LETTERS TO BEAR

Jeff, Jeff, Jeff!

Happy Valentine's Day! My butt and I turned 43 today and sending this shot along to you who appreciate a well-turned (up-ended?) furry seat seems like a romantic thing to do. This is a single, marriagable butt, by the way!

BEAR 47, aside from offering the usual diversion, was made ever more sensational by the spread (boy, howdy!) on Jeff! How, for chrissakes, did the bear police ever let him escape the Golden State, Land of the Grizzly Bear, for Minnesota? Our severe loss—their tremendous gain. Man, how I'd love to be snowbound with that guy for...ch, at least a week. I wonder whether he likes his pits tongue-scrubbed, not to mention that too-hot back and butt fur. Oh, I think it's time to go spank the monkey again over Jeff's pic.

Kevin
Sacramento, CA

Stucks...you remembered us on Valentine's Day! I don't know how we let Jeff escape this great state of California, but he's welcome back...anytime!

More Jeff...

Just a note to let you know how much I enjoy your magazine. BEAR is the only gay magazine I have ever subscribed to in my 18 years of being out & gay. It's also the only one I've written to and read cover-to-cover. But even you guys outdid yourselves with Jeff in issue 47. I can't get enough of the hairy hunk! Can you tell me how I can reach him? Also, any chance he'll be in any of your upcoming smut movies? My dick is already raw from the pics.

The Wittke Wire

It is with heavy heart that I inform you that Firestorm, the recent action/adventure movie starring one of my all-time favorites, Howie Long, is not very good. All right, it's terrible. It's downright awful, and not even in a fun way.

For those who have not experienced the glory of Long, allow me to catch you up. Howie played in the National Football League for 13 years as the defensive end for the Raiders. You know, the extra-mean team that dresses in silver and black? At 6'5" and around 270 pounds, he was noticeable. The fact that his big arms were covered in strawberry-blond fur sure caught my eye, as did the hair poking up over the neckline of his football jersey.

Watching Howie in action was something like watching a human Clydesdale, all animal fury and finesse. Of course, since he came to prominence in the early-80's, before removing body hair became a trend even for straight professional athletes (proof that the end of the world is near), Howie played many-a-game without shaving. A couple days' growth of beard was thick and butch looking. If you don't believe me, look for a copy of the 1989 Topps Howie Long football card. It's the perfect representation of the stubbly beard and furry arms that made Howie a real champ in my book.

Howie left football in the early-90's and segued into sports commentary. Eventually, when the NFL landed on the Fox Network, so did Howie. Sometimes they put him in a blazer and wire-rimmed glasses in order to achieve what Spy magazine used to call "The Scarecrow Effect"—the book-readin' smart-guy look. Other times, he was dressed casually, especially during the first season on Fox when Howie and his co-stars Terry Bradshaw (not devoid of blond fur himself) and James Brown were forced to appear in comedy skits at the top of each broadcast. The skits generally made use of Howie's size, and fun of Terry's good ol' boy persona. One excellent sketch featured the guys out fishin' and Howie in an unbuttoned Hawaiian shirt. And I didn't have my VCR turned on! Still, it was a nice memory and the sketches in general showed Howie to be almost as relaxed in a character-driven narrative as in his more familiar stats-spouting, talking-head mode. This appeared to bode well for his silver-screen dreams. It looked as if he were going to land on the Fred Dryer end of the jock-turned-actor spectrum rather than on the Joe Namath end, if you know what I'm saying.

And the fat is, Howie himself can be quite a vision. His immensity notwithstanding, he has a lantern-jawed gorgeous face that could make for movie-hero greatness. Sometime before posing for the cover of GQ in the mid-80's (a must for every collection!), Howie started sporting a Terminator buzz cut and making more and more noise about wanting a movie career after he retired from the gridiron. He finally retired after appearing in eight pro bowls and contributing to one Super Bowl win.

The transition to the big screen took a bit longer than the "Howie Long Master Plan" may have hoped, but Howie did have a terrific debut in 1996's Broken Arrow, directed by action/adventure master John Woo, and starring John Travolta and Christian Slater. Long played a big side of beef named Kelly who Here it is, guys. If any or all of the guys in the magazine flip yer minnow, and you feel like ya just gotta tell 'em how you feel, follow the E-Z format diagrammed here, to the right...and good luck. Remember, some of these guys might be married or somethin', so if you don't hear back from them right away, don't go gettin' all postal over it, OK?

Now, about Jeff doin' a video—sounds good to us!

Satisfied Customer

I just wanted to let you know that BEAR continues to keep some of us in the hinterlands satisfied with the sight of hot, lusciously furry men!

I fully agree with Chris Wittke re: Mark Addy from the British movie, The Full Monty. I fell in BEAR-lust with this British "fat bastard" during this movie—even through the bedroom scene he had with his wife there! In my humble opinion, Addy looks GREAT NAKED! There's nothing like a gorgeous bear with a working-class British accent.

That hot illustration by Douglas on page 31 is a great piece of JO fodder! It even was like one of those comically-stupid henchmen always following around the bad guys on the Batman television series. He managed to cut an impressive figure during his limited screen time—even though it did appear as if those massive arms had been waxed. But still, Arnold Schwarzenegger had launched his über-career with much less going for him in the thespian-ability department.

So taking all that into account, I can see why my hopes were more elevated than they should have been for Howie to step into the driver's seat of his very own movie. Well, I have seen Firestorm, and it is no Broken Arrow. You can imagine my thrill when I first heard that Howie was playing a firefighter. Approximately how many more of my fetishes could be squeezed into the movie? Would there be a peeing scene or sex in a men's room, too?

Well, no. Or if there had been, I sure as hell couldn't see it through the herky-jerky editing. It was even worse than the last Batman movie, which MST3K's Kevin Murphy (woof, woof) said was edited in "Confuse-o-Vision." Firestorm made that last Batman movie look like Citizen Kane. There's no sense in detailing the plot, because I am not sure if there even was one. Firestorm is the kind of movie where a character suddenly blurts out that he had done something wrong and he was sorry, but that he was tricked into doing it and then everybody forgives him and you have no idea what any of them are talking about, but you have a feeling that it had something to do with a big climactic moment that didn't make any sense when you sat through it about ten minutes before.

It really isn't Howie's fault that director Dean Semler is no John Woo, but it may have been Howie's fault that his character remains fully clothed for the entire film. Doesn't he know that action/adventure careers are built on "Beefcake! Beefcassaaaaaake!" (to quote Cartman)??? I mean, it's nice that Howie at least wears a V-neck shirt on occasion in Firestorm. It's also quite remarkable to see what would be a "V" on a mere mortal's neck, stretched into something more like a crew neck across his redwood trunk of a neck. And it's always a delight to see fur pokin' up over the remains of the "V," but it's not enough.

So instead of letting us be distracted by his enormous pulchritude, we are left contemplating Howie's size in relation to his co-stars, which leaves us with an impression of oafishness. His large features (Bradshaw often called him "pumpkin head" on the Fox pre-game show) are actually kind of scary in extreme close-up on the big screen. The huge capped teeth alone look like giant murals waiting to be painted by Christo.

No, Firestorm is not the tasty piece of brain candy I had hoped it would be. Nor was it the commercial success that Fox had probably envisioned after Broken Arrow (Firestorm's opening week grosses put it way down at number seven in that week's Top Ten Grossing Films). But all hope is not lost. Fox originally signed Howie to a three picture deal, so I guess he still has another game to go. How 'bout a comedy about a nude artist's model with priapism?

You can reach Chris Wittke at wittkeire@write.com to tell him anything at all. ☺

Nothin' says lovin' like a red cock and a soggy magazine!

Hey, that handsome bruiser toppin' the tree on page 77 of BEAR #46 is our buddy Chris. He lives here in San Francisco, and, in addition to that cute-as-hell face, he's got the most beautiful pair of biceps you'd ever want to...look at.

We're workin' on tryin' to get him naked for you guys, but he's the strong, silent, quiet type. You gotta love that.

If you want to write to Chris (or any of the guys you see in the magazine) see "How To Write To A BEAR Model" on page 5.

Sperminator Speaks

The response I have recieved since BEAR #46 dared to publish my SPERMINATOR photo layout has been great! I am presently making my initial "online" presence with chisel.com and I absolutely love the opportunity to get right into my cockmeat while chatting with viewers.

To celebrate my birthday on May 30, in NYC, I am planning to be the centerpiece in the Ultimate Cumbath!

I will perform live, on stage, and then host several "teams" of different men as they launch waves of synchronized cumshots over my body. Various groups have selected their troupe of heavy-shooters. I want to appeal to the BEAR community to field a team, or two, of between 5 and 10 hot guys eager to blast their best loads in unison. After these first select groups have gotten the cum-ball rolling, the general crowd will be encouraged to participate in the onslaught.

Whether you want to be front-row-center, or just join the general melieu, interested JO readers can keep in touch as to the exact venue by e-mailing me at sperminator2@hotmail.com. I want it all!

Good Job Hunting

With regards to Charles Hopwood in BEAR #47: Certainly anyone who's been job hunting without success for any extended period of time should look at all aspects of their interviewing technique, not only their appearance. Many companies have come to realize that individuality is something to be valued, not avoided. I've been in the banking industry for over 10 years. I've been through two large downsizings, one merger and one hostile buy-out, and I've been bearded and "husky" the entire time. I now work for one of the largest lending institutions in the world, and share a department with at least 10 other men with varying degrees of facial hair. It hasn't hindered advancement or pay raises at all.

So, all of you hairy, unemployed dudes should hang onto that fur for as long as possible. Take an interviewing course, hone your skills, look presentable, but don't buy into the conformist ideal. Any job where you have to fit into some kind of mold can't be a very good one, in my opinion.

