiss, be sure of this: You are to enter a new life. If he hates you, you will be a slave for life. If you please him, you will be his slave for life. It is, after all, finally his choice."

"Some choice," I said, then added, "sir." I was thinking, I'd like to remove all your intestines very slowly with hooks, fucker!

"Next time, although there will not be a next time, think hard about trying to scale the heights of The Outpost to rob us of our folk with your foolish tales of myths and legends. A common criminal you are no more, my friend, and we will never see you again. Be sure of that. Constable, take him to the sweat mines and lock the entrance behind you. Court is closed today, people. Sorry to deprive you of the pleasure of seeing him in the stocks or hanging from the rope. Such is the equal balance of justice, I suppose, although it wearies me to the bone."

Minotaur

by Mike Jones

The mayor of the villa known as The Outpost was a great, burly bastard named Michael. He was universally hated by all who knew him. He delighted in telling me horrible tales of my fate as we made the mile-long trek to the sweat mines. He brought six large men with him to pull back the great door to the sweat mines. So great was my crime that he made the unusual quest to accompany me himself to guarantee my eternal damnation in the sweat mines. He wore only a black, sweat-stained vest. His hairy chest bristled with dewy perspiration as he rubbed it and laughed at me and taunted me for invading his villa. He rubbed a sweaty hand through the stubble on my head. His black beard bobbed ridiculously as he told me of the massive monster's initiation practices. "Yeah, boy, if he likes you, he may only rape you 40 times the first night you are there. Otherwise, the hairy monster will just become angry at you and rip you to shreds before him."

"Mayor, it is obvious you haven't seen the inside of a bath in many months," I said. "On the way back, why don't you stop at the public baths. By the way, everyone in your little villa knows you are fucking Duke John."

His face glowed crimson. "I will enjoy slamming the door behind you and hearing your screams. What someone of your short stature will do against a 7' monster with no conscience is certainly a mystery to me."

"Charm him to death, I suppose."

We had reached my eternal destination and he opened several locks set into the face of the stone. The six men launched into a sweaty grunting match to pull the formidable door open. After several minutes, it was

"Then you have heard of this particular punishment before, I presume?" the judge said, leaning across his gnarled wooden table. His knobby, hairy hands played among the splinters. Behind his back he was called Bastard Thomas, as his immense skill for cruelty was unparalleled.

"I have heard of this punishment. Transgressors are sent to the sweat mines of the Minotaur and no one ever returns." I attempted to keep emotion out of my voice.

"Do you know why they never return?" the judge asked, grinning broadly. One of the five jurors sighed. Another gasped. I looked at the prosecuting attorney in his peasant attire and he was grimacing uncomfortably at me.

"Where do I go from here?" I asked.

"Weis, it matters not. There is only one tunnel and it leads to the labor camp of only one thing: Minotaur. Do as you please or wait for him to come and get you by the door. It matters this much to me," he said, scratching a hairy nipple with a knobby digit.

"We call those fleas, Michael. A long bath in the hot springs can rid you of them."

"Step inside," he said with no emotion. I did. The door was swung shut and the last thing I saw was his furry armpit as he saluted me.

The darkness echoed the slamming of the door and then I understood the mayor's cunning. That sound would travel miles. It was a great sound, like when the earth moves and quakes. Like a pounding of a door in the quiet of the night. The Minotaur would be alerted to my arrival.

There was an absolute lack of light now. Fear shook me as I began to make my way down the dirt lane that I had seen before the light was shut out against me. The walls were sheets of granite and ran up forever. Those things I saw as the door slammed behind me. And, of course, I saw the path lead off downward, far into the distance. Small stones littered the path and occasionally I would feel one under my soft sandals.

I can stay here and wait for the monster to come get me, or I can go and meet him, I thought. Naturally I would have to go and find him. It's better to meet your obstacles head on rather than wait for them to come get you.

I began walking. After what seemed three miles, although my sense of time was altered in total darkness, I felt the air stir with heat and increase by a few degrees. I heard faint clicks in the distance. The sound, as I continued walking, altered into that of great machines clanking and wooden gears grinding. It became a roaring tumult as I neared a dim, red-lit circle that opened before me.

I smelled the smoke of burning wood and heard the hiss of steaming rock (and maybe the sweet scent of burning flesh). I began to really tremble then. I realized that the ever-widening red circle before me was the cave of the sweat mines. I heard a mighty bass roar of an animal and knew I was in deep trouble.

As I walked out onto the ledge of the village-sized cave, I was dead quiet. I tried to quickly take in everything that lay before my shabby, shattered senses.

Four large stone ovens were set in a half-circle inside the cave. The red was coming from the fierce fires in the ovens. No other light was there; none was needed. Who, in their right mind, would want to see more of this anyway?

In the middle of the room, standing with legs spread wide, in only a loin cloth, was the Minotaur himself. With massive biceps folded across a black hairy chest, he watched the workers loading the ovens: Garbage was loaded into one, bread into another and metal molds in another. When someone got out of line or fell fainting, he would raise them up with one great paw and stand them firmly on their feet before patting them on their butt to move them on their way. No one said anything to him in reply. I'm sure none would dare in the presence of this massive beast.

I observed him for several seconds before he sensed me. As is usual with the few minotaurs that we knew existed, he had the massively muscled body of a god and the head of a bull. He was burnished a deep brown, almost black. He seemed to lack hair nowhere. His thick legs were hairy, like a satyr's. But his feet were not hooves; everything below the neckline of a minotaur was human. That was the trick the gods had played on them in their infinite folly. His chest was broad and matted with deep black hair, but more like fur. His thick forearms were coated with it and his hands seemed to be as large and thick as hams. Two small yellow horns protruded from his bull's head, which signified a youthful minotaur. Although his head was indeed that of a bull, legend says that it is the intelligence that blazes in their eyes that lets you know you cannot escape their scrutiny. That and the lore that they have the strength of five men make them a formidable prison guard by any standard.

All of a sudden, he sniffed the air with furrowed brows, then looked straight at me. He eyed me up and down, then immediately began striding the upward path toward me. I could actually hear the thundering of his feet as they pounded the packed dirt floor. When he was about 30 feet from me, he stopped in the path and cocked his head to one side and examined me again. Closer, I could see he had a black curly beard that made his face appear kinder.

He continued and came to me and grabbed my arm (I could not have objected) and dragged me roughly through the great room. The sounds and smells and people came rushing in on me, crowding me, and I was frightened. He did not stop to put me to work, but instead led me behind one of the ovens to an open doorway there. He never paused for a moment.

We strode through a tunnel and into a room that appeared to be his private quarters. It was cooled by a shaft above us that breezed a continual draft into the room. He threw me into the midst of a large space in the center of the floor, heaped with animal skins that I took to be his bed. Again he cocked his head to one side. He pulled at his loin cloth. It was hiding some very large equipment. He huffed a grunt that sounded completely animal and left the room. In an instant I was alone. And exhausted. And frightened. As unsure as I was of my short future, I fell unconscious into a deep sleep within minutes.

I dreamed I was lying beneath an enormous apple tree in a garden that was brightly drenched with liquid sun. Beside me was a giant with the figure of a god. He was nude and was nuzzling me and running his hands over my tired body. He ran his tongue inside one of my ears and moaned softly and his hands never stopped exploring my blissful frame.

I awoke to find Minotaur lying among the animal skins, fondling me. His hands were so large that they were immeasurable. What frightened me and caused me to sit up and move away from him was his gentleness. He was roaming over my body as a man would do; not as a beast.

He reached out with an arm that easily traversed the distance and locked a hand firmly around one of my biceps and pulled me to him very slowly, in a way that clearly suggested he was not to be ignored. A smile transformed his bull's head, and that made me fear him all the more. My face was buried in the chest of what plainly seemed to be entirely man; although it was certainly hairier than any mere mortal's. It crackled through my beard crisply. Playing with the offspring of gods is often enlightening, if not vastly entertaining. I smelled his scent and it was the odor of warmth and sweet sweat and rippling muscle buried deeply beneath a coat of black fur. I felt his massive heart hammering below. His breathing was thick with lust, and rapid.

Above me, his wire beard nuzzled the top of my closely cropped head, and he groaned with slow pleasure. His great black hand was running under my beard, nuzzling my coarsely shaved throat, just as I was beginning to moan softly. His other hand was resting firmly behind my back. He was cradling me with his massive body, protectively. The hand under my beard ran down to my shirt and began easily making little tears along the seams. He was moaning above me as he slowly but persistently tore the shirt from my body. I saw him lift the rag to his broad nose and inhale deeply. His eyes closed with intense pleasure and his wide chest expanded. He stood. I stood.

He tore clumsily at his loincloth and it fell away at his impatient groping. If the light had been stronger in the room and if his own monstrous stature hadn't cast shadows upon his lower body, I probably would have seen what hung below his furry belly. But I could not, for the moment, do so. To see this fierce man-beast standing nude before me with huge muscled arms hanging loosely at his side, aroused me.

His eyes ran to my ragged trousers. He ran a hand down the front of them and cupped my nuts in his palm through the cloth. He pointed at the trousers and I quickly took them off to prevent him from ripping them off. I stood before him in my lesser hairy self. Nothing can compare with the state and glory of his pelt and his intrusive masculinity.

He came nearer and his chest filled my entire vision. I ran my hand through the thick pelt. His chest swelled with lust at my touch. I found a dark nipple that was nearly the size of an apple and when I felt it, he shook with pleasure. He shoved his chest deeper into my face and I found the nipple with my tongue. It was rough and hard. I heard his moaning through my skull as I pressed tightly against his pectorals. I allowed my other hand to roam through the black sea of hair on his chest as my tongue continued exploring the nipple.

He ran a large hand between my legs. I spread them so he could do as he pleased. His gentleness surprised me as he found my soft nuts and massaged them. He played along the length of my dick which, despite the unusual appearance of the Minotaur, was lengthening. Apparently the growing cock was to his liking because he bent down to pull my dick into his mouth. When he did, his horns flashed seductively in the dim light. I felt his wire beard rub the hair on my belly and could not suppress a moan. As his warm, wet mouth moved along the length of my dick, I constantly felt the hair on his large head and his beard on my belly. His small, blunted horns touched my belly and it made my dick harder and harder.

When he had excited it to its full 8 inches, he reached down and replaced his mouth with his hand and began slowly massaging my dick.

Until now, I had not grabbed him. But I had to see what great thing was hiding in all that hair below. I expected something extraordinary, because of his height and thickness, but nothing prepared me for the abundance and the never-ending length of his dark, uncut pole.

As my hand made its way through the hairy region just below his belly button, I was in no hurry when I finally found the base of his massively thick organ. I pulled on the length and the husky mushroom head suddenly popped out of its foreskin.

We both slowly sat on the animal skins; it was time to get down to some serious business. I turned around so I could get underneath him. Instantly he began sucking me as I pulled part of his dick into my mouth. It tasted sweet and clean. I found the inside rim of the foreskin with my insistent tongue and tasted salty sweat. I ran my tongue along the inside of the skin till there was only the clean taste of warm flesh.

He moaned and I felt the bass throbbing travel the length of my cock down into my nuts. What I was doing was apparently making him very charged because he increased his attention and his dick became rock hard in my mouth. I could only suck on a few inches of that fat cock. He swallowed all 8 inches of my dick and slurped both of my nuts into his mouth...I almost came. The pleasure of his rough tongue roaming all over my dick and nuts was instantly arousing.

His nuts were nearly impossible to describe. I tried to cup his black hairy balls in both of my hands and even then, one of them spilled over into my lap. They were vast low-hangers. I pulled my beard closer to them and rubbed it across the grapefruit-sized jewels. They were warm and furry and I could no longer resist putting my tongue to them. I was able, because of their great size, to pull large loose sections of skin in my mouth at one time, since I could not possibly get even one of the nuts inside my eager mouth. It was like sucking great sacks of hairy flesh into your throat; there seemed to be no end to the woolly meat.

Comprehending something this hairy and attempting to understand my good fortune at having been sentenced to this kind of eternal punishment was more than I could handle. Two very hefty, warm nuts of a trusting beast were resting in my hands. He was hovering over me and sucking my dick as I roughly licked the coarse surface of the hairy orbs and gently squeezed them in my palms. He increased his attention with that incredibly talented mouth of his. I felt his beard between my legs as he bobbed both nuts and my dick in his mouth at the same time. The action of my nuts and my dick being jerked off at once inside the warm cavern that was his mouth was too pleasurable to describe, although I try. I had never had any trouble gagging anyone before, and here was a creature who could eat the dick and both nuts at once!