Abstinence & Corncobs

Pete from issue #47 was hot! I'd like to lick every one of his tattoos. I loved the letter from E.H. from Delaware. I am just a couple of weeks away from my second year of abstinence (don't I automatically get my virginity back after that?). Since BEAR is so centered on the sexually (over)active, I'm kinda surprised that you printed it, but I'm glad you did. It's nice to know that others are feeling the same way.

I've got something to say about I.B. from New Jersey (Write to Papa, BEAR 47). He's obviously got a corncob up his ass about something. (Come to think of it...maybe it's a lack of something up his ass that's his problem.) Hey, asshole. Put your money where your mouth is. If you think you're such a goddamned stud, let's see what you've got. Until then, sit down and shut the fuck up!

I'll have to check my rule book, but I think it's actually three years before you get your virginity back.

Are we sexually overactive? Hell, I'd like to think so! ☺

JOHN

Down at La Fiesta de los Osos, we bumped into the photographer who had taken the shots of John here. Well, being suckers for a sweet smile and solid hairy ass, we couldn't help but share these shots with you guys.

This strappin' French/Irish furball, originally from Rhode Island, moved to Arizona in '91. C-c-c-can't im-m-magine w-w-why.

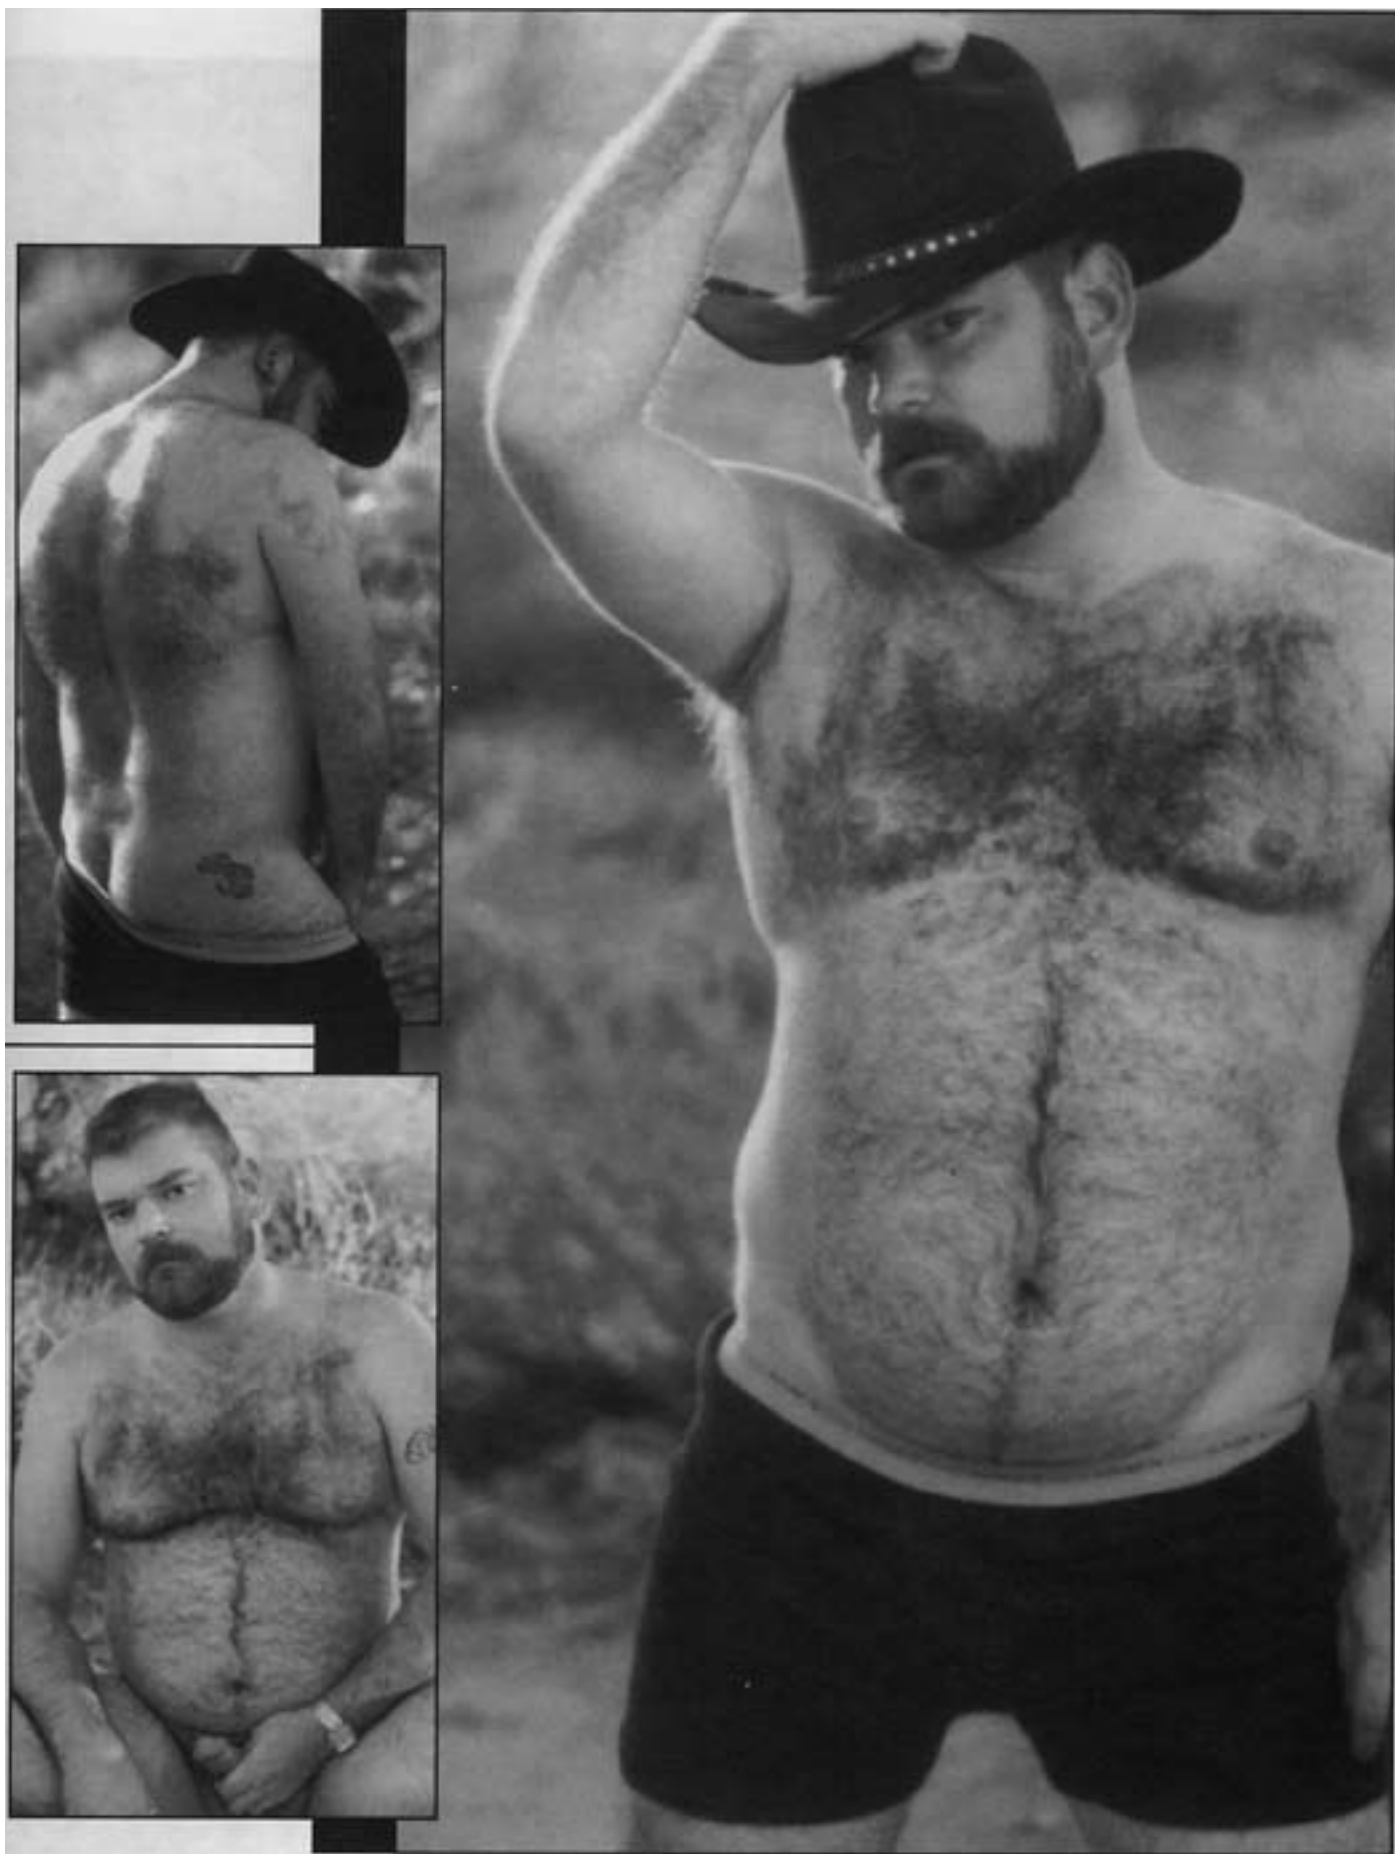

"A man's face," he says, is the first thing he'll notice, but tall hairy guys turn him on, and suckin' dick really gets his motor runnin'.

He digs rompin' with his two dogs (Bear & Rhoda), camping, and bowling. (Wonder if he does that Fred-Flintstone-tip-toe-thing on his approach.)

Partnerships

Two friends of mine, Chuck and Dave, recently decided to open a small business together. They came to see me and asked what they should do. They've known each other for ten years or so, and have shared a variety of experiences together, so when I asked them if they trusted each other, the answer was an immediate straightforward "Yes!" from both of them. Trust is the basic element in any successful partnership. If you do not feel that you can completely trust your partner to act in the best interest of the partnership, then you need to reconsider entering into a partnership with that person. Long years of friendship and shared experiences are a very good foundation for a partnership.

I then asked them what they planned to name their business. "Bear Products," they responded. I then suggested that they might want to check with the local authorities to see if anyone else was using that name. In the City of San Francisco, you register to do business under a fictitious name such as "Bear Products." It's easy to check the registry to make sure that no one else is using, or has reserved to, that name, and it avoids expense, saving embarrassment later on.

I also asked how they intended to divide the business. Much of the time, the division is fifty-fifty, but sometimes, when one partner puts most of the money and most of the expertise, then the division may be seventy-thirty. Chuck and Dave opted to go fifty-fifty.

They were also curious about establishing a partnership bank account. I told them that if either of them were functioning as managing partners with the ability to commit the firm to contracts then either of them could sign partnership checks. They could also decide that all checks should be signed by one partner, after informing the other. They could also decide that all checks must be signed by both partners. Dave has a degree in accounting, so they decided that Dave would sign all checks after first consulting Chuck.

I also asked if they intended to register their partnership. They said that they did. Registration is important because it gives presumptive notice to all the world that they are dealing with a partnership and not individuals. Chuck and Dave might want to add the word "limited" to "Bear Products" so that it would then read "Bear Products, Limited." This wording ensures that if Chuck and Dave get sued by some unhappy consumer, only the assets of the partnership can be used to settle the lawsuit. Chuck and Dave's personal assets are usually exempt from such a lawsuit except where Chuck and Dave have mingled their personal and partnership assets to such an extent that judicial review may be required to allow the plaintiff to have a fair opportunity to recover his or her award if the suit against Chuck and Dave was successful.

Insurance also concerned them. Dave had an accounting degree and had worked in a retail business environment for the last twelve years. Chuck, however, had a fine arts degree and was a photographer, graphic designer and an accomplished leather worker as well. Dave's concern was that if anything happened to Chuck, then "Bear Products, Limited" would be in real and immediate trouble. I suggested that he might want to talk to his insurance agent to get a variation on the "key employee" policy concept. The way the concept works is this: Bergen Jewelers has one employee, Henry Davis, who designs all of their jewelry. His designs have made a lot of money for Bergen Jewelers, and if anything should happen to him, Bergen Jewelers would lose a lot of money. To forestall this possibility, they are allowed to insure his continued good health.

The insurance company pays on the policy if Henry Davis dies or becomes too ill to work any longer. Since Chuck's talents and designs are essential to the well-being and success of "Bear Products, Limited", Dave will want to explore the possibility of taking out such a policy on Chuck with their insurance agent.

What if the partnership doesn't work out? One way to dissolve a partnership is by means of a buy or sell agreement in the written partnership agreement. "Buy or Sell" works like this: Chuck goes to Dave after a year or so and says, "This is not working out. I want you to buy me out for fifty thousand dollars." Dave then can either sell his share to Chuck or buy Chuck's share. However, if neither of them want the business, they may try to sell it to a buyer, or take steps for formal dissolution of partnership. This is an accounting process where obligations are paid off, the remaining assets are divided among the partners, and notice is given to the world that the partnership is at an end.

Death also needs to be considered. If Dave should die, where does his share of the business go? The written partnership declaration can specify whether it goes to the surviving partner, or if it goes into Dave's estate. It is a fact that many family owned businesses in America do not long survive the death of their founder. Dave's partner Chuck has a very pressing interest to see that "Bear Products, Limited" continues running smoothly after Dave's death.

Lastly, and most importantly, write it down! I've referred several times in this column to a written partnership declaration. If there is any dispute between the partners, or even third party outsiders who are taking an interest in the partnership, the court will refer to the written declaration of partnership when it renders a judgment. Such a document should specify who has a duty to do what, what the division is, a buy or sell provision and some provision for death or dissolution of the partnership. Be sure to consult your local attorney and cover your ass! ☐

Remembering the Past

The alarm sounded at 6:00 a.m. as it always does. "Fuck," thought Tom, "another day. More dealing with stupid people for no reason. Well, their needs for my services are paying for this house. That's something." Yawning and growling, he got out of bed and began the task of preparing for another day in Boston.

In the kitchen, Tom made himself a strong cup of French coffee as his grandmother had taught him. He smiled at the memories of his grandmother. She had been dead for over ten years now, and yet, he still missed her as much as the day she died. Tom was not close to his own parents or his siblings. They could not, or would not, understand his life and lifestyle. To them homosexuality was the same as committing a crime. He was damned to burn in hell. He remembered the last time he spoke to them. They spewed forth such venom that Tom had fled their house, vowing never to return. So his grandmother became his surrogate parent. She would listen to him, counsel him, and scold him when necessary. Now she was gone. He missed her.

Tom glanced at the clock on the stove. "Shit," he muttered, "better get my hairy ass in gear or I'll be late."