I scooted down so I could discover what his feet were like. He quickly obliged when he saw what I was going to do and lifted a tremendous foot till it was inches from my face. I grasped the weighty foot with both of my hands and pulled it to my mouth and rubbed my beard along the bottom of it. He stretched out his body so he could continue fiercely sucking my dick and nuts. A cobbler would have had a difficult time shoeing this creature, for no one ever saw a foot this grand before. Naturally, the bottom of the foot was like leather for that was all he probably had to walk on. The top was entirely covered over with wiry black fur. I ran my hand over the top of the foot as I contemplated the size of his toes. His big toe was the thickness of my dick.

I decided to go for it and pulled the big toe into my mouth. It was cool, and tasted like the must of the cave. He groaned over me and I felt it through my nuts, so I must have been doing all the right things. I ran my hand over the ankle and moaned as I encountered the hard, hairy calf. To be enjoying something this tremendous with someone so willing was nearly more than any mortal could stand. It is often said of the gods that once you have lovemaking between the two of you, you are no longer satisfied with anything short of those experiences. You are forever imprisoned in their thrall.

To say his legs were hairier than anything I had ever experienced before would be the height of redundancy, although it is the truth. I had the good fortune to have him all for myself for this time. I did not know what my future held, but I intended to make a great impression on him. At first it was so that he might be unwilling to tear me limb from limb, but now I was very much aroused.

I ran my tongue between his toes and again tasted that mustiness. His toes were delicious and dry. His solid-muscle weight began to rest on my body as we became one creature—we were nearing the dance I have come to know as two creatures approaching a simultaneous orgasm. I could feel his thick coat mingling with the hair on my belly as he writhed above me. His lengthy dick snaked up my abdomen toward my chest. It was thick and corded with veins.

I reached down and grasped it and began pumping the slippery, lengthy member. He moaned more and began running his tongue up and down the length of my dick that was still firmly enclosed in his mouth with my nuts. I felt cool saliva drip down into my pubic hair as he fiercely took me to an orgasm. I sucked on the dick-sized toe as I continued to pump his blood-gorged dick. It slid fluidly, easily, in its uncut casing. I jacked it off through the hair of my belly, letting it roll along my hard stomach. His toe was delicious to my tongue.

He began huffing with a sound that was pure animal. His breathing was becoming quick and labored. He never attempted to remove his big toe from my mouth, but he did begin pumping his dick through my fingers more rapidly. He was very gentle, considering it would have been easy to crush me had he allowed his full weight to fall on me.

I felt the first slam of the orgasm hammer me to the floor and I groaned as loudly as I could with his large toe in my mouth. The orgasm sweetened the air around us and made the toe taste better and made me experience his cocksucking more keenly. Above me he gave a roar through my cock that nearly exploded my nuts and increased the speed of his slurping as I filled it with cum. It is hard to describe the instant shower I received from quarts of hot cum splashing over my belly and legs. I swear it never stopped for a full five minutes, but then, when you are cavorting with the gods, I suppose anything is possible. I wallowed in his slippery cum as he continued to cover me with the stuff. I rolled in unlimited ecstasy as my orgasm ruled me and bolted through me like lightning and nearly shook the both of us to pieces. I sucked harder and felt my own saliva seeping through the corners of my mouth around his thick toe.

He still sucked and sucked on my dick and he swallowed the whole sweet load of cum I delivered lovingly across his thick tongue and down his throat. When my dick had deflated greatly, he licked it and slurped noisily around my furry nuts.

He leapt to his feet and jerked me to his glistening, sweaty chest. He hugged me hard and kissed the top of my head. Then, in an instant, the room was filled with a luscious rich voice that could have only belonged to a noble king. The two words that circled the room and flew out into the drafty shaft in the ceiling of the room were: "LOVE...YOU!"

Even though they were spoken softly, they reverberated through my chest like a knotted fist. I was hopeful he wouldn't speak often.

He grabbed my hand. He quickly strode back through the passageway he had led me earlier to his bedroom. He walked to the edge of the precipice that overlooked the ovens and workers. He spoke.

"Let it be known," he said and held my arm high in the warm air. No doubt everyone heard him, for all stopped their work and gazed at him with great respect. "From this day forward, this is mine! Make no mistake, great harm will come to anyone who offends this little one in any manner whatsoever. Stop your work and rejoice with me and take the day off from your labors and take all of tomorrow off as well. Fare-thee-well and rejoice with me. I have found the one who brings me joy and is equally pleasurable to gaze upon as well."

Now I know the answer to Judge Bastard Thomas's question, "Do you know why no one ever returns from the sweat mines?" Minotaur was the reason, but not for the reasons they thought. I was never going to go anywhere else, not that I thought he would allow it for one moment.

The '95 International Bear Rendezvous, impressively presented by the Bears of San Francisco, was a major success this past President's Day Weekend—especially considering the ominous task this year-old band of men took on. Living up to San Francisco's reputation for hospitality, the members of the B.O.S.F. brought together local bars, businesses and the Ramada Hotel to make guests from thousands of miles away feel like they've always been San Franciscans.

Here at the BEAR Store, we saw 'em coming in a full week before. We suspect they wanted to get the touristy shit over with so they could enjoy the men.

Some of the hottest local establishments hosted events, from our favorite old original, The Lone Star Saloon, to the new kids on the block, the Motorwerks, to one of the Castro's neighborhood favorites, Moby Dick. Every event was wall-to-wall and beard-to-butt, breaking records and keeping our local barmaids a-jumpin'.

The Rendezvous was loaded with smiling faces and friendly strangers. Vending booths, seminars, lectures, video presentations and an incredible amount of bar-hopping took place all weekend. A club social on Sunday afternoon saw members of bear groups from across the country getting to know each other; exchanging numbers, exchanging a little spit. And maybe a few hotel keys—we didn't ask.

Sunday night, with the banquet and the Mr. International Bear Contest. There was so much body hair in that room a lot of us didn't know if we were going or cumming.

These are only a few of the contestants, onstage. Hell, there were 19 of 'em; they're pretty big guys, and damn hard to fit all in one picture.

Nineteen men got their asses up onstage to be contestants. They came from far afield: Boston, Los Angeles, Texas, British Columbia, Florida, Local music trio Bearage showed its talents, as did Lurch, our good friend and seriously funny emcee.

Our four contest finalists: Glen McClintock, Mr. Russian River Bear '94, became Bear Cub; Clark Bufkin took Daddy Bear back to his den in Minnesota; Rodger Ream (ah, yes, you say) was perfect as Grizzly Bear.

The title of Mr. International Bear 1995 was passed from Michael Myhand to Will Petite, this year's Mr. Southern California Bear.

The rest of that February night found contestants and participants cavorting at nearby bars—even out in the streets, on cable cars and in subway trains.

Finally, a Monday brunch and auction took place at the S.F. Eagle where an excellent quiche, the sun and many wallets were out to cheer up the guests and local charities. Autographed shirts by Stephen Sondheim and Richard Karn, prints, paintings, and eight signed, framed and enlarged BEAR covers (donated by Terry of the Motorwerks) were goods up for bid.

So what do you think? Figure it might be worth your time to give this a try next year? San Francisco's got your name on it already. Your President's Day Weekends might take on a whole new meaning for many years to come.

The winners (l-r): Rodger Ream, Grizzly Bear; Clark Bufkin, Daddy Bear; Will Petite, Mr. International Bear; and Glen McClintock, Bear Cub.

New York Modness

The legendary Spike Leather/Levi bar was the site for the Second Annual Mr. New York City Bear Contest on Sunday, March 4. Beyond providing a feast of hairy hunks of various sizes and shapes, the event was designed to raise funds for the local Lesbian & Gay Community Center. At the evening's end, $1,500 was generated by raffles offering prizes that ranged from complimentary brunches to gift certificates at the Moose, a local leather/toy shop.

Michael Occhipinti was crowned Mr. New York Bear from a field of 15 contenders. Judged by a panel of local luminaries, each contestant strutted his stuff in street gear and more provocative fantasy wear. Taking on the tone of a demented Miss America pageant, there were runway posing segments (replete with ample dick flashing and ass mooning), growling contests, and cheeky, sex-charged question-and-answer sessions. Sample inquiries included "What is the first thing you need after a long winter's hibernation?"

Occhipinti, who is already fielding offers to pose nude, will travel to San Francisco next year to compete in the Mr. International Bear Competition.

Alaskan River Run

When you think about it, Alaska's a pretty sexy, wild place. And the men are intense. They're locked up without the sun for months on end, so they get a little crazy when the sun finally comes out. Pictured here are some of the guys in attendance at last year's Scott Olson White River Rafting Run. This year's event is listed in our Things To Do column, so get the scoop and find out how you can go. Remember, the sun won't set the entire time.

Home Cookin'

by T.C.

This column is for something most of us hate to be without: a good ol' douche hose. For those of us, like me, who don't have no indoor plumbing or a bathroom, this is the perfect thing. And cheap, too. So if you're as tired of a turkey baster as I am, here's what my good friend Choo Choo Bear says to do:

MATERIALS NEEDED:

Small, soft dildo.

1/4" vinyl tubing, long enough to reach where you wanna go.

1-1/2" PVC ball valve, threaded both sides, for shower hookup.
-or- bathroom faucet screw adapter for sink hookup.

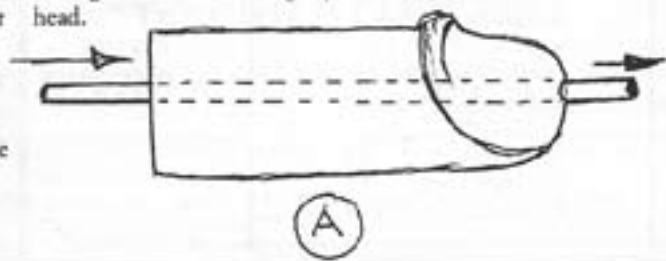

1-1/2" NPT x 1/4" hose barb adapter to connect hose to water supply.

ACTION REQUIRED:

Whether you go for the shower hookup or the sink hookup, simply screw in your chosen adapter. Then you just fit the tube onto that. It won't hold a hell of a lot of water pressure, but how much do you need?

THE BUSINESS END:

Take a metal rod about 1/4" in diameter and gently work it up through the shaft of the dildo. Poke it out the head where the piss slit should be. Now you're free to work your mini-hose up through that hole, leaving it just below the inside of the dick-head.

WHAT THE HELL AM I DOING OUT OF BED?

by Killer

Hello. It's me again. Bet you never thought you'd see those words again. Frankly, I didn't think I'd be writing them. And boys, it's good to be back.

You remember, don't you? I wrote a music column for this fine publication a few years back. I wrote a fair amount of items in the Shits and Giggles section and wrote most of the responses to the letters to the editor. After a time it was time to go. Now I'm back.

Luke told me Dibelka felt he had said enough. He asked me if I'd try my hand at it and I said OK. Besides, Luke asked so nice. In such situations I'm unaccustomed to selecting a topic and going on (unless I'm tending bar, in which case I can ramble on about damn near anything). I'd rather have something thrown at me and told to come up with a response. Hell, I don't even know what to call this column. BARE PAUSE is Dibelka and always will be. And while I have much respect for the man and his work, I am not him; both of us are grateful. Like him, though, I tend bar.

They call me Killer. At least, that's what they call me around the shop. My name is Karl and you can call me that, too, if you want; that's who the paychecks are made out to. I respond to both. Killer because, well, I tend to cuss a lot and Karl because I was named after my grandfather. For a long time I was kinda self-conscious about my name; I always felt Karl was not a little boy's name and was uncomfortable with it for years. Now I'm glad I have grown into it.

Yeah, I been away for a while. Perhaps I'll discuss what I did while I was away, but not right now. And the more things stay the same, the more they change.

I still groove on hair, though I've cut mine substantially and now resemble an ex-Marine more than a mountain man.

The facial hair comes and goes, depending on my mood and whether I can find a good razor. The hair on my chest, belly and butt crack remains, though. I groom myself the way it pleases me; occasionally I don't have time to shower, but it doesn't appear to be a problem.

I still like a man who looks kinda rugged, who got his nose broke in all the right places. I was trying to explain this one to my buddy Don, who's got a great jaw. He's real self-conscious about his teeth because they're kinda crooked. I told him he may not understand it, but that's one of the things I've always thought was real hot about him.

My old man, Crusher (his paychecks are made out to Steve), has got a way of walking that makes me crazy. Not quite a swagger, not quite a limp, just a way of swinging his legs that makes you think those suckers would look real good up around your ears.

It's still not necessarily the way a man looks, but the way he carries himself that gets my attention. The smut I prefer tends to be from the late '70s, especially stuff that the Gage brothers did; the guys in the videos have lived-in bodies, loads of body and facial hair and don't all look alike. Shit, even the clean-shaven guys act like they have beards.