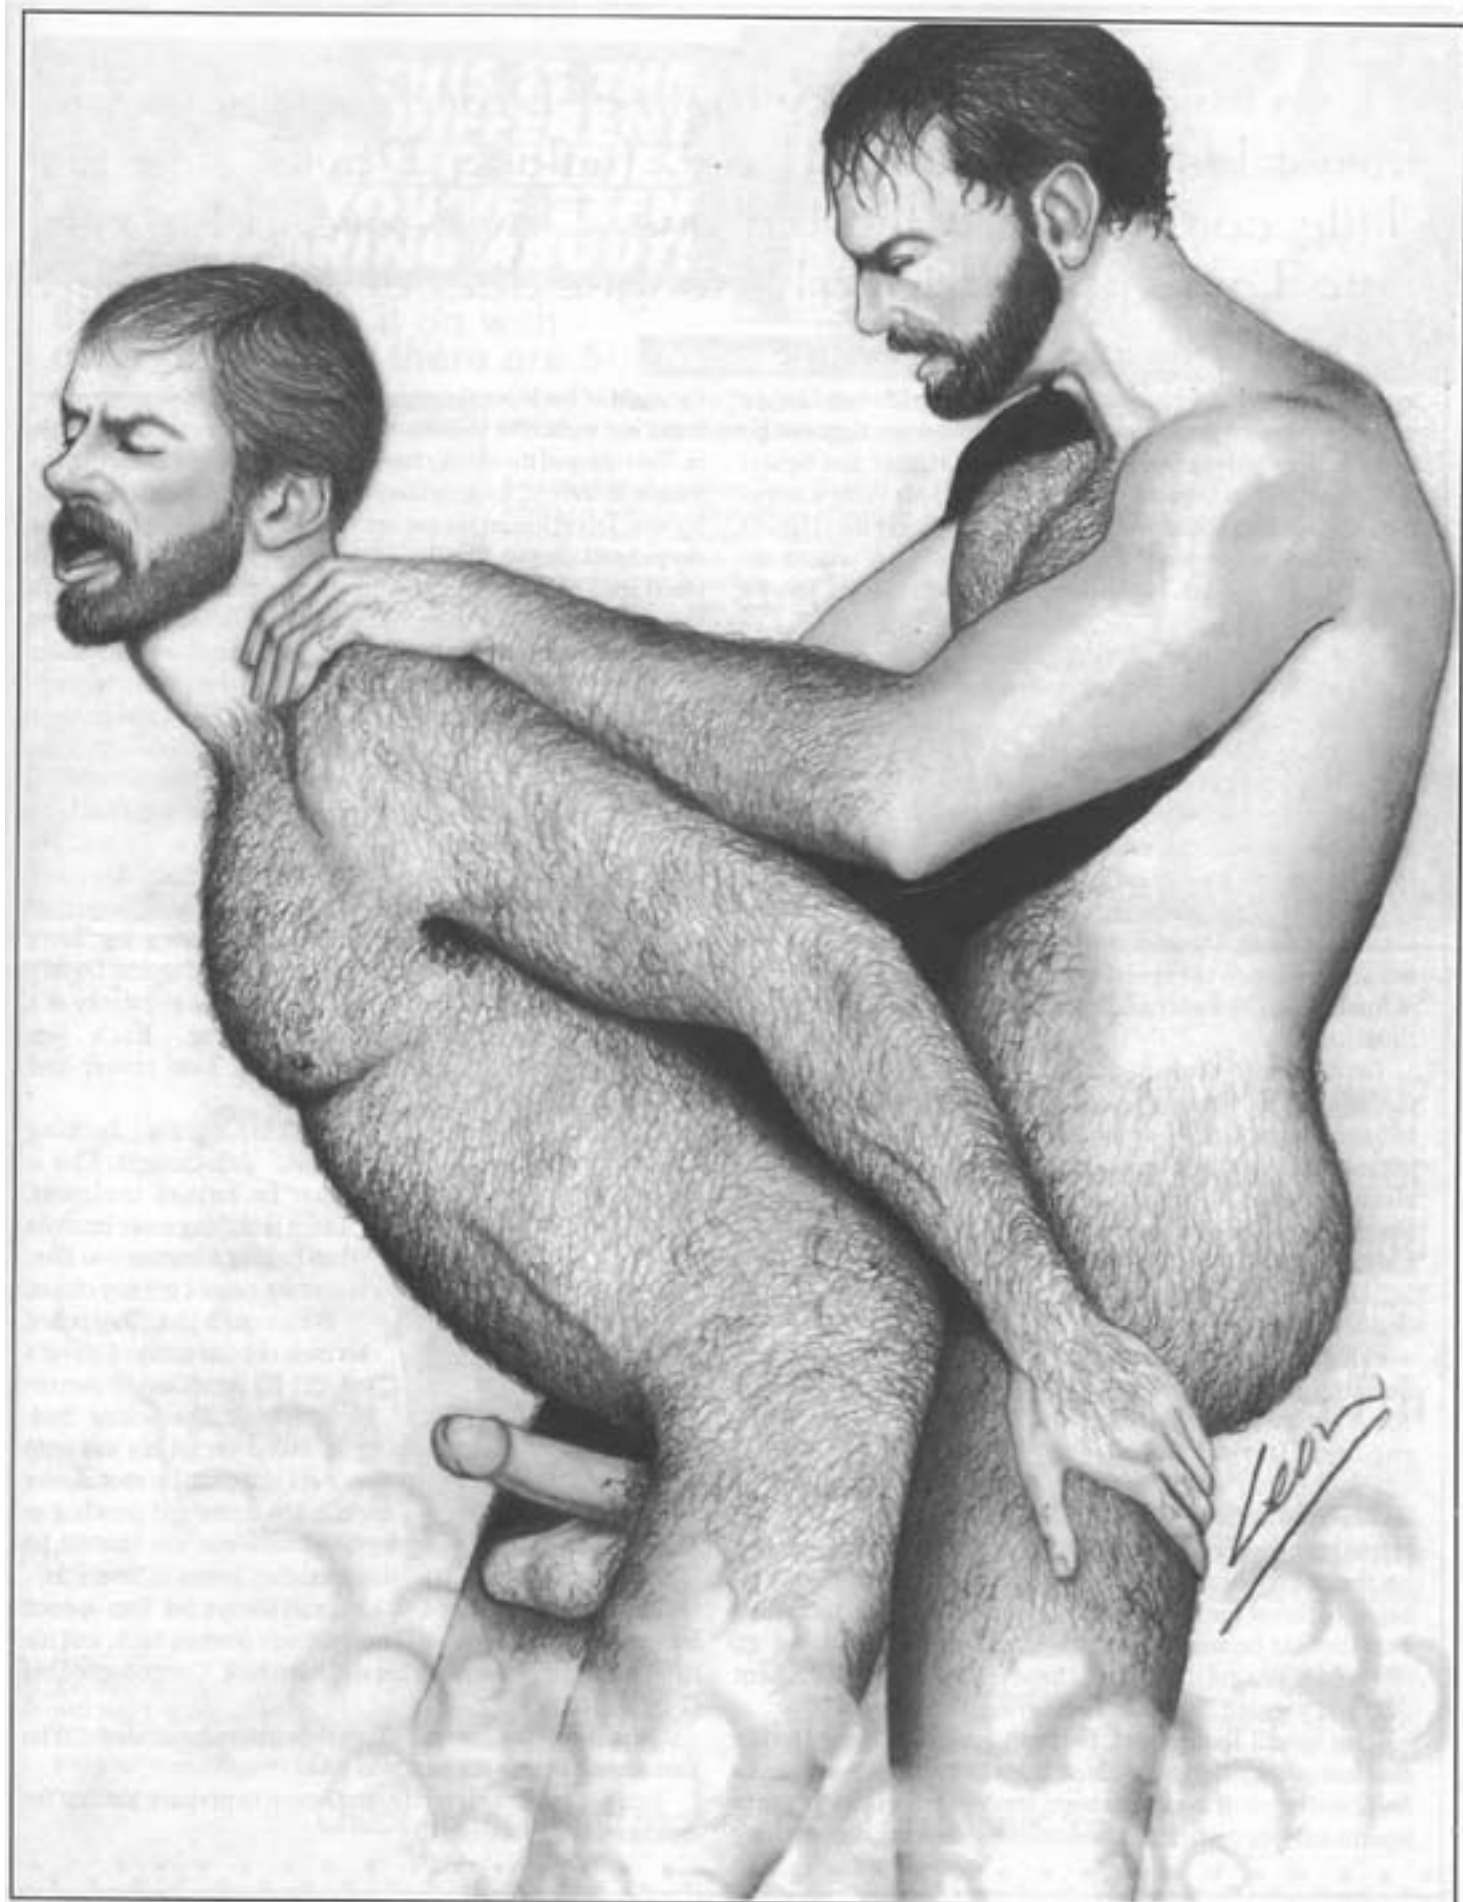

In the bathroom, Tom saw his reflection in the full-length mirror on the door. Not bad. Thick, black hair covered his face and chest. His nipples stood erect. Piercing them had been a good idea. His stomach had the beginning of a paunch that was common amongst the males in his family. His cock, nestled comfortably on his fairy balls, swung proudly between his legs. More than once, some stud had complimented him on the length

By Mickey D. • Illustration by Leon and width of his dick. Especially David. David. Just thinking about him made Tom sad. Had it really been three years since David died? They had made a life together in Boston, enjoying the freedom of gay life. At six feet two inches, David was two inches shorter than Tom. Thick red hair covered his body from the top of his head, down his chest, and over his legs. They made quite a handsome couple. One of their friends had photographed them in their brief bathing suits and the picture told them what they could not see. Their differing skin pigmentation suited them perfectly. As they lay in bed, Tom couldn't help but grin. His proud Italian parents and David's proud Irish parents had given birth to the joining of two very different nations.

Tom turned on the shower and stepped into the stall. Warm water sluiced down his body, making patterns in his chest hair. As Tom began to soap himself up, his fingers began to caress his nipples. Just the slightest pressure, and he became aroused. His cock began to respond, growing larger with each passing second. He remembered the last time he and David made love in the shower. Just the thought of this made Tom's pulse quicken.

He felt a presence and turned around. Standing on the other side of the shower curtain was David, looking as he did when they met in Montréal. David reached in and touched Tom and stepped into the shower. David embraced Tom, and then they kissed. It was electric! Their mouths opened, and each began to explore the other with his tongue. Deeper and deeper David's tongue went until Tom thought that it would come right out his asshole. Tom pulled David into his chest tighter and tighter until their bodies became one. He kneaded his lover's ass as they kissed. Tom withdrew and put his first finger into David's mouth. David began to slowly lick the digit and suck on it, working his tongue around. He knew that he was preparing Tom for the pleasures to come.

Tom enjoyed the musky taste of David's asshole. He thrust his tongue in and out, fucking David with his "little cock" before the big one. David forced his ass onto Tom's face, driving his tongue deeper and deeper.

Gradually, David began to lick his way down Tom's body. He maneuvered his tongue around one nipple, sucking and biting as he did. Then the other one got his attention. Back and forth he went as if he couldn't decide which one he preferred. Tom was on fire. He began to grind his chest against David's furry face, enjoying what David was doing. David ceased his worship of Tom's chest and knelt in front of him. It was time for the ritual to begin.

Gently, David drew back the foreskin of Tom's cock and began to lightly tease him. His tongue began to lick, to taste the precum already covering his head. Slowly, ever so slowly, David began to swallow Tom's cock. Tom felt David's teeth against his skin as David began to suck, working his throat muscles like that of a python until Tom's dick was completely engulfed. David stopped and looked up at him. A smile played at the corners of his mouth. Then he started to milk Tom's dick for all it was worth. David tightened his throat until Tom felt that his cock was in a vise. Slowly he began to thrust his hips forward in time with David. Just when Tom thought he would spout his load, David stopped, got up, and turned around. Now it was time for the finale. David bent over and wiggled his ass at Tom saying, "I dare you!"

That was all Tom needed. He knelt down and spread David's cheeks wide, getting a good look at his hairy hole. Tom licked a finger and began to work it in slowly, teasing David. David began to squirm and thrash around. Tom continued fingering him, enjoying the sight of his lover thrashing about like that. He removed his finger and replaced it with his tongue. Slowly, he worked his tongue in. Tom enjoyed the musky taste of David's asshole. He thrust his tongue in and out, fucking David with his "little cock" before the big one. David forced his ass onto Tom's face, driving his tongue deeper and deeper. Finally, Tom could not wait any longer. He stood up, and in one thrust, buried his uncut cock into David's sweet hole. Tom stood there for a moment and looked down. There was David, impaled onto his dick, bracing himself on the shower wall. Tom began to slowly thrust his hips forward.

He pulled his cock out to the head and then jammed it back in. David felt like the wind had been knocked out of him. He began to meet his lover thrust for thrust. Soon they had a wild pace going. Tom's balls slapped against David's ass with the regularity of a metronome. Each jam brought Tom closer and closer.

"This feels fucking great," Tom thought. This is what he missed the most. There is nothing more intimate than fucking someone you love. Two men cannot get any closer.

With a quick jerk, Tom pulled his cock out and sprayed David's ass with his cum. David's own orgasm was fast approaching. Suddenly, David thrust his ass onto Tom's still stiff cock. He shot all over the tile, screaming and growling as he did. When David was finished, he stood and they kissed as lovers do.

The alarm sounded at 6:00 a.m., as it always did. Tom opened his eyes and looked down. The quilt was pushed back, and his hand was wrapped around his still hard dick. Cum covered his chest and crotch.

"Was it really a dream?" Tom thought as he smiled. "Who said remembering the past was a bad thing?"

Tom got up, lit a cigarette, and began to prepare himself for another day in Boston.

COMING IN BEAR 50

Hey Guys,

The next issue of BEAR is our 50th issue. At the risk of soundin' all mushy & stuff...well, it's gonna be kinda special. A big, hairy, handsome lug named Jack Rodcliffe (some of you might recognize him) will be makin' a special appearance on our pages. Plus, we're gonna show you some hot new guys, a few new ideas (including, you heard it here, color pages!) and a buncha big, hard, hairy dicks.

Come on down to the Lone Star Saloon on July 23 from 8-10 PM and help us celebrate! We'll have free draft beer & food, BEAR giveaways, BEAR models on hand, and you can meet-n-greet the BEAR magazine staff! Please bring a canned food donation for the San Francisco food bank.

Also, all of you lazy bears: we're gonna be unveiling our special 50th issue at a beer bust on Saturday, July 17 from 8-Midnight at the Bull Pen in Guerneville as part of this year's Lazy Bear Weekend festivities.

BEAR* is 50 issues old in July! Don't miss it!

Zip-A-Dee-Doo-Dah

Being gay is better than being straight. Sure, we've got our problems, not the least of which was having to be a fag in junior high school—for most of us, gym class was like having Auschwitz for fourth period—but being a grownup, and being a fag, is a blast. Usually. It's important to remember that.

In a lot of ways, gay men and women are a little bit more on the ball than straight people—simply because we had to grow up with a secret. At some point, you and I looked in the mirror and realized we were gonna come out a lot different, and there was no escaping it. We're a minority, but our parents aren't. That's some heavy shit for a five year old. Historically, homosexuality has had such a bad PR problem, that it just kills me when straight people assume it's a choice on our part. No one would have picked this. It chose us, and we can just go off and fuck if we want. But I digress....

We have an edge. We've had to look harder, and step much more carefully. It builds character. We can be both, straight or gay, as we please or need to. Well, some of us have just a little too much taste and flair to confuse the world for long. But done right, it can be a helluva lot of fun; like the T-shirt, "Don't feed or tease the straight people." My sister's still not over a comment I made a few years back. She lives in a rural small town, and when two bubbas drove by in a big 4x4 pickup with a gun rack, I said, "You don't understand. In San Francisco men drive trucks like that BECAUSE they're gay."

Yeah, we can play it straight when we need to, and then laugh all the way to the bank.

Straight men have a lot of work to do. They have to follow sports. That alone is almost enough to put me off pussy. It's such hype, and there's so much pressure behind it. If a straight man doesn't like sports, there's something seriously wrong with him—a library scientist trapped in the body of a heterosexual. Have you ever been on an airplane only to have a quiet flight interrupted by six men, in six different areas of the plane, who start to yell, "WHOO! <clap-clap-clap> YEAH!" from under their headsets? It's the game, you see. They just heard a good touchdown thingy.

I can't think of any other occasion where people yelp and hoot loudly in public. But straight men have to. They know that, as soon as the plane lands, their client will grill them on the latest game, and they'd better know the answer or it could mean losing that new account.

Sometimes, though, I feel sorry for straight men. For one thing, they've got to date women, and having sex on a female human's terms is problematic, at best.

Now I LOVE women. They're the coolest. I think gay men have a better understanding of straight women, and that pisses straight men off to no end. HA! HA!

But a stewardess friend of mine is a girl. She's gorgeous and single and trying to date—I'm sorry, the things I hear her going through are so far removed from the problems I have as an urban gay man. She hasn't had sex since February. I haven't had sex since yesterday. She must go on two or three dates before sex will (or is allowed to) be brought up; she tells me the goofy, immature things men say to her, trying to get into her panties while pretending to care about her as a human being. God, what a mess. You've probably noticed: straight culture is a lot more geared toward finding a mate and keeping him/her for life. It's the whole family values thing.

I wish them luck. Really, I do.

Now for me, just last week, I fell into a raunchy, three-way, sex-pig session with two complete strangers on a moment's notice. I HAD been on the way to the bank, but a better deposit opportunity came up, so I took it. That's the way it is when you're gay in San Francisco. Wish I could remember that one guy's name, though, he had a nice butt....

Straight men face death by stoning if they admit to masturbating. Was sitting around with a bunch of clever waiters with taste one day, and we were discussing how often we beat off. One turned to the only heterosexual guy in the group and said, "How often do you jerk off?" The man screamed, "I don't! If I need sex I find a woman!" And he ran out of the room. No lie. He later apologized, and was so blown away that we could sit and have such a conversation. I think he was impressed.

As with all things, the key is to just be. When you know who you are and what you want, the rest doesn't matter. But there's a danger: it becomes real easy to sit back and make fun of other people and the way they are.

Ain't it great?

Now I'm not trying to pick a fight. Straight, gay, top, bottom, bear, not-bear, hell, I hate people who install the toilet paper roll so that the paper hangs down the back—I think they're stupid. We're not all alike, and we should celebrate our differences.

That's all, I guess. Just remember these things when you take your Crixivan, when you have only a cat to call family, when you piss and moan about the lack of intimacy and the return of platform shoes. We've got it pretty good. I quote a waiter I used to work with. Before he died he often sang this song to that old Disney tune: "Zip-A-Dee-Doo-Dah, zip-a-dee-aye, my oh my it's great to be gay; Suckin' him slowly/suckin' him fast. Or turn 'im over and bugger his ass." ☺

Bull's Balls!

by Ralf Konig
BK Press, Austin, TX
$15.95

I think it's safe to say we all have a spot in our hearts—and our pants—for construction workers. Paul, half of the couple which stars in Ralf Konig's Bull's Balls!, shares our sentiment. Originally written in German, and hilariously translated into English by Ryan Janssen, this is the twentieth such book created by this author/ animator recently introduced to American after years of fame in Europe.

Bull's Balls! is a torturously funny window into the life of Paul, a short, voyeuristic leatherman, and his piano-instructing vanilla lover Conrad. Both are fixtures in the small German gay community, yet both move and fuck in different circles. While Conrad develops a heated infatuation for his young piano student, Paul chases a Latino powerhouse, Ramón, whose massive torso and rough demeanor stand as a figurehead for construction workers everywhere.

Ralf Konig's animation is unique in gay smut in it's close relation to Sunday morning comics. The expressions are extreme, and the action is punctuated by the inclusion of raging hard-ons and leather imagery. The writing is sharp and cruel, just what you'd expect from jaded gay men (not that I know any). The rest of the tale that revolves around the focal couple smacks of real world—neighbors, friends, vicious queens and weekly episodes of the Golden Girls, included. And, when you get a load of Ramón, you'll think this muscle stud, with his dark hairy ass and fat uncut tool, bears close relation to his queer brethren of Etienne and Bill Ward fame.

I'm truly glad a friend introduced me to this talented animator. When animated smut is combined with the real-life adventure of being a gay man, and not just a fuck-toy in a fantasy world, the creative juices flow much stronger from the page. Ralf Konig, in the tradition of Tim Barela (Leonard & Larry), has tapped into those juices. I welcome him to my collection, and I encourage you to add him to yours.

Country Bears In Heat Leather Bears Do Chicago

by Manhunter Video
$49.95, avail. from Brush Creek Media

Manhunter Video has been pumping out their East-coast brand of bear smut for years, and their two new releases don't waiver from their dedication to smut. Country Bears in Heat and Leather Bears Do Chicago carry the same themes as Manhunter's past films. Simple mansex, processed and packaged for the bear-lover to enjoy.

Tending crops and chopping wood work up these bears' appetites for cocksucking and ass pumping in Country Bears in Heat. What starts out as a wet dream for a handlebar-mustached stud becomes reality when the cleaning boy finds him bathing with his boots and Stetson on—an ode to the late-artist Hank. They bring their wet scene of passion to the bedroom to chow on each other's bungholes while the cowboy's lover chops wood ignorantly outside. He soon entices the neighboring farm boy to check out his own log in the barn. After the farm boy gets his nuts roped and his tits pinned, he gets his fat cock swallowed while a goateed Ned Beatty wannabe looks on through the barn door. Later on, they all get together for a cookout that turns into a pig-out, making love in the country heat. Who needs firewood when they can generate heat like this?