I still prefer boxers to briefs (I been known to tend bar in my boxers from time to time), Levi's to Lee's (but give me the right ass in some Wranglers and I'll be up half the night in more ways than six), and beef to chicken (make it a rib-eye with the bone still attached). I prefer music that does not go thump thump thump at 120 beats per minute, trucks to cars (unless you're talking about Mustangs from '65 to '71), and men who like fucking butt (because I have found that damn near every guy who's into buttfucking does just about everything else I like).

I still talk to anyone who has an opinion and who isn't being obnoxious for sport. If someone gets on my nerves, I still hand them the rope with which to hang themselves because I need a good laugh from time to time. And I've picked up that rope plenty of times myself.

I do my damndest to stay relaxed in most situations. My favorite pay-back for a favor is a six-pack and a blowjob. I still behave as if I have all the rights the rest of the country has until somebody stomps all over them, in which case I confront them what do the stomping. I love a good fight and I advocate bashing back.

I still find few things better than a hike up a mountain (one of my faves being when Crusher and me hiked up Glacier Point in Yosemite about a year ago, damn near 4,000 foot elevation, 9.6 miles round trip and we chanced upon a bear a mile or so from where we were to finish (we ate dessert first that night); a strong, wet, sloppy kiss or playing French piano music (and I can't quite explain that last one. It's kinda like getting a hard-on in my brain crossed with a sort of out-of-body experience).

I can say some things better as Karl and others better as Killer but it mostly depends on what the listener wishes to hear. When I cut my hair, I couldn't help but notice that some of the guys I hung with were a little skittish around me. It was as if for them part of me died. For the record I'm still as subversive as I always was. I may not get spit on for dressing funny, but I still get spit on for thinking the way I do.

That's me, as much as a laundry list can say who I am. My name, Karl, means "a man." I looked it up. Killer means a few guys thought enough of me to give me a new name.

No matter what label you want, who we are turns into an infinite maze. And depending on how you want to look at it, infinity works in a couple ways: One way is like a box of Cream of Wheat. On the box is a picture of a guy holding a box of Cream of Wheat, which, ostensibly, has a picture of a guy holding a box of Cream of Wheat and on like that. The other way is like a bottle of shampoo, because you're told to lather, rinse and repeat. Lather, rinse and repeat. Your take on it is whether you want to be well-nourished or well-groomed.

My point is that a maze is no place to live, and I offer these words in response: Shut up and suck. With luck, you'll leave me breathless.

I'm back.

Mail Fraud

Six months ago my husband ordered a video through the mail from a company neither of us had heard of before. The ad promised us one hot flick: Two good-looking guys on their way back from Canada are stopped at the border, suspected of carrying contraband, and given the full strip search routine, complete with rectal probing and enemas.

Five months after the order was placed, our tape finally showed up in the mail. My husband and I curled up to watch it the following Friday night.

To say that we were disappointed is like saying the Grand Canyon is a hole in the ground. The actors were ugly. They couldn't act worth shit and the police officer doing the searching was a bottom pretending to be a top. The lines were delivered with excruciating monotony and the actors ran the full gamut of emotions from being camera-shy to being bored half to death. Speaking of the camera, it focused on all the wrong places at all the wrong times.

Other than that it was a great flick.

I shall omit a dissertation on what is wrong with today's video porn. I'm not even going to complain that my own favorite fantasies never seem to make it onto video, and out of sheer exasperation I have actually considered producing a movie myself. Instead I'll talk about consumer protection law as it applies to the purchase and sale of video porn through the mail.

People who sell things are generally required to be honest about what they sell, especially if they use the mail. There's nothing wrong with producing and selling lemons as long as you're honest in your advertising that you're offering lemons. Of course, most companies offering lemons realize that telling the truth about it is not good for business, so they proceed to paint the lemon green and try to pass it off as a lime.

The courts, and most intelligent consumers, recognize that businesses of all types try to put themselves in the most favorable light. Ads for "the best cheeseburger in town" or "the hottest new actor of the year," while perhaps debatable claims, are probably not illegal or fraudulent. Exercise your common sense in evaluating such claims before you buy. On the other hand, some ads are sufficiently fact-specific that they are legally misleading. For example, if a video promises "young guys" and there isn't an actor among them who is under 40, I think most courts would agree that the ad was misleading and the consumer is entitled to restitution. By the same token, if an ad promises "the bear look" and the video is all about anorexic surfers, you're probably entitled to your money back.

So when does an ad cross the line? When it promises something specific that it does not deliver. The issue here is whether their advertising has been sufficiently fact-specific that a reasonable person can look at the product and see that what was promised was not produced.

Now, stepping out of the trees to look at the forest, this is a perfect illustration of when an ounce of common sense is better than a ton of legal theory. The best way to protect yourself is to know with whom you are dealing before you write the check. It is much harder to get your money back after they have cashed the check than it is to protect yourself in advance.

With big name video companies that have been in business for years you are generally pretty safe. Big gay video outlets did not succeed by ripping people off. If you stay with a reputable, well-established outfit you should be OK. And, big, reputable outfits are usually more or less responsive to customer complaints when there is a problem with their product.

Small pop-and-pop video outlets offer more expensive videos usually with lower production values. It's the old quantity and supply equation: Big houses deal in bigger numbers, have better equipment, more famous models. But the smaller companies have the advantage of getting away with grittier, more explicit subject matter. So don't complain if you didn't get big name quality from a small, earnestly nasty video producer.

Another issue arises when a video outlet either sends you the wrong video or does not fill your order at all. This may be an honest mistake; it can also mean you got scammed. If you have not received a video within a reasonable time period, write a letter to the company and inquire. If nothing comes of your letter after another reasonable period of time, send a second letter.

If they have taken your money with no intention of sending you a video, it is frankly not worth your while to track them down and file suit. There are, however, two things you should do. First, send a letter to the magazine that ran the ad so the ad can be pulled. This is a public service to other people so they don't lose money as well; it also may create liability for the magazine if it knowingly continues to run an ad from a scam after it has been informed that it is a scam. As a general rule, magazines aren't liable for what people do through the classifieds; I think there is probably an exception if it is on notice that the ad is fraudulent.