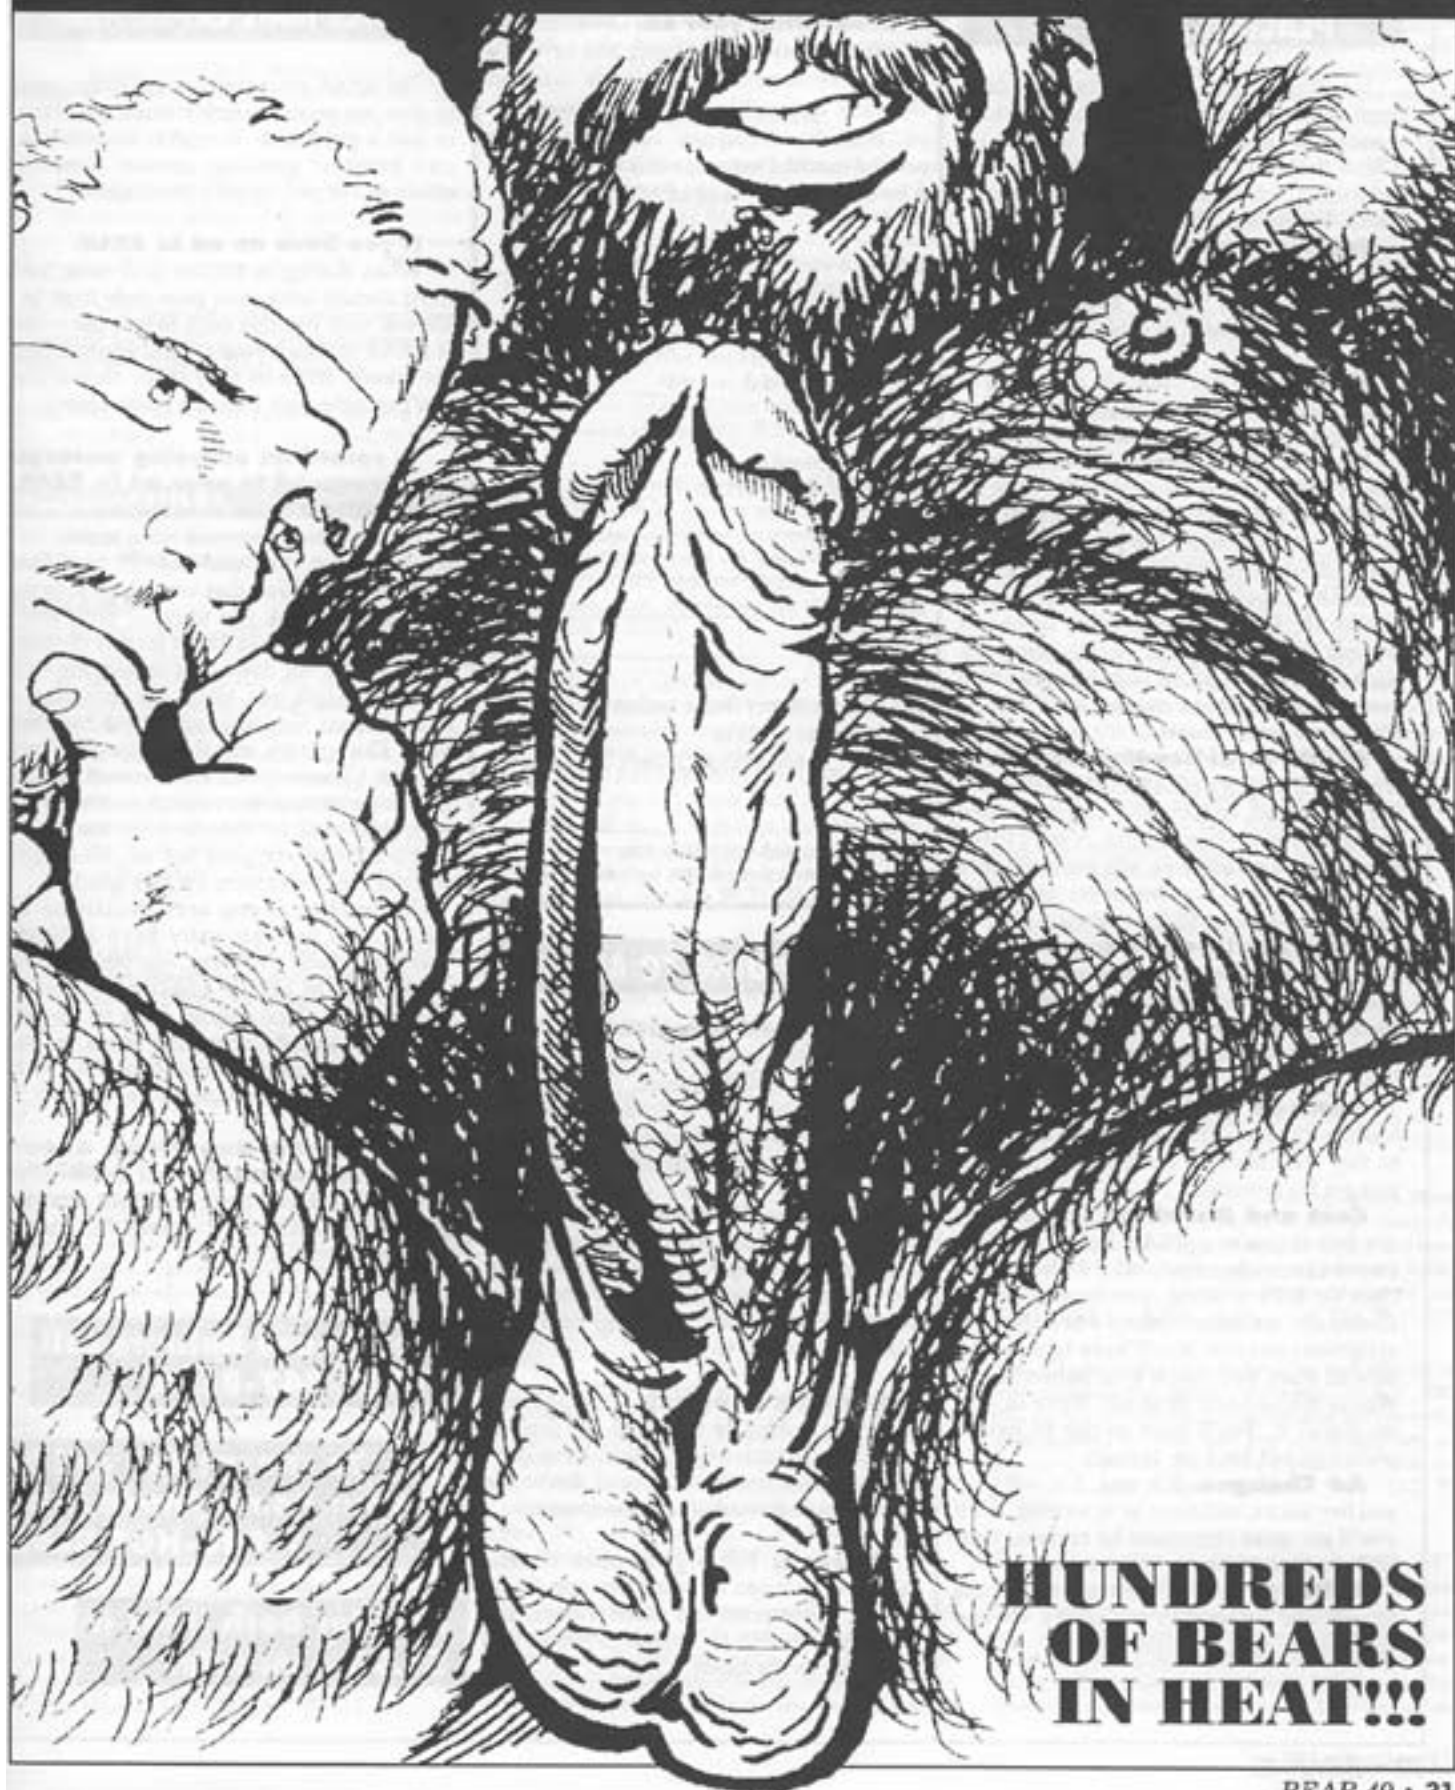

The second new release from Manhunter follows the journey of a furry tourist in Chicago from preppy jock to leather cub. The Cell Block bar is the setting for this transformation in Leather Bears Do Chicago. Coach Nick Polanski of BEAR 16 fame returns to porn as a fat-cocked daddy bear. He has his way with a furry leather cub, while a second couple of hairy studs, including hot, hung furball Anton Miller, play nearby. Our young tourist is then enticed by the barkeep to don a harness and boots for his initiation which includes taking a couple of good sized dildoes up his ass while straddling the bar's motorcycle.

Both Country Bears In Heat and Leather Bears Do Chicago are full of beefy, eager bears. For lovers of hirsute porn, they're great. However, like many bear flicks, these are slow in action, short on sexual variety, and over-scripted. If you like bear sex decked in leather and cowboy drag, then these newest offerings, along with Manhunter's other titles, have everything you'll want in beefy, burly carnal inspiration! D

YOUR BEAR PERSONAL AD... HERE'S HOW IT WORKS.

PLACING AN AD

Deadline for BEAR 50 personal ads is April 24. Deadline for BEAR 51 ads (which comes out the end of August) is June 26. These dates are subject to change as our publishing schedule varies slightly sometimes. Blame it on El Niño.

Text. Talk about yourself and be real clear as to whom you'd like to meet. Avoid negative shit, like "no fats, feds or Republicans." It doesn't work, and we'll probably change it anyway.

Names. We can't run ads addressed to Occupant or Boxholder. Use your initials or a name your postal carrier knows.

Phone Numbers. We won't print 'em. That's it. Period.

Photo Ads. We'll run a shot of your face or dick, but only once. Your photo must have a signed model release (see "Show Yourself In BEAR," page 35) AND a photocopy of your picture ID. Don't bother sending us photos without this stuff. We can't legally print 'em. Each photo sent to BEAR must be signed with your name and phone number on the back. Photos are not returnable.

BEAR Postal Box Numbers. If you wish, we'll assign a BEAR Postal Box Number to your ad, collect your responses and forward them to your address. A word to the wise: your own address will get you more responses. For U.S. subscribers only. Free for BEAR Buddies, $5 for everyone else.

Voice Mail Box Codes. We assign a voice mail box to every domestic ad. Guys can leave phone messages in your box after reading your ad, and only you can retrieve them. Cost is $1.98 per minute for both parties.

Common Courtesy. If a guy gets in touch with you, write back. Even if it's just to say, "No thanks," he deserves to know you got his message.

Cost and Duration. Personal ads are free if you're a BEAR Buddy (an $85, two-year subscription). Otherwise, they're $.25 a word, per issue. BEAR Buddy ads are discontinued when the subscription runs out. You'll have to submit a new ad when you renew your subscription. Wanna discontinue your ad? Write in, and we'll pull it. You'll have to pay to have a pulled ad put back in, though.

Ad Changes. It's cool, but will cost you five bucks, and must be in writing. Hint: you'll get more responses by revising your ad from time to time.

Edits. We reserve the right to edit ads for editorial consistency and clarity. We also reserve the right to refuse any ad.

Submitting your ad. Compose your ad on a separate piece of paper, and for God's sake, write or print clearly so we can read the thing. Remember, no telephone numbers or "Boxholder/Occupant" addresses will be printed in ads! Photocopy this form, or copy it by hand, but we need all of this info!

RESPONDING TO AN AD

Voice mail box number. To respond to a voice mail box number, see details under "Voice Mail Explained." If the ad says "No voice mail," it's a good bet the fella won't be checkin' his phone messages. Respond via written letter, or e-mail if it's listed.

BEAR Box Number. To respond to an ad with a BEAR Box number, seal your letter in an envelope. On this envelope, put the fella's box number in pencil where the stamp normally goes. Send this with $1 in a larger envelope to us.

Common Courtesy. Respond only to the ads looking for your type, and don't be pullin' the old form letter routine. If you don't fit the specifications listed in the ad, don't come whining to us if you don't get a response.

Prisons. Not a great place to send money, or pictures of your hairy ass. By all means, correspond and make friends. But know the potential for trouble to you as well as the guy on the inside.

VOICE MAIL EXPLAINED

Our BEAR voice mail system is designed to give you access to new friends, true love, or just a good fuck. It works. Record your own personal greeting, answer someone else's ad, or pick up your messages.

If you have an ad in BEAR:

When dialing in for the first time, you must already have your pass code from us. We will mail you this code before the issue of BEAR in which your ad first appears hits the stands. Write us here at the shop if you don't receive your code for some reason.