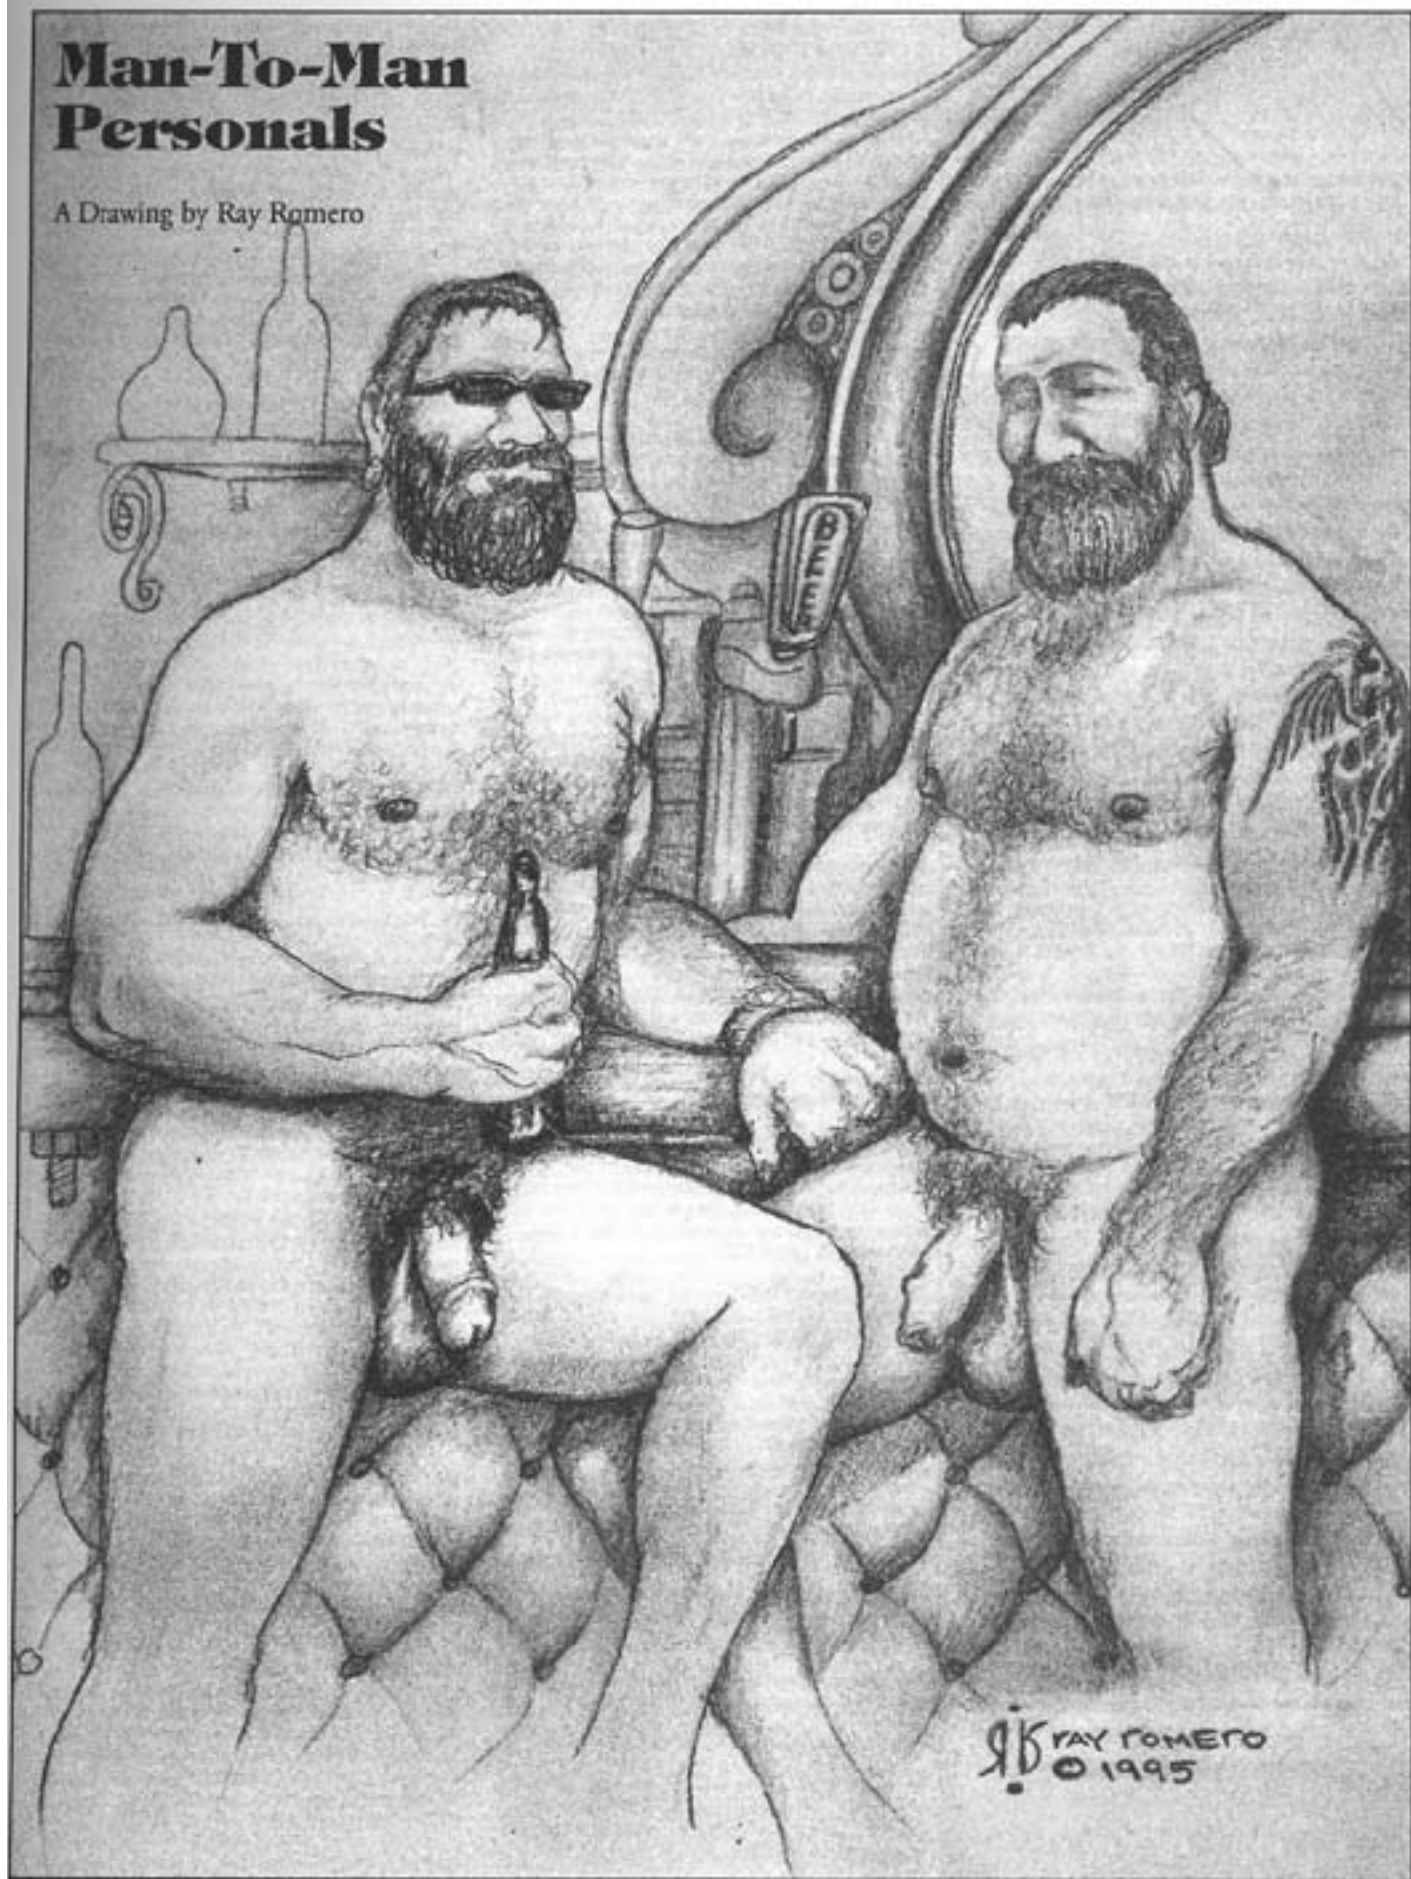

Second, you should also let the postal service know what happened to you. Using the postal service to obtain money under false pretenses is a federal felony, punishable by many years in jail. The US attorney's office has lots of options not available to private citizens, and it does follow up on postal fraud. They will track down people who are obtaining money through the mail under false pretenses. A simple visit from the FBI can do wonders at getting people to live up to promises made where the post office was used as the method of collecting money. And again, even if nothing comes of it from your standpoint, you'll at least be performing a public service that may keep others from getting ripped off.

If you receive a video you did not order and do not receive what you did order, it may be an honest mistake or it may be a fraud. You need to make an immediate decision as to what you plan to do about it. If you want what you ordered and nothing else you must return the wrong video prints with a demand that the video company fill your order correctly or refund your money. If you accept delivery of the wrong video, which in this context means not immediately returning it, it's yours, and is a substitute for what you ordered.

As with anything else, the primary rule to follow in ordering videos through the mail is to use common sense. Know with whom you are dealing. Try to find out if their other customers have been satisfied with their product. If you have the chance to see some of their other videos before you order, do so. Be an informed buyer. And remember, there are many honest video dealers out there but there are also a fair number of crooks.

Man-To-Man Personals

A Drawing by Ray Romero

HOW THIS AD SHIT WORKS

1. Dialing BEAR Voicemail. To use your credit card, call 1-800-347-BEAR. The Bear Computer will tell you what to do. If you wanna charge the call to your home phone, dial 1-900-HOT-BEAR. You can record your own personal greeting, answer someone else's, or talk to whoever else is jacking-off on the line. Note that mailboxes come with four or five digits.

To collect your voicemail messages: At the main menu, hit the star key. This takes you to your mailbox. Always press keys slowly and firmly. If you get stuck, the star key takes you to the main menu. If you're on a dirty bulletin board, leave your area code so guys know where on the planet you're calling from.

2. Constructing your ad. Talk a bit about yourself and be real clear about the types of folks you'd like to meet through your ad. As much as possible, avoid telling us who you don't want to meet. No negativity. It doesn't work.

3. Names. We can't print just Occupant or Boxholder. You must use at least your initials, or a nickname your postal carrier knows.

4. Cost and duration. Personal ads are free if you're a BEAR Buddy. Otherwise, they're 25¢/word/issue. Wanna change your ad? Send in $5. Wanna discontinue your ad? Write in and we'll pull it. You will have to pay to have a pulled ad put back in, though.

5. Deadline for BEAR 33 classifieds is May 8, 1995.

6. BEAR Postal Box Numbers. For US subscribers. Free to BEAR Buddies. Otherwise, add $5 to your ad. A word to the wise: Your own address will get you more responses.

7. Replying to a BEAR Postal Box Number: Listen good, 'cause you'd be surprised at how many guys fuck this up: Write your letter, put it in an envelope and seal it. On this envelope, put the fella's box number IN PENCIL where you'd normally put a stamp. Put this letter along with $1 in a larger envelope and mail it to us. We always forward letters unopened if you've done what's called for here. If you screw up, we open your letter and laugh. So do it right.

8. Personal vs. commercial ads. You know what a personal ad is and what isn't.

9. We reserve the right to edit personals for editorial consistency and clarity. We reserve the right to refuse any ad for any reason whatsoever.

10. Changing your ad: It's cool. But it'll cost you 5 bucks, and must be in writing.

11. Photo ads. We'll run a shot of your face or dick—but only once. Your photo must have a signed model release. Each photo sent to BEAR must be signed with your name and address on the back. They're printed first-come, first-served, so you may have to wait a few issues.

If you have questions or problems with BEAR voicemail, call Daniel at 415-546-7124

DOMINICK

What d'ya think? This is Dominick. He has a dick, an asshole and fur in some damn sexy places. You shoulda got a load of how that fur smelled after a day of romping around in the New Mexico wilderness with us.