To record an outgoing message to correspond to your ad in BEAR, or to collect your messages:

Once at the voice mail main menu, immediately hit the "star" or "*" key. The system will tell you that you are picking up your mail and ask you to enter your four-digit mailbox number. Don't let this confuse you. Most of our mailbox numbers are five digits in length and, yeah, the recording's all fucked up. Go ahead and check for your mail. The system will then give you four options. Choose option #3 to record an outgoing announcement to match your ad. This way, guys will be able to hear the voice that's attached to your hot ad. Messages will stay in the system for two weeks.

Remember, if you are advertising in BEAR, you automatically have a BEAR voice mail box. However, our 900 system allows you to set up additional boxes if you want to. This can be done by choosing command #3 from the main menu, which is different from option #3 which appears at the message retrieval area.

Still have questions about BEAR voice mail? Call 1-800-234-3877 and ask to speak with our answer guy, Mike Eades. He's usually here until 4:00pm, Pacific Time.

Credit card holders call
1-800-347-BEAR

To charge the call to your home phone, dial
1-900-HOT-BEAR

Cost for both lines is $1.98 a minute.

KENTUCKY

Northern KY smooth polar bear, age 54, seeks hairy bear to bring me out of hibernation. I'm 5'10", 195 lbs., full trimmed beard, full crop of brown, short, parted, military-style hair. Not hung big, but have a nice head between my legs, and a handsome one on top of my shoulders. Flaming works well, but the washers get weak from long JO sessions, and a sticky love-mess develops. Seek hairy, masculine bear who enjoys rubbing beards together, tits chewed and sucked on, pits sniffed and licked, and a nice stomach to lie my head on and fall asleep. My interests include hiking, power walking (every day), working out, dance music (I may be 54, but very young at heart). Especially like Pet Shop Boys, Erasure, D.J.'s Farley and Keoli, etc. Other interests include railroads and transit rail systems, both model and prototype, and collecting dance music vinyl. Enjoy healthy food. Like what your reading? Then write and perhaps we can get lost in each others paws and fantasies. Northern KY Bear, PO Box 15068, Covington, KY 41015-0068. (55) ☎ 21525

ED

32-year old Ed was raised on a farm in Washington. These days, he calls Oregon home, where things can get nippy come winter—that sweater he's wearing must come in pretty handy.

One of his best buddies is his dog Jake, who Ed describes as a "big red mutt." They go hikin' together.

Sexually, Ed likes fucking and sucking, and doin' it outdoors really works for him. Says he's not into one particular type of guy, but "big, strong, hairy, and bearded" don't hurt. He mostly likes a guy who is self-confident.

Ed strokes his stuff for the camera in our upcoming fur-filled-solo-flick 1-900-HOT-BEAR. He also makes cool bear-shaped candles. We sell 'em in the BEAR store.

So... what're you into?

From Vanilla to Chocolate.

Blue-Collar:
Indicates a regular-Joe, manual labor man.

Leather:
Wearing it, but also can indicate domination.

Party:
Usually means drugs, and we're tellin' yer mom.

Raunch:
Body smells, fluids and secretions.

Rimming:
Licking and eating ass.

Scat:
Shit, guys. Shit.

Straight Acting:
A really gay-phobic way of saying non-eliminate.

Toys:
Dildos, up your butt.

Watersports:
Playing with piss.

THE HERO

OF THE GREEKS

Herakles, Son of Zeus, pulled on the reins of his horse commanding it to halt in the middle of the dusty road. In front of him, the road forked into two parts, one continuing due east across the flat green Libyan landscape, the other heading south into the desert. He wondered, tugging on his full beard with his right hand, which was the road to Egypt? He didn't know, and there were no signs to point the way. Annoyed, he pondered this unexpected problem and how it affected his whole situation.

It was bad enough that his cousin, King Eurystheus of Tiryns, had blithely sent him on the Eleventh of his Labors in search of the golden apples of the Hesperides. Even worse, nobody knew just where the Land of the Hesperides was; he had traveled from Greece to Italy and then on to Iberia, to no avail. He was now in Africa in hopes that the trading men of Carthage could give him direction, but the story was the same. The mystified Carthaginians shook their heads in regret, for they had never heard of this country; however, they suggested, rather helpfully, that the Hero of the Greeks travel east to Egypt. Certainly in ancient Memphis, on the banks of the Nile, the wise priests of the oldest kingdom in the world would know of that place which he sought. As a result, here he was now, stymied, in the middle of nowhere under a warm, spring, noonday sun, trying to figure out which damn road led to Egypt.

Herakles started to utter a disdainful curse, then stopped when he noticed a cloud of dust racing down the eastern road toward him. Curious, he waited for the rider and his vehicle to come into sight and reach him. His curiosity gave way to surprise when a two-wheeled Egyptian cart drawn by two horses flew into view. The driver was in an obvious panic and urging the horses on for all they were worth. It was only when the cart was several hundred feet in front of Herakles that the driver noticed him in the middle of the road. Herakles was hard put to discern which squealed louder, the driver, the horses, or the wheels of the cart as the hurtling mass ground to a sharp halt only a few feet in front of him. The Son of Zeus smiled politely.

"Greetings, Egyptian," he growled in Greek at the floundering driver and his two attendants, "Why the great hurry? Is some demon chasing you?"

"Indeed not, Most Noble Sir!" the pudgy middle-aged Egyptian gasped in fluent Greek as he straightened his dust-covered black wig on his shaved head. "Rather, we are fleeing the place of a demon!" The Egyptian gasped again, this time in disbelief and his two attendants gaped open-mouthed as they fully took in the sight standing before them.

There, seated on his horse, was a great bear of a man, the likes of which they had never seen before in a dozen lands. Even seated, it was obvious that Herakles, Son of Zeus, was taller than the tallest men of Nubia. His build was massive and muscular with his bare legs, arms and chest displaying a dense covering of coarse black hair. A full black beard framed his squarish face, as did the long black hair on his head held in place by a gold circlet, the symbol of a Greek prince. Cool pale-blue eyes gazed humorously at the Egyptians, and his smile revealed a flash of white teeth. Most arresting, however, was the shimmering tawny pelt of the legendary Nemean Lion draped on his bare shoulders, the sharp glittering golden claws of which were tangled in the dense black fur of his broad bare chest. Herakles graciously nodded his head at the staring Egyptians.

"I am Herakles, Son of Zeus, of the kingdom of Tiryns, in the land of the Greeks. Perhaps you have heard of me?" his rumbling voice trailed off on the warm Libyan breeze.

Immediately the Egyptian driver nodded his head respectfully to Herakles. "We are honored by your company, Great Prince. Even in distant Memphis and Thebes, we know all about the famed Hero of the Greeks and his exploits. I am Rahotep of Memphis, a merchant on my way to Carthage with my attendants and a consignment of papyrus goods."

Herakles nodded his head in recognition, then leaned forward in his saddle eyeing the Egyptian keenly. "Now tell me, Rahotep of Memphis, why were you traveling—no, fleeing—so fast?"

Rahotep graphically waved his right hand at the road behind him. "A few miles back down this road, Great Lord, is the main border crossing between Libya and Egypt. There, the ruler of the district on the Libyan side, Antaeus, has set up a road block—a great gate across the road. He collects a fearful toll from all travelers!"

Herakles raised his eyebrows. "Ah, and what is this fearful toll that he demands?"

"Either three-quarters of your goods," the Egyptian stated tersely, "or, if you do not wish to part with them, then you must wrestle with him. If you win, you go free."

"And if you lose?"

"If you lose, he confiscates all your goods and kills you." Rahotep smiled weakly. "As you can see, Son of Zeus, I am no wrestler, so I gave him my goods. It will take me years to recoup the loss."

These words caused a wave of anger to sweep over Herakles. "By all the Gods, I will not let such infamy stand unchallenged! Follow me, Egyptian, and I shall get your goods back for you and put this bandit in his place!"

"Thank you, Great Prince, but I must warn you that you have not met this Antaeus, and we have. Dare you challenge him?" the Egyptian offered hesitantly, but the thunderous look Herakles shot him caused the rest of his words to freeze in his throat.

The party of Egyptians fell in line behind Herakles and retraced their steps eastward down the dusty Libyan road. In a little over an hour, they reached a low range of eroded hills through which the road meandered in a narrow gap, and which delineated the Libyan/Egyptian border. Making a sharp turn right in the narrow hemmed-in road brought them suddenly into a small clearing. A great stone portal with barred double wooden doors and a large gatehouse blocked the road as it narrowed again beyond the clearing. No one greeted or confronted them as they stopped in the middle of the clearing. Herakles dismounted his horse, brusquely tossed the reins to one of the Egyptian servants, and strode to the barred doors. He took his massive right fist and banged loudly three times on the door causing the whole structure to shudder.

"Who dares to block the road to the Son of Zeus!" he roared, "Show yourself so that I may give you a well-deserved thrashing!"

As soon as he finished speaking, the tall door of the gatehouse was flung open, and its occupant stepped into view. The Egyptians cringed in dread as the all-too-familiar figure sauntered over to Herakles.

"So, you dare to challenge me, so-called Son of Zeus?" the man said in a deceptively casual tone as he gave a menacing smile and balled his hands into fists. "Know now that you rashly challenge Antaeus, Son of Gaea, Goddess of the Earth, who has never been defeated by any god or man!"

Herakles pursed his lips in momentary pique as he sized up his opponent. Antaeus, Son of Gaea, was every bit as giant and bearish a figure as Herakles. He was broad-shouldered, thickly muscled, and appeared to be every inch a match to the Hero of the Greeks. Unlike Herakles, the Libyan wore his straight black hair and beard cut short and wore no signs of rank. His only attire was a linen loincloth that revealed his massive body covered with a dense, black, curly pelt of hair. The Libyan's smile and voice now took on a contemptuous quality as he coldly surveyed his challenger.