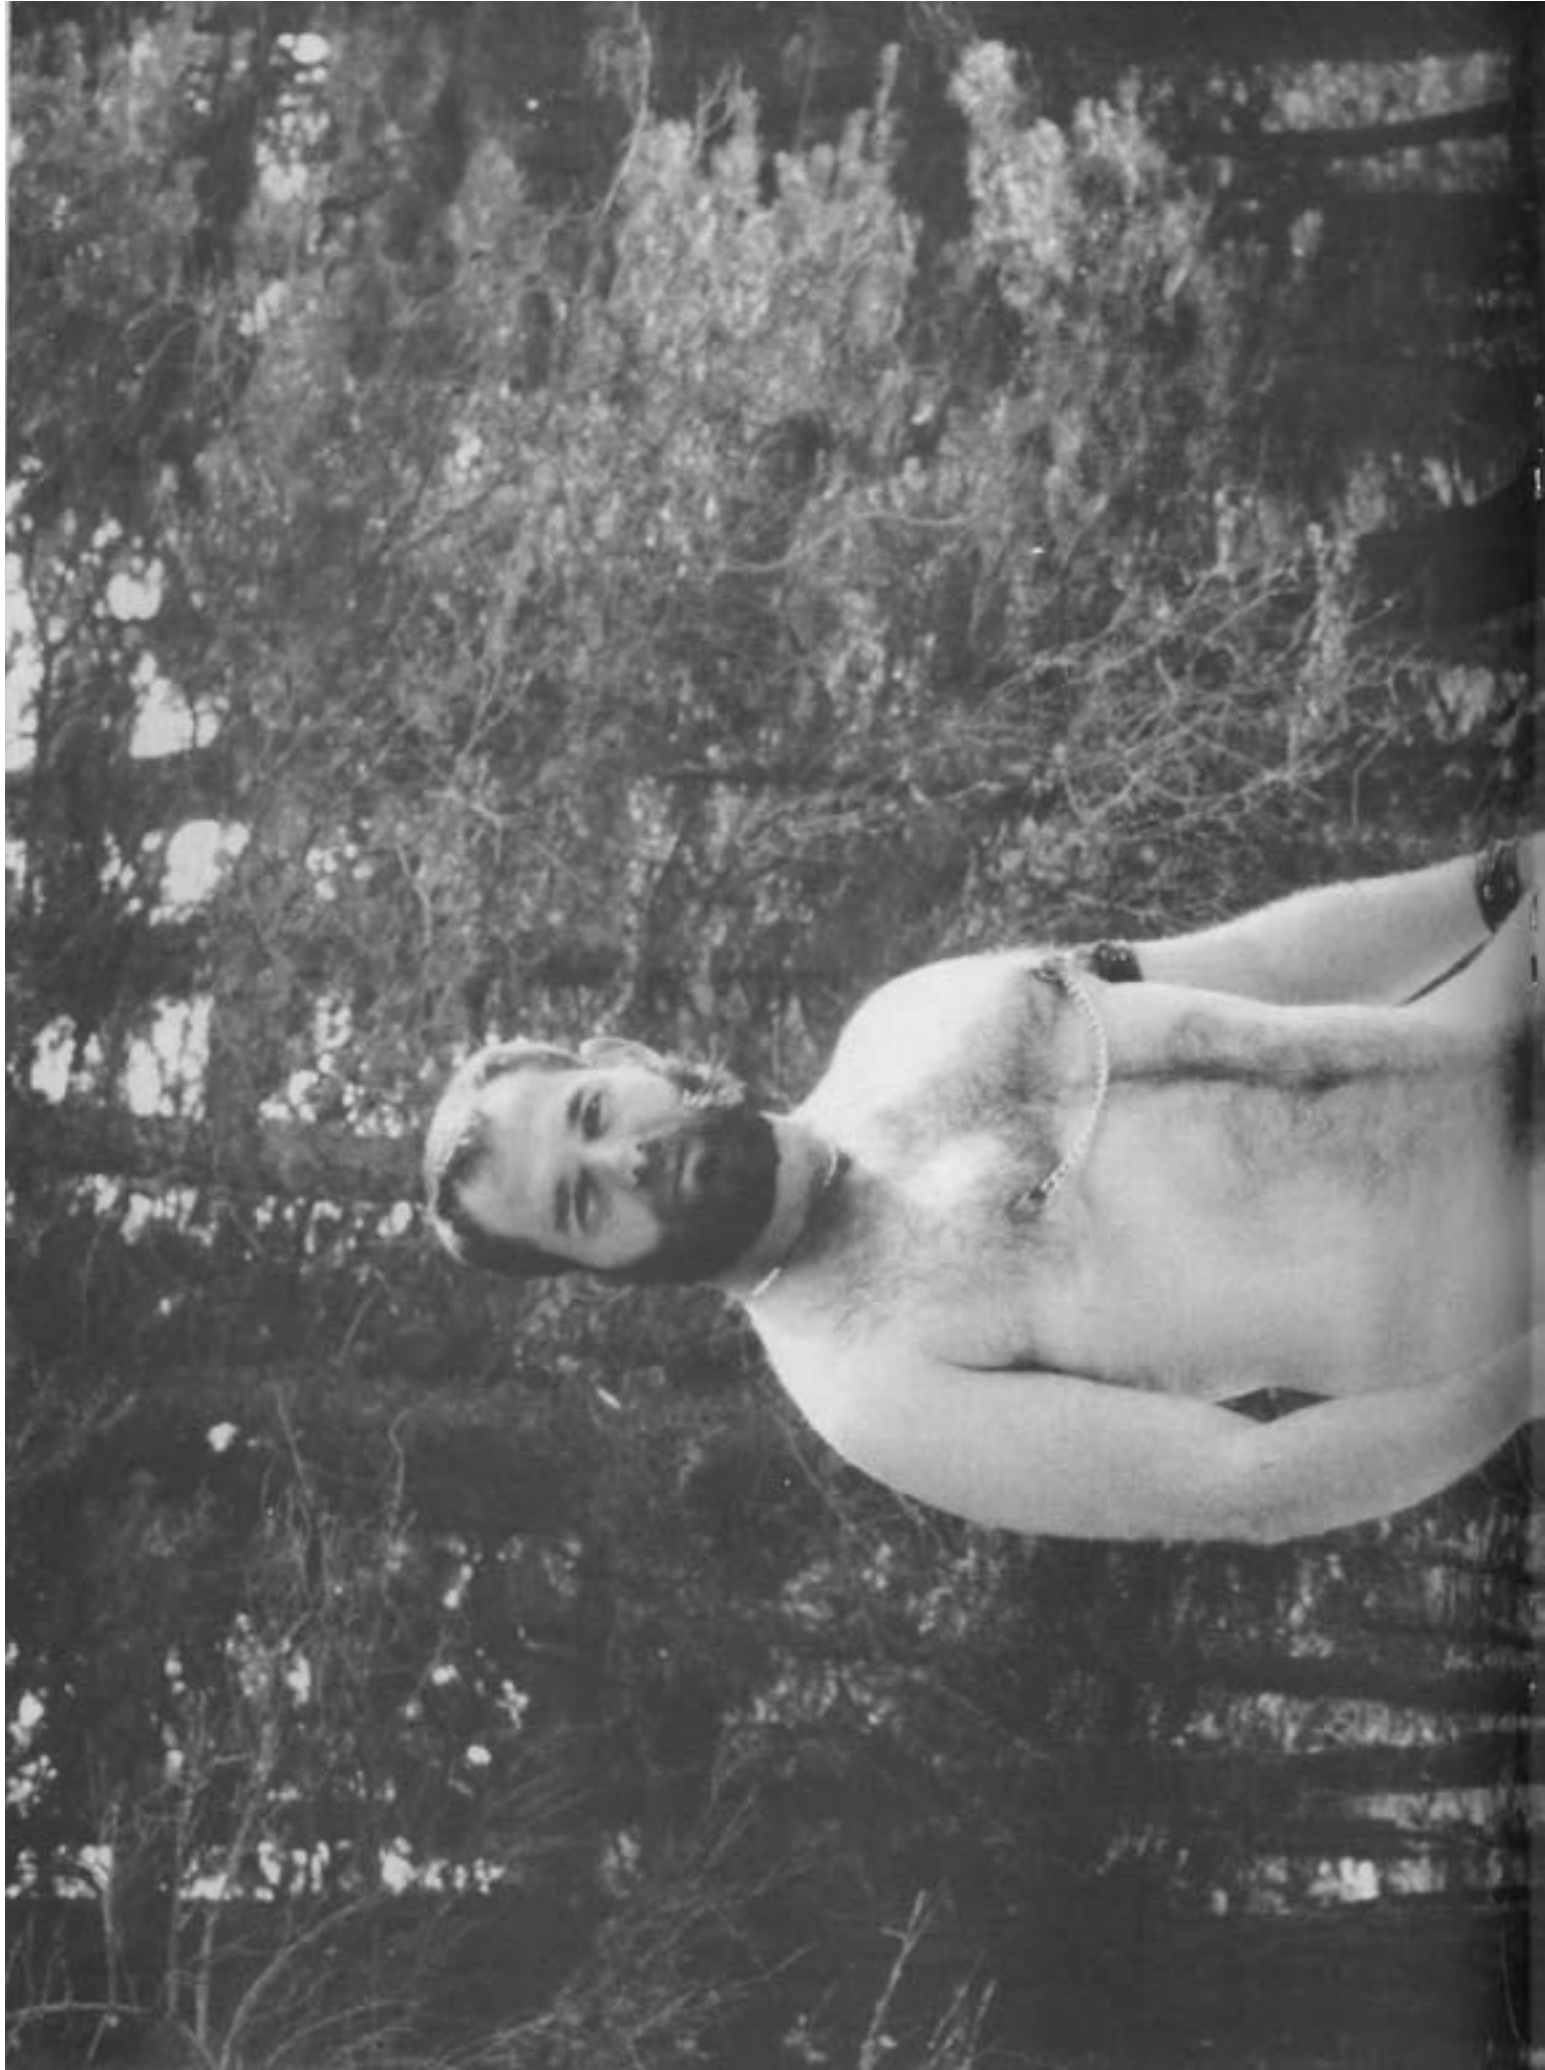

He's an advanced-placement kind of guy. While not yet pedigreed, he's working to complete studies at the University of New Mexico. In anthropology. Which means not only is he packing a brain in that great body of his, but he's probably a little kinky, too. Anthropologists always are. He says he'll do you down and dirty, or'll go for the fireplace-and-champagne routine. He's got an easygoing, warm sexuality about him that makes him real fun to get to know.

Dominick says he thinks oral sex is a good appetizer, but fucking and getting fucked will get him off every time. He likes to head out to a local hot springs and get nasty in the wilderness. That's where he took us. He says he once fucked a guy at the edge of a 300-foot cliff, in full daylight, with panoramic view of God and everything.

BEAR models come from the same place you did. They were in bed, whacking off, looking at this very page. And suddenly, they got an idea....

Chances are you've got your dick out right now. Nice to see the real you there, fella.

If the idea of people looking at you naked makes your hole twitch, we want you. Send us pictures. You might become famous, and get all the sex you want.

This release is necessary for all people photographed in BEAR.

Complete this form and send it with your photos. Put your name, signature and phone number on the back of every gawd-damn' picture you send us. We don't have time to play pin-the-prick-on-the-Perv-from-Purallup as much as we'd like.

That's right, it's the Bear Diner in the Blue Ridge Mountains of South Carolina—in the town of Fingerville. Steve sent this in; that's him standing there. According to him, the Bear Diner is a total dive. But it has lots of truckers and Harley riders to look at. By the way, we recommend the corned beef on scourdough with a side of slaw.

- If a guy gets in touch with you, write back. Even if it's just to say "no thanks," he deserves to know you got his message.
- BEAR ads aren't a marketing base. If you think your new hair-growth system is worth selling to the world, do it someplace else. Leave our advertisers alone.
- Prisons aren't a good place to send money, or pictures of your hairy ass. By all means, correspond and make friends. But know the potential for trouble to you as well as to the guy on the inside.

LIVING WITH A BEAR--HAIR IN THE SINK, HAIR IN THE SHOWER, HAIR IN THE BED, AND HAIR IN THE TEETH!

Get
Mushy

Else!

This kindly admonition was recently printed on the cover of Las Vegas's New Times, as sent to us by Joe Wolf from thereabouts. It was their Valentine issue. I don't know about you, but I'd mush damn quick for this little fella.

A special thanks to his creator, Robert A. Sundin III, and the New Times for letting us show you to him.

A New York Attitude

This is on the car of a man named Bill. When you see it, you're supposed to go, "BEAR, I Love You."

It's the same mantra we use every day here at the shop.

Bill lives in upstate New York, which is good. If he left a plate like this parked on Christopher Street in Manhattan, they'd probably rip the fucker off.

Can Cum Freeze Before It Hits The Ground?

This plaintive query was posed in the Write To Papa section of BEAR 31.

We shall now provide the response: Yes.

Marcus from Fairbanks, Alaska, assures us that, at -40°F, hot coffee will crystallize before hitting the ground if poured from a second story balcony—so will a stream of piss, or wad of cum. But unfortunately, at that temperature, frostbite can set in within seconds. We'll leave a practical demonstration of these procedures up to the more intrepid of our northern readers.

BEARDS: A HEALTH HAZARD?

Facial hair causes baldness and may be hazardous to people's health, according to the Disaster Reduction Press. Scientists cited in the state-owned Chinese paper said that the wearers of beards and mustaches breathe-in benzene and ammonia fumes trapped in their facial hair, taking in unwanted pollution with every gasp. It also quoted French researchers who found that beards don't allow the body to cool off. "This makes the scalp too hot and affects the function of the brain," the paper reported. "To compensate, the body drops hair from the head to create baldness."

Ol' Rick of San Luis Obispo, CA, sent us the above clipping, which appeared in the local 25 January 1995 New Times. "I think this calls for some hard-hitting investigative reporting, and I think your publication is just the one to do it," Rick suggested.

We can do hard-hitting. I'm not so sure about investigative part, but I do know this: What a load of horse shit.

First of all, baldness is one of those secondary masculine characteristics that, if it's gonna happen, it's gonna happen. Beards just complete the look to make men unbearably sexy and to get them into this magazine. This news article puts the chicken before the egg...so to speak. As for pollution, I hate to say it, but it's pretty hard to get a breath of fresh air in China anyway. But if there is a risk of extra pollutants being held in facial hair, we recommend you scrub your bushy face in a man's asscrack at least twice a day to clean it.

Fuckin' Around

Hey there. It's been awhile since we've talked about that health crisis shit. And since we live to make you horny, it's only fitting that we check in with you every now and then about staying healthy too.

You basically know the drill. Fuck with condoms, don't do it when you're shit-faced, learn to say no. Yada-yada-yada. In one ear and out the other. But do you feel like the drill doesn't cover everything? That no one can give us convenient, absolute rules anymore?

HIV-positive people don't always transmit HIV. A receptive mucus membrane isn't always a receptive mucus membrane. Saliva doesn't always kill the virus—the same goes for Nonoxonyl 9, the spermicidal lubricant additive.

So what's a manageable risk?

It's a personal choice thing. It's about where you figure you'll be in 10 years. Have you really decided to stay healthy? A lot of people forget that part. So we give you the modern drill, one more time, and let you apply it to what you want out of life:

1. Sucking dick is one of those Risk Management deals. HIV has been found in precum, and people have contracted AIDS just from sucking dick. Know that. But also know that not everyone who sucks dick gets AIDS. You have to decide. If it came with, say, a 15 percent chance of infection, would you still do it? Don't take cum in you. Don't suck cock with bleeding gums or pizza burns on the roof of your mouth.
2. Butt fucking should be done with a condom. Without one, the opening of your dick smears right up against tissues that transmit the virus. That's how straight men get AIDS from women. Make sure you're using a latex rubber (not an animal-product condom). Oil-based lubes such as Vaseline, Crisco, Wesson or hand lotion'll melt a regular rubber. They now sell polyurethane condoms which can be used with oil. Learn the difference.
3. If you're cumming inside someone with a rubber on, do a final safety check before you shoot. Make sure the hummer's on right and in one piece. Afterward, back out carefully while holding the rubber all the way down your dick shaft. Wash your dick and pubes before taking the condom off.
4. Eating butt is a lot like sucking cock. The risk is there, but is not absolute. Shit can contain the virus, in various strengths, depending on your partner's health. There again, you have to decide.
5. Fiat with gloves on. Your hand can scrape in ways you won't necessarily see.
6. Cum has the highest concentration of HIV, so let him shoot on the furniture instead of on your eyes, butt-hole or peeling hang nails.
7. Don't force the other guy to take care of you. Sorry, dude. It's your job.
8. People fib. Protect yourself anyway.
9. Getting shit-faced makes lots of things sound like a real good idea that maybe aren't. Keep sex and drugs in separate bedrooms (rock-n-roll, though, is always cool).
10. Whether you're HIV-positive or not, have you decided you're going to stay healthy? It's kind of easy to fall into the "we're all going to get sick eventually" shit-hole. Lemme tell you something: You get what you settle for. So take care of yourself out there.

When we started out to make a dirty magazine and call it BEAR, we had average, real men in mind. Men whose bodies are shaped by real living and honest work instead of Nautilus and Slim-Fast.

In other words, you.

Our belief has always been that honesty and reality are a hell of a lot more sexy than the world of the made-up.

As you've heard, we've been through a lot here at the shop. In the past year or so, we've used most of the dirty pictures, art and fiction we had on file. No one had time to get more.

Now we're out looking for more stuff. If you read BEAR you already know what we're hoping to find. We stay away from studio shit most of the time. We want the real-life masculine bodies and ideas that can only come from you. Send us what you have, be it naked pictures (we like those best), drawings, commentaries, fiction, articles and funny shit you see lying around. Stories and photos pay; Shits & Giggles are an act of love. Send 'em on in, and see what happens.

Domesticity
Isn't Pretty
By Tim Barela
Paillard Press
$12.95

"Hmmm...unwed
teen father, unwed teen father's gay father, unwed teen father's mother—gay
father's ex-wife,
gay father's lover
and gay father's lover's mother...My, isn't this cozy?"

Sound like a West Hollywood soap? Well, you're close. It's the immortal words of Lurch as Nurse Mike, one of the many sharp-witted characters in Domesticity Isn't Pretty by the amazing Tim Barela. A compilation of comic strips from the Leonard & Larry series, tells the story of two gay men living the dream to be happily married, yet who are plagued along the way by trials and tribulations that will keep you roaring with laughter. They find adventure in waking, working and loving; mirroring our lives in a way that endears us to them at every turn of the page.

Leonard is a Jewish photographer and self-professed member of the "lavender sweater crowd" who's dealing with his mother, an overly caring Yenta; and Larry, a red-headed, bearded guy with two teenage sons from a failed marriage and a popular leather boutique on LA's trendy Melrose Avenue. They could be any of us with our everyday traumas and dramas, and that is what makes this book so wonderful. Domesticity Isn't Pretty is a story about ourselves, smacking us in the face with the humor of gay life with a rarely equaled caliber of animation. Tim Barela has the gift of making us feel at home in his art. Whether Larry is cooking dinner in chaps and harness or the two of them are cuddled in bed together, the nearly photographic quality of each frame makes this book far more than a comic—it's the transcript of a relationship.

However, if your looking for wad-shooting eroticism, move on. It is a fantasy, yes, but one that for many is harder to find, and far more lasting, than any one night-stand. It is one of lasting love fraught with little battles won and lost yet enduring through the end. If you can relate, we offer the book at $12.95, plus $3.00 S & H. Get it, share it, lend it out to a friend. Domesticity Isn't Pretty, but it sure can be an eye-opening riot.

Foreskin; A Closer Look
by Bud Berkeley
Alyson Publications
$9.95

You always want what you don't have. In the case of most Americans, it's foreskin—lots of it, and smelly too. Interestingly enough, in Europe and Asia, circumcised men are sought out as being unique and empowered with special prowess.

It can be an amazingly volatile issue. Protest groups exist to stop the circumcision of American baby boys, and wouldn't you just love to see what they do at sit-ins? Circumcision was even the topic of a daily talk show I happened to catch, some "Uptight Straight People Who Don't Understand Their Own Sexuality—Next On Gordon Elliot" program where the American sensibilities were shocked at the idea of foreskin. They even had a doctor sitting there saying "having foreskin's bad for you, it leads to complications."

Yeah, like how do I fight off all these guys who want to suck my uncut dick?

Whatever side of the fence you're on, dicks are wonderful icons that deserve the most attention you can give 'em. To that end, check out this book.

Foreskin; A Closer Look is a snazzy little volume written partly in the epistolary style (dude, that means it tells its story by a series of letters to the author). It's informative and engaging.

You might not learn how to un-circumcise your little wangola, as many people seek to do. But the book is an interesting foray into the history, attitudes and smegmas—sorry, I meant stigmas—regarding foreskin. It's worth checking out, and we sell it here at the shop.

It's his mouth: More than just a pretty smile, his mouth is a key to his profession, his sexuality, and his favorite passtime. Nile's a cook, a cocksucker and a writer—food, dicks and words. I think he sees himself as a mean mother-fucker, and maybe he is. But with such a grounding in life's oldest sensual pleasures, he's probably got what it takes to put a fella at ease. When he wants to.

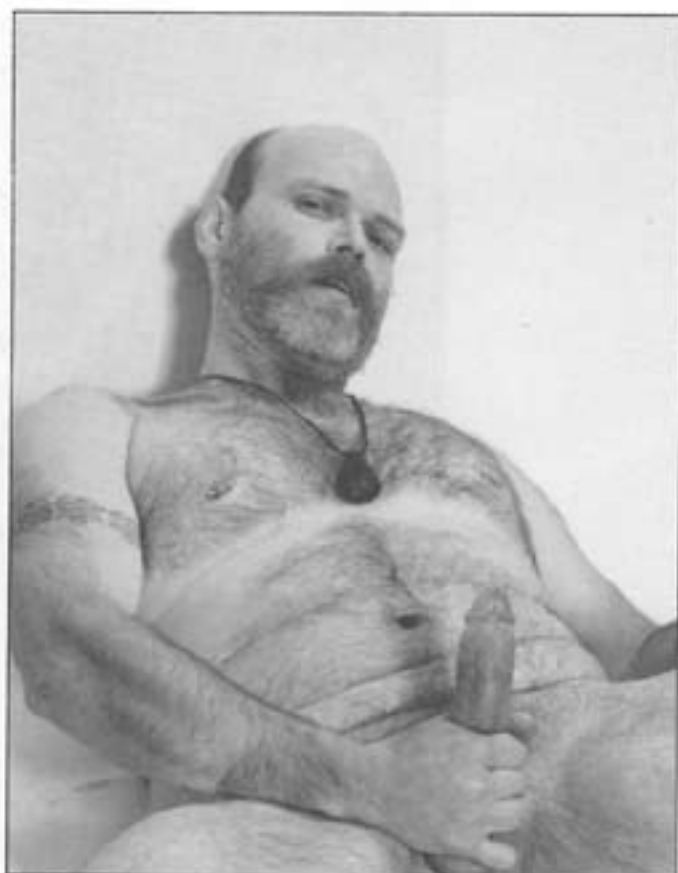

We know he's pretty popular with the guys up in Seattle where he lives. He's the current president of Seattle Men in Leather and is also this year's Seattle Leather Daddy.

When he was young, he got an early initiation in the art of cocksucking from a Navy pal of his dad's. He knew what he wanted when he undid the 13 buttons on the regulation wool pants. He says he'll never forget the sailor's thick, hairy thighs, fat prick, and the way the man smelled. Since Nile grew up with sailors, he's pretty handy with knots, too. He's got a ding with a city-view, and'll use it to tie a man down and fuck him all night.

He'll soon continue his education at the University of Washington. He's already a published writer, working to make his words even stronger.

THE TEN-YEAR ITCH

by Rusty

Illustration by DaDe/URSUS

It was 10 years ago when I first began working for McQuaid Industries. Back then I was just a young fella struggling to get through trade school and out of financial desperation, taking a part-time janitorial job there. I liked it. Pushin' a mop and broom was sweaty, honest, hard work that kept my muscles firm and dog-tired when my shift was over.

I'd been on the job only a couple of days when I first met the director of the whole operation. Boss-man Dave McQuaid had stuck his head in the janitorial storeroom one afternoon and asked if I'd sweep up a mess for him. Barely glancing up, I grabbed what I needed. He said, "Follow me," and lead me down the hall from the shop towards the executive offices. My nuts did a somersault on first sight of him and kept on rolling as I followed him down the hallway.

A big lug of a man, from the rear he was built like a fullback and had a lumbering gait that was almost comical as he trudged down the hall. He kept the curly, thick brown hair on the nape of his neck scruffy, and all I could think of was how the obviously ample fur on his back was desperately trying to crawl up and out of the three-piece executive cage it was trapped in. Especially on a hot August day like this one, when even the air conditioners couldn't keep up with the heat, he looked so outta place in a suit I almost started to laugh.

Drawn like a magnet, I stayed two steps behind him, beginning to lose myself in fantasy when he started to say, "I don't think we've met before..." and without warning stopped dead in his tracks. He did a 180° turn to face me, when—BAM!—I absent-mindedly barreled right into him head on. He started to say, "Whoa fella!" but it was too late, I'd knocked him off his center of gravity. The broom and dustpan went flying as he stuck out his paws and tried to grab my shoulders. Only one hand managed to grab my beard and I let out a yelp as we both hit the floor together.

I landed right on top of him and the side of my face felt like it had been scratched by 20-grit sandpaper when my cheek brushed up against the stiff, abrasive bristles of his beard. I dunno if my face turned red from that, or from embarrassment when he snorted out his nostrils and said, "Boy get offa me, ya smell like a buck in rutting season!" It felt like an earthquake hit as he began to laugh from deep in his belly, and since I was lying on top of him, it shook me to my toes. His startlingly deep voice said kinda quietly in my ear, "Well that's one way to introduce yerself to the boss!"

I backed myself up on my forearms with a jerk, and for the first time really saw him straight on. He had deep-set chestnut brown eyes that sparkled with fire and a handsome, full beard the same color, but with a few streaks of gray on his chin. That alone made it clear he was easily 10 years my senior. It took all I had in me to stifle a "Woof!" and remember my place. "Sorry, sir," I said, mumbling apologies as we got back on our feet.

I picked up my equipment and followed him over to a pile of shop debris on the floor near the office hallway. Dave stood over me with arms folded as I crouched before him to sweep up the mess. He was the boss, he wanted it done, this was my job, and suddenly I felt very aware of the sharp gap in rank and power between us. As I tried focusing on my dustpan, all I was aware of were those perfectly shined brown wing-tip shoes. I think I woulda dropped to my knees and licked 'em right then and there with a single word from him.

When I glanced up I couldn't help but see an ample bulge in the crotch of his wool slacks—even though they're designed to hide that sort of thing—and my eyes only paused a second on the glint of a wedding band before I fell into admiration of his strong, thick hands, and the stiff hairs that swirled out of his white shirt cuffs. I felt pretty damn small at that moment. Hell, I was just a janitor and he was the one who called the shots around here. But as I rose to my feet, a kind smile was waiting there for me.

So, maybe ya thought this story was gonna turn into something hot and heavy in the broom closet in the next sentence? Well, life ain't like that. Especially not in the workplace. It was just another day on the job.

When given the chance to work full time, I dropped out of trade school without giving it a second thought. For the next 10 years I had good steady work, some opportunities for advancement, and the chance to work near and for Big Boss-Man Dave.

A good working relationship formed between us over the years in spite of our differences in rank. He was always friendly to me and never failed, not once, to make a point to stop in his tracks and say howdy when we crossed paths on the shop floor. He seemed to take a sincere interest in how things were goin' for me, and whenever we talked, he always looked me so straight on direct—often with a hand on my shoulder—that sometimes even the most mundane work-related conversation would leave me shaking in my boots. I kinda knew, in his own way, he was lookin' out for me, and I was glad he did. Dave always made me feel like I had a place and belonged right where I was, working for him, and I was content to stay.

I remember somewhere along the line, one night I was emptying the trash in executive row. Maybe I shouldn't have, but in his office, I stopped a few minutes and sat in HIS chair. High-backed with brown leather, it was the throne from which the man who was a king in my eyes ran his empire. I got so turned on just sitting in it—I didn't even bother to empty the wastebasket. I headed straight for the can and with an angry fist of fury, blew a load of cum all over the back wall of the toilet stall.

It seemed so damn symbolic. It was another mess that was my job to clean up, a slippery mess I felt I was sliding into. I could hear the voices of the Protestant Work Ethic echoing in my head: "Respect authority," "Mind your place," "Act professional..." And worse, he wasn't just my boss, damnit, he was my friend too. That night I realized I was starting to lose a battle between my hormones and my better judgment.

Over those 10 years, I watched that handsome brown beard turn to gray, watched new wrinkles chisel his face full of character, and my admiration grew under his watchful eyes. It was a tortured hell I was resigned to live in. Every interaction with him was confined by the dynamics of the workplace, by visions of a devoted father, a faithful husband—every conversation stopped short of acknowledging the fondness that grew in my soul and the lust that burned in my brain. I feared losing his friendship if I dared to cross that fine line of blunt honesty.

As time wore on, I grew out of control with longing for him. He haunted my waking hours as well as my dreams. He'd scratch me into ecstasy with hungry whisker rubs, hump me, pump me relentlessly in my fantasies. In the drowsy wakings of morning, I never knew if it was my hands or his that reached beneath the covers and wrung the loads of hot cum out of my stiffened cock, or forced their way between my legs and into my hole trying to fill the emptiness that grew over time. When I'd fully wake, all I'd feel was the missing big, warm, Papa-Bear arms I longed for wrapped around me to help get me through another day of life.

It was 10 years into this whole thing. Business was good and the plant was being renovated—although I didn't know the executive washroom was being remodeled as well. I'd been working late fork-lifting dumpsters into place for the next day's construction and before locking up, stopped to take a leak. I'd barely undone the buttons of my jeans when when I heard the door in the can unexpectedly let out its familiar squeak.

Holy shit! I turned to see Mr. McQuaid walk in. When he sidled up to the urinal trough close beside me, the fur on his forearm brushed up against mine sending a shock through my body. I felt paralyzed as he undid his fly and pulled out both his ball sac a thick handful of uncut meat. He looked over and said, "Hey, don't be shy 'cuz of me!" in that friendly voice that had always put me at ease. But all I could think of was the way he was fingering the pucker of brown-tinted foreskin as he rolled it back and forth, then let go with a thick gush of hot, yellow piss. I quickly looked down, staring at the plastic urinal screen. I'd never had a problem with it before, but my aching bladder refused to cooperate. The seconds stretched into an eternity of hopelessness.

Suddenly, he reached over, grabbing my forearm with such force I thought he'd break it in half—and in a stern tone repeated, "Don't be shy..." as he forced my paw into his steaming torrent of piss. The heat seared through my hand and up my arm to the point of where he held his grip—the rest of me was frozen in shock. He leaned over until the whiskers of his mustache were stabbing my ear like a hundred needles and very softly said, "C'mon boy, take a piss with your Boss-Man...."

The intense brown eyes that were locked on me softened with a sad longing so deep it broke something inside me. My cock, in an instant, elongated then let go and 10 years of things held back found release beside him.

He cupped and filled his free hand from his unrelenting stream and cuffed me in the mouth with it! Salty piss dripped off my whiskers and onto my hardening cock. I didn't have time to react as he grabbed me by my beard and shoved his tongue—as insistent and demanding as his grip had been—deep into my mouth. For the first time, I tasted the hunger he'd kept hidden for so long.

He quickly swung his arm over my head and locked my neck in a vise grip forcing me to look down at his crotch as he began stroking his swollen meat. He asked, "Are ya hungry, boy?" He shook the arm clamped around me, making my head bounce up and down in agreement involuntarily as he smirked, "Sure ya are!" Working the plump skin at the end of his knob with his fingertips, small curds of smegma appeared at the opening.

I felt the grip on my neck tighten in an attempt to pre-empt a struggle, and gathering the pecker cheese on his fingertips brought it up to my face. He said, "I want you to know the scent of who's boss around here," smearing it roughly on my moustache and whiskers. As the pungent aroma rose up my nostrils, my cock twitched and uncontrollably dribbled out a gob of precum. He looked at me point-blank, sniffed my beard and matter-of-factly grunted, "Now you smell like a cocksucker, don't ya?"

I couldn't answer. Nothing, it seems, could get past the lump in my throat that formed the moment he had entered the john.

Keeping his grip locked around me, he dug his free hand into the front of my jeans, undid the remaining buttons, then pushed my pants down around my ankles. I felt the cool air of the bathroom rush against my backside, then the warm side of his hand sliding into the damp crack of my ass. He pulled me in closer, the heat of his throbbing cock and balls pressing up against mine.

"Undo my tie, son."

With trembling hands, I released the grip of the tie clasp at his belly, then moved upward to loosen the knot. My hands were shaking so much I couldn't untie it. He tilted his chin down and affectionately nuzzled my knuckles with his beard. I felt utterly naked and transparent when he pointedly asked, "Ya want it that bad, huh?"

When I whispered, "Yeah..." that simple word of truth echoed off the tile walls as though I had screamed out a confession of guilt. We stood there still, and in silence for several moments awaiting his verdict. My sense of time—all those years—collapsed in those few seconds. I felt like the floor had dropped out from beneath me, and I was glad he was holding on to me.

"Undo my tie, son," he repeated.

I took a deep breath to brace myself, and with one, then two more tugs, the silk fabric loosened and slid out of his collar. He tilted his chin up, silently indicating what to do next. I undid the buttons one by one, exposing the graying fur of his chest and belly as I pushed back the crisp, cotton fabric of his dress shirt. The animal scent of his perspiration rose up turning my fear into hunger. Pulling his shirt aside, he exposed one of his swollen, brown nipples and shoved my head down to feed on it. My tongue searched through the hairy thicket of his pec until it latched on to the warm, meaty tit. I sucked it with the blind instinct of a newborn.

When he raised his arm, my tongue moved upward, lapping up the trickles of salty sweat that ran down his side. The musky smell of his armpit overtook my senses causing my mind to spin into a blur. As I inhaled, my brain struggled to reconcile the blue-collar aroma lurking beneath Gathering the pecker cheese on his fingertips, he brought it up to my face. He said, "I want you to know the scent of who's boss around here," smearing it roughly on my moustache and whiskers.

the after-shaved, white-collar facade I'd always known. For the first time, we seemed more alike than different. With nowhere left to hide, the truth slipped past my lips as I exhaled the word "PapaBear..."

I felt his hand take hold of mine with a long, firm squeeze in acknowledgement, then the tie slipping from my grip. He began wrapping it tightly around his cock and balls, pulling it snugly with a groan, then knotting it. There against the sheen of red silk and gray wool slacks, his purplish-brown cock jutted out from the fabric, twitching with the heat of desire. A pool of glistening precum dripped from the puckered end. My already weak knees buckled as he released his hold on me and pushed me down to the floor. I opened wide in greed to gobble down his meat in one gulp, but as I moved forward toward his stiff pole he slapped me in hard in the face!

With one controlling hand keeping my head in place, he pushed his skin forward, rolling it up and over my nose. "Clean it off first!" he demanded, slowly retracting the wrinkled foreskin. Wrapping his fist around the base, the plum-sized head swelled in fullness until the skin on it was shiny and smooth as glass. Grabbing me roughly by the ears, he held my head back so that only the eager tip of my tongue could taste him. I worked and swirled it around the head and into his broad piss slit as best I could till not a crumb of man-smell remained on it. He then impaled the full length of it into me with one stroke.

He paused, whispering in a soft voice like a confession, "You don't know how long I've waited for this..." as he began slowly pumping his meat into me. Using my ears to control and guide every nuance of movement, willful, measured strokes probed the depth of my throat, each one using my mouth as a wet hole for his pleasure. Drool ran from the corner of my mouth as I choked down all that I could.

I was acutely aware of everything: the heat of his cock, the thick veins running the length of it, the scent of his ball sac crushing into my chin, the strength and warmth of the hands holding me in place. My asshole felt like it was melting into a puddle in the seat of my jeans when he drove it down to the root and said, "You're where you belong boy... Now hold still!"

Pulling back slightly, only to withdraw his cock head from deep within my throat, he held me there motionless. I could feel the veins along his shaft pulsing, its girth expanding and filling my mouth. As I looked up, beneath his gray whiskers—the heaving of his chest was the only movement as his breathing accelerated. I felt a rumble in my mouth as he growled out a moan, and wave after wave of hot cum gushed down my throat. I desperately grabbed for my cock and joined my boss in unison, spattering my load all over his shoes.

He looked down at them, then at me, and burst into hearty laughter when he said, "Well it looks like we're right back to where we started so long ago! Son, I need you to clean up a mess for me..." I dropped to the floor, and without shame, licked every drop of my bittersweet cum off his brown wing-tips.

When I'd finished, he bent down over me, pulled me to my feet in one strong, sure movement and wrapped those big arms around me. Holding me to his chest, I felt his bristly beard nuzzling the top of my head with so damn much tenderness and affection that, for a second, I thought I'd cry uncontrollably. With that gesture, with each deliberate stroke, he seemed to know that he was scratching away the pain of longing, was scratching away the distance between us, and was scratching away a 10 year itch.

After a relatively slow stream of quality music by openly gay artists, record racks are practically overflowing with discs that demand immediate attention—and the cool thing is that audiences for these albums can (and will) easily spread beyond the parameters of our community. Are we on the verge of a queer revolution in pop radio?

There is no way to properly prepare for the political and musical punch that Boy George delivers on his fourth post-Culture Club solo collection, Cheapness & Beauty. The always-outspoken artist delivers what are easily his most directly queercentric lyrics, and has brilliantly woven them into grunge/glam rock arrangements that are often akin to Nirvana and vintage T-Rex. When he isn't vocally daring around racing drums and guitar feedback, George is creating an aural contrast with several heartrending acoustic tunes and ballads that were recorded with the London Chamber Orchestra. The strumming Same Thing In Reverse has the juice to become an anthem for the next generation of gay men and women stepping out of the closet with its simple yet powerful demand for understanding. Meanwhile, the raucous God, Don't Hold A Grudge lays a somewhat similar message over a ballsy, guitar-coated rhythm foundation. Tearjerkers come in the form of the angry and emotional Unfinished Business and the symphonic II Adore (Steve's Song). Currently available on Virgin Records via British import, Cheapness & Beauty will likely be out on EMI Records in the States during the summer.

And if you are willing to dabble in rave/dance music for just a moment, you should not miss Liberation, the debut single by Boy George-protégé Lippy Lou. The English 19-year-old lass says she used the self-penned lesbian anthem to come out to various family members. She is not sharing the details of their response, though we can only envision auntie fainting at lyrics like "all the girls want to lick pussy dreads." A hilarious and thoroughly empowering mover on More Protein Records.

Jimmy Somerville has been placing overtly mano-a-mano prose in his music from the start of his career roughly 10 years ago, and his forthcoming album, Dare To Love, provides more of the same—but with a few intriguing twists. The angry activism of previous albums has been largely replaced by relentlessly upbeat love songs. "I've felt the need to remind people that men can fall in love with each other, in the most wonderful, romantic way," he says. "Sometimes that is far more of a political statement than an organized protest—not that I've given those up."

Dare To Love is already gathering active airplay with the swinging dance-bauble Heartbeat. And, digging deeper into the set, take note of the playful reggae jam Hurts So Good, the retro-pop ditty Cry, and the caressing Safe In These Arms.

Dare To Love is on London Records.

On a more grass-roots level, we have Grant King, a singer who has become a fixture on the East Coast club circuit over the past few years. On his third full-length CD, Let Love Out, he has honed his writing skills to near perfection. Voiced with a tender baritone range that creaks with pure honesty, the folk/rock-flavored material wisely does not try to reach beyond the day-to-day life experiences of a gay man. While his contemporaries strain to assemble lucid political diatribes, Grant strikes an emotional chord with poetic pain, while You With Your jabs at the heart and Soap pokes at the funny bone. Order this one from the New York-headquartered Know More Secrets Records at 212-645-1945.

Finally, the BEAR mailbag has once again delivered a diamond-in-the-rough. Denver-based band Bell is working the bar and club scene with a slammin' six-song cassette EP that rocks with crusty grunge guitar licks and fluttering pop melodies. Lead by Patrick Goodwin and Mike Vullo, the act scores points for holding nothing back on white-knuckled kickers like Fuck To Forget and You Let Me Down. The requisite acoustic number, Drunken Angel, proves that a strumming arrangement does not equal wimpy words, while the harmony-laden It's Not Me is a radio-hit waiting to happen. All Bell needs is a major label to find 'em, and we are predicting that one will. Until then, order cassettes (destined to be a collector's item) directly from Goodwin at 415-776-9616.

Would you buy a semiconductor from this man? He sells 'em for a living, down in the LA area. But that's just his day job.

At night, he's a hypnotist.

No shit.

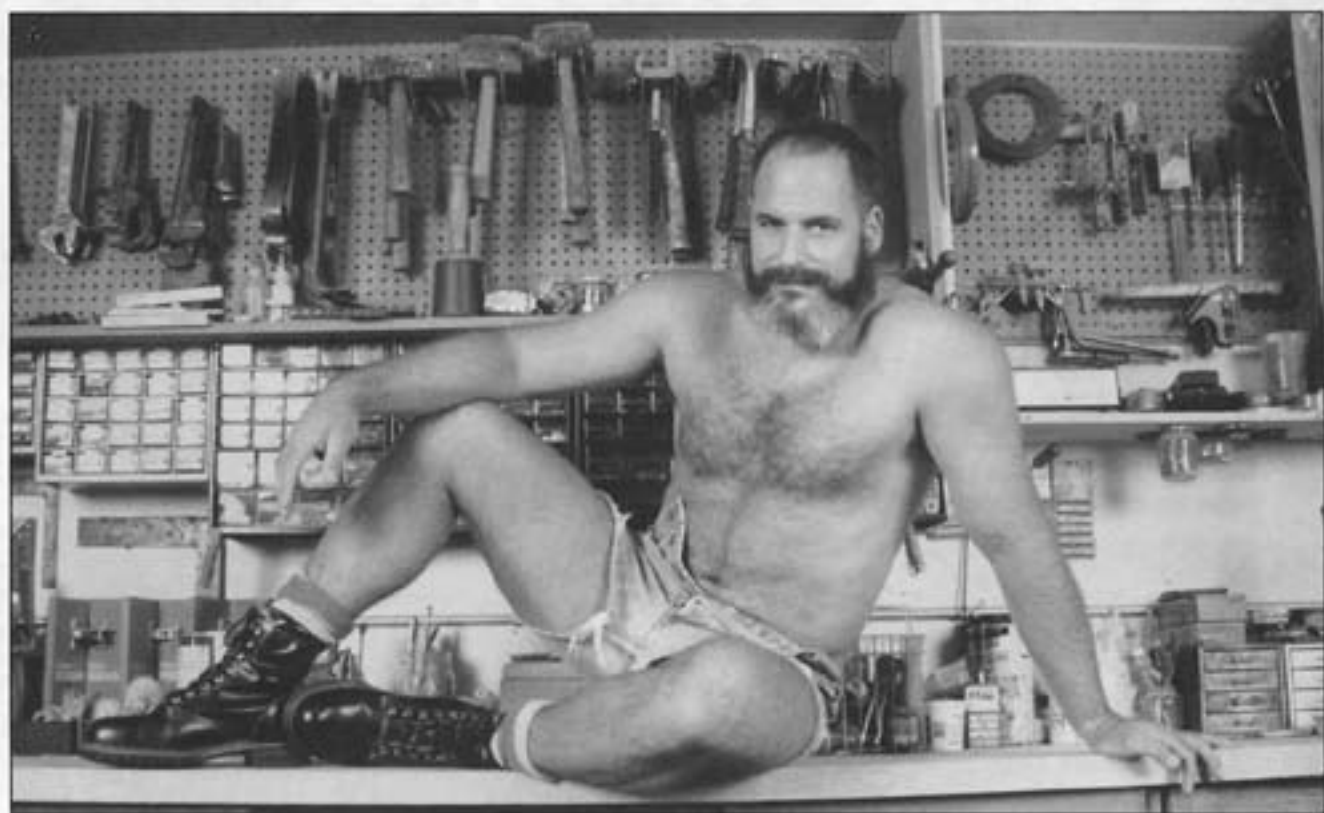

He's combined deep hypnosis with sex on more than one occasion, holding men willingly under his spell while surfing their skulls with that fat dick of his. He likes to touch, charm and kiss a partner, leaving the man breathless. Which is how he left us, the day he came in to get naked.

A self-confessed gym rat, he's also into computers, Country & Western dancing and putzing with carpentering tools.

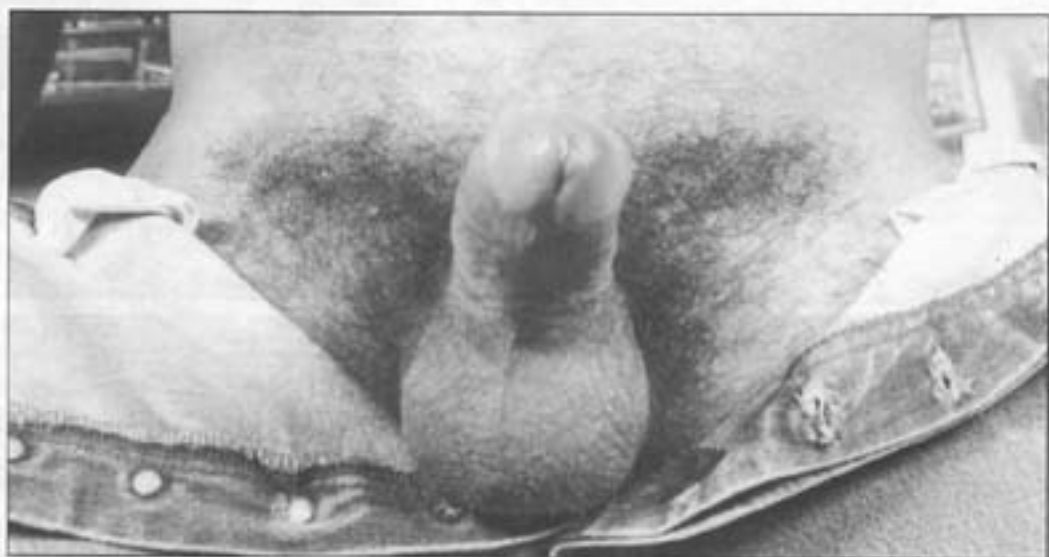

He rode a bicycle all the way across the country a few years back. Probably has something to do with those tree-trunks he calls legs. He claims to be a private kind of guy—except when he spreads his asscheeks for a camera.

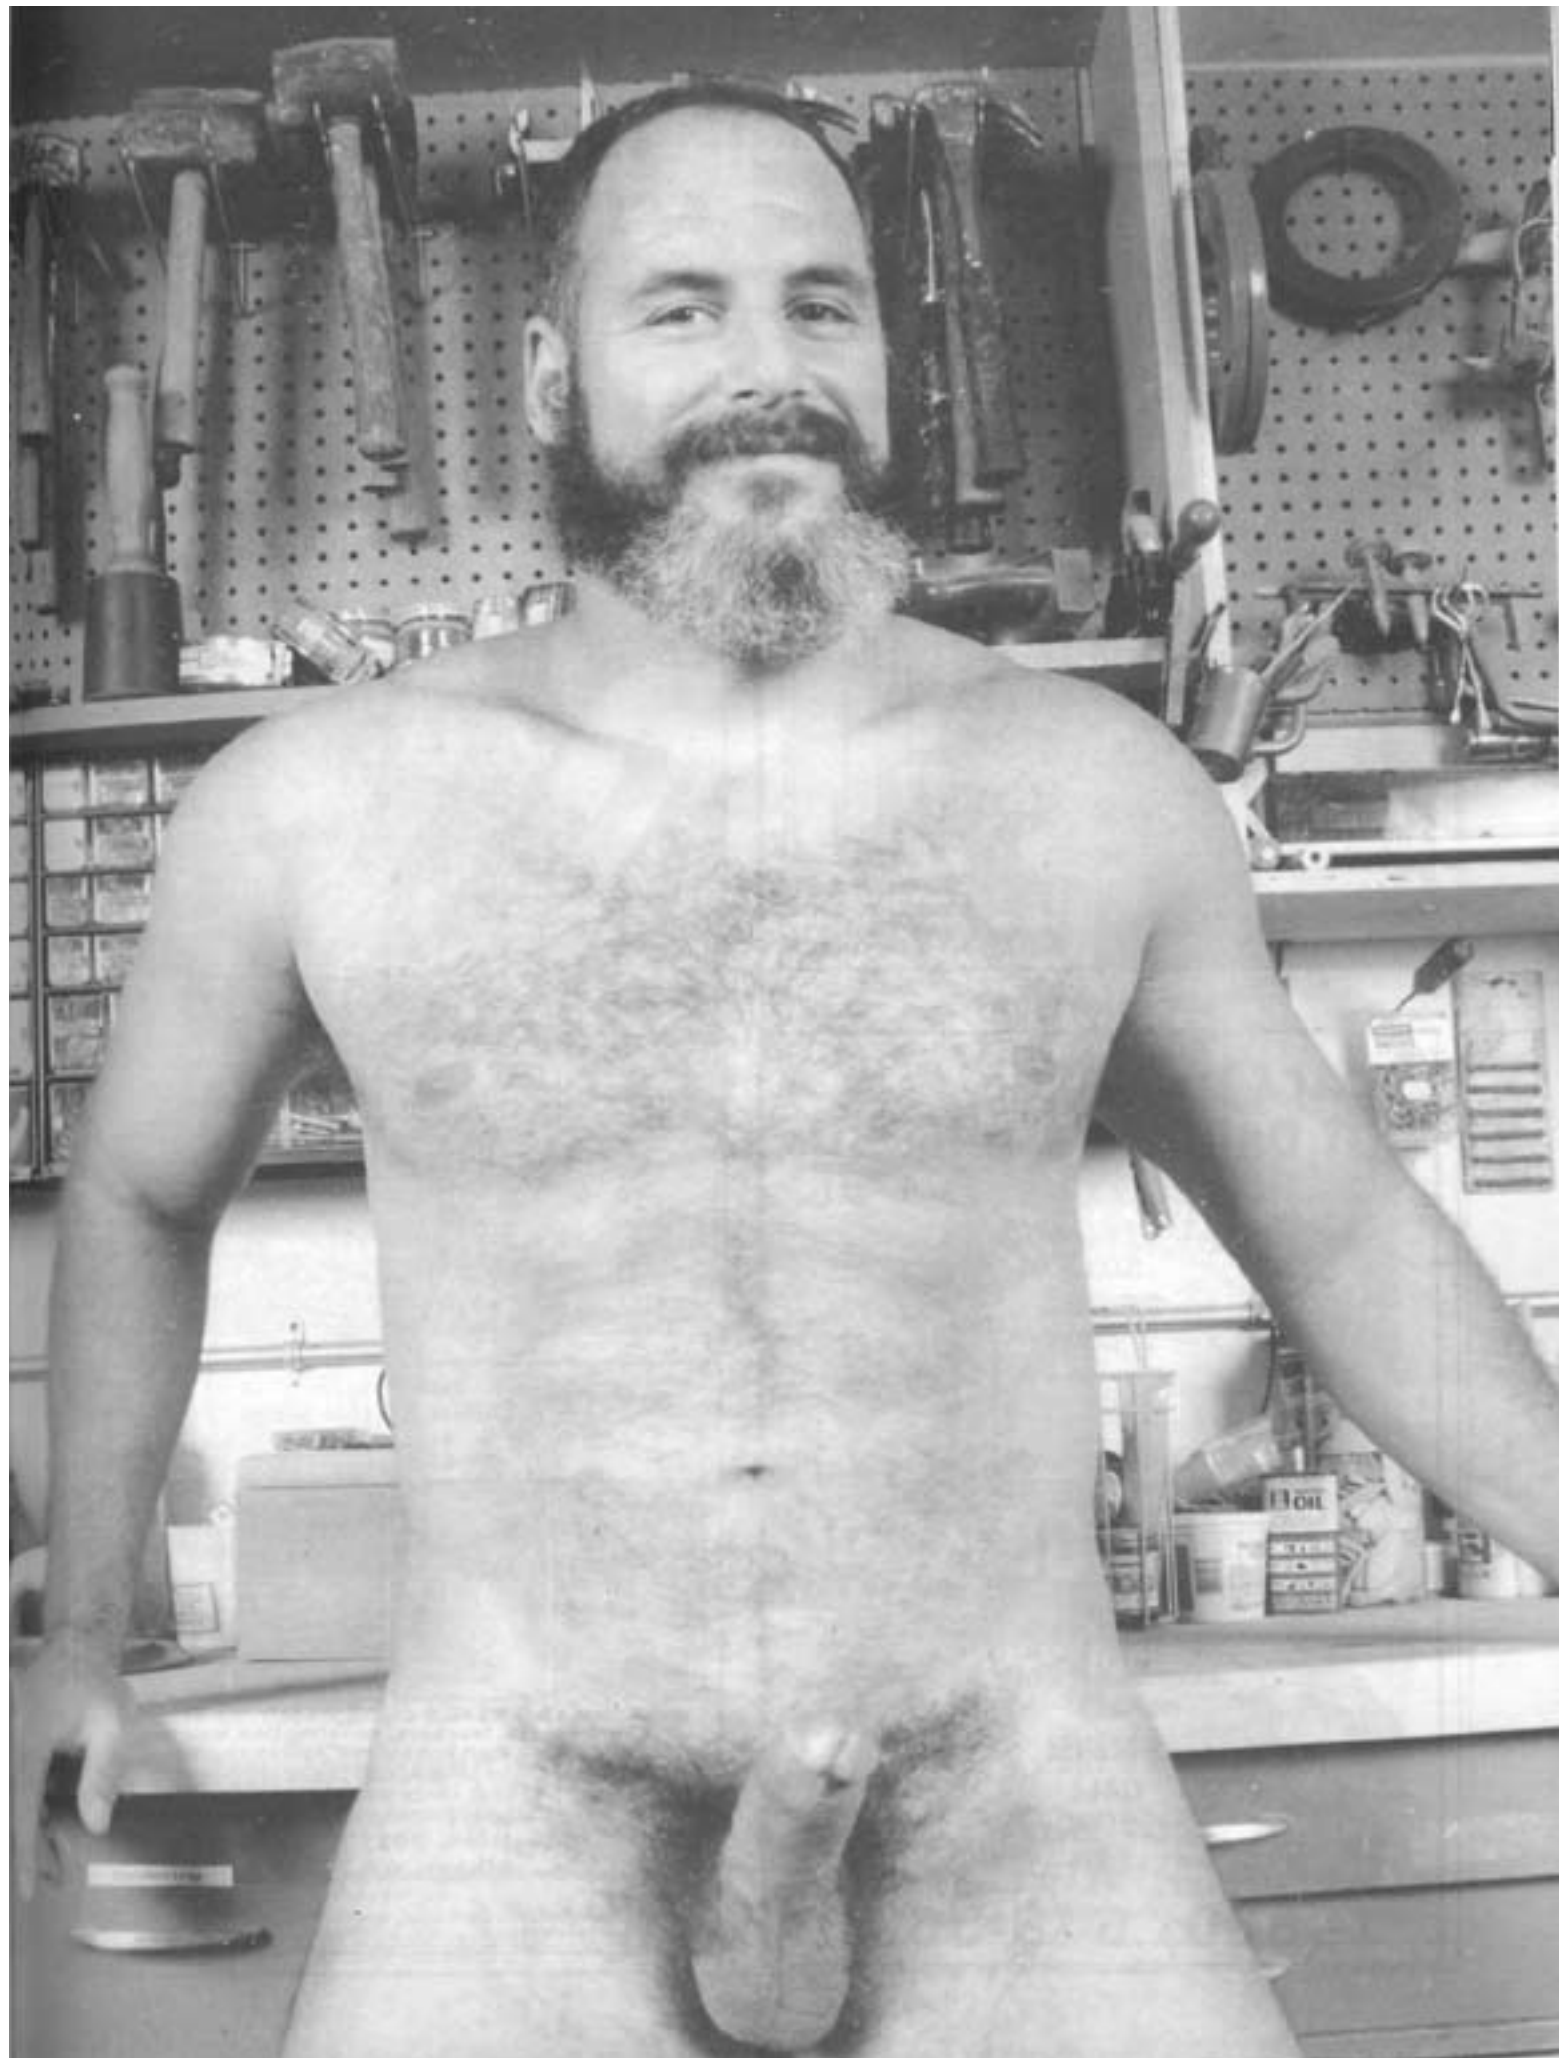

You'd be hard put to find a more easygoing man than Phil. The fact that he's packed into the proverbial brick shithouse of a body is just icing on the cake. Enjoy.