"So be gone, Greek boy lover, and thank your impotent gods that I have spared you!" He turned and grinned arrogantly as he noticed the horrified Egyptians nearby. "Ah, Rahotep of Memphis, returning to Egypt so soon? You certainly aren't picky in the company you choose to travel with!" Antaeus started to move towards the Egyptians' cart. "And what other treasures do you have to pay my toll today?"

Herakles stopped him abruptly in mid stride and sentence by clamping a firm hand on his left shoulder.

"It is not the Egyptian today who will be parting with his merchandise, Libyan, but you who will be restoring his stolen goods to him! Either return his goods immediately, or deal with me!"

Antaeus glanced diffidently at the hand on his shoulder and smiled humorously. "As you wish, boy lover. Will you wrestle me for them?"

It was Herakles' turn to smile with awful cheeriness. "Yes! It will be an easy victory for I am the best wrestler in all of Greece. Be warned, Barbarian, that today you have more than met your match!"

"We shall see about that," the Libyan said softly and Herakles duly noted the glint of unknown knowledge in his dark brown eyes.

The men moved apart from each other. Antaeus sneered and began to remove his loincloth.

"In your honor we shall wrestle in the depraved style of the Greeks."

Herakles nodded silently and took the fabled skin of the Nemean Lion off his shoulders and tossed it to the Egyptians. He then removed his princely gold head circlet, sandals and loincloth and gave them also to the wide-eyed Dwellers Beside the Nile. When both men stood naked in the afternoon light, they crouched into the appropriate wrestling stance and began to slowly circle each other. Rahotep shook his head in excited awe as the two demigods jockeyed for position. What a tale this would make in Memphis—why even jaded Babylon would hang breathless on every detail!

Then, simultaneously, with bellowing roars that hurt the Egyptians' ears, the two enraged beings charged each other head-on. They collided with such force that the very earth seemed to tremble slightly as they became a snarling, grappling mass of hairy, sweaty flesh. After a long, long time, Herakles finally managed to knock Antaeus' legs out from under him and sent him sprawling in the dust. Breathing heavily, the Hero of the Greeks grunted triumphantly as his opponent laid still, face down, in the roadbed.

"Son of Zeus, you have won!" shouted Rahotep in delight as the Egyptians applauded the Greek victor. But their joy was short-lived.

Calmly and deliberately, Antaeus got to his feet and assumed his wrestling stance. Herakles frowned in puzzlement—the man should have been as winded as he was, but he appeared as fresh and full of energy as when they started! How could this be? The Egyptians, too, had lapsed into troubled silence over this unexpected development.

"Come on, Greek boy lover," the Libyan taunted him maliciously as they began to circle each other again. "Can it be that you are getting tired? Has it been that long since you tangled with a man and not some rosy-cheeked boy?"

Sullenly, Herakles ignored these vocal barbs meant to rattle him. Once again, the two demigods clashed and fought and grappled with each other like two enraged bears. Their grunts and snarls filled the air as they sought to dominate each other. After a long time, it was Herakles who again managed to throw Antaeus into the dust. This time, the Egyptians waited warily to see if Antaeus was truly defeated before they applauded the Hero of the Greeks.

"Have you had enough?" Herakles rasped hoarsely as he wiped the sweat out of his eyes with his right hand. "Acknowledge defeat, Barbarian!"

"Never, Greek boy fucker!" and with that, Antaeus sprang to his feet, laughing. Stunned, Herakles watched his now-ominous opponent assume his stance and begin to circle him with miraculously renewed strength and energy. The Egyptians stood rigid in disbelief at this unfolding scene.

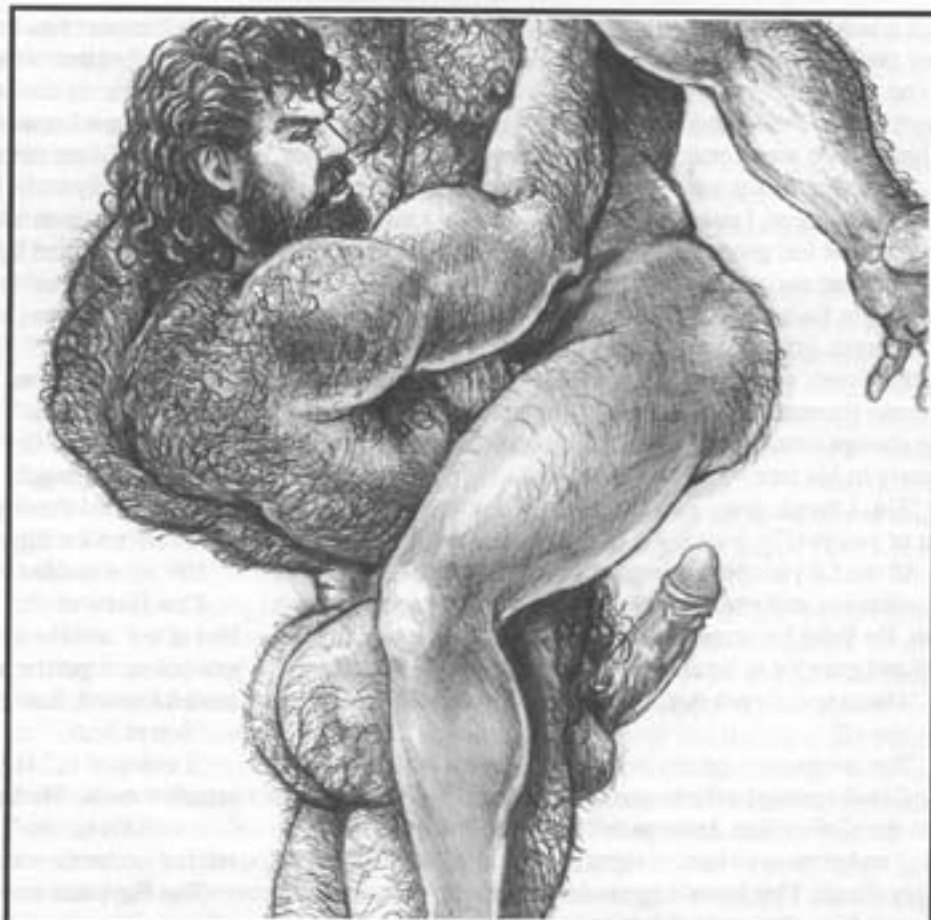

Thus, for a third time, the two demi-gods collided and struggled furiously in locked combat. Such was the fury and excitement they invested in their struggle, that now they were both sporting raging hard-ons. The Egyptians, being of a modest race, were shocked at this display and were tempted to avert their eyes; however, the fact that both men had hard-ons that put the erect member of an Apis bull to shame, kept them glued to the scene.

As Herakles struggled mightily with Antaeus, a growing sense of exasperation came over him. How did the Libyan keep renewing his strength every time he cast him down into the dust?

"The dust. The earth," Herakles thought as furiously as he fought. "Yes, the Earth! Antaeus was the Son of Gaia, Goddess of the Earth!" Every time the Hero of the Greeks sent him sprawling in the dust, his Mother, the Earth, renewed his strength! That was the key to the puzzle! But how to undo him? Put simply, he must prevent him from coming into contact with the earth.

Herakles tried to grab Antaeus in a back hold and felt his hard prick accidentally slide between the sweaty asscheeks of the Libyan. The shock of this contact caused Herakles to grin, for he was, after all, Greek, and a member of a most crafty and randy race. A plan formulated quickly in his mind and he waited for the right moment to put it in effect.

That moment came when the Libyan rushed Herakles. The Son of Zeus ducked and deftly flipped his opponent upside-down and held him there in his arms. This position put the Libyan's sweaty, hairy ass right in Herakles' face. Herakles moved to lean back against the Egyptians' cart for support, scattering the dumb-founded Egyptians in his wake. With a shout of glee, the Hero of the Greeks shoved his bearded face between the asscheeks of the startled Libyan, and began to furiously lick and suck his puckered hairy hole while still holding him tightly. The Libyan fought awkwardly against this invasion, but to no avail. Lust had now become a weapon in the battle between the two men and Herakles was already legendary for his lustful prowess.

WITH A SHOUT OF GLEE, THE HERO OF THE GREEKS SHOVED HIS BEARDED FACE BETWEEN THE ASS CHEEKS OF THE STARTLED LIBYAN, AND BEGAN TO FURIOUSLY LICK AND SUCK HIS PUCKERED HAIRY HOLE WHILE STILL HOLDING HIM TIGHTLY.

Try as he could to fight it, the artful rimming Herakles was giving him, eventually overwhelmed Antaeus. Before he knew it, the Libyan was gazing attentively at the Greek's enormous hard cock that was slapping him in the face. The foreskin had slid back to reveal a large purple head that was copiously oozing a stream of clear precum down the shaft. In the throws of his sexual frenzy, the Libyan opened his mouth and began to greedily suck on his opponent's manhood. When this happened, Herakles grunted in pleasure, and rimmed Antaeus even harder. "A few moments longer," thought Herakles feverishly as lust clouded his thinking, "and it will be time to spring my trap."

When Herakles finally felt his tongue begin to slip roughly into the throbbing hole he was assaulting, he went into action. Without warning, he pulled Antaeus' mouth off of his cock and flipped his body in his arms. In one swift motion, the Hero of the Greeks grabbed him by his asscheeks, spread them, and forcefully shoved his entire cock into the waiting orifice. While Herakles laughed in triumphant satisfaction, the Libyan gave such a bellow of pain and outrage, that the Son of Zeus guessed they probably heard it even in the remote northern villages of Rome and Byzantium. Antaeus went wide-eyed and rigid with shock as the Greek's raging member tore relentlessly in and out of him. Now it was Herakles' turn to viciously taunt the Libyan.

"Greek boy fucker, am I?" he almost hissed in the Libyan's ear. "Oh no, my friend, I much prefer fucking a bull of a man like you! Doesn't that feel good—my hard cock up your tight, hairy hole? Tighten your ass around it—make me shoot my seed deep inside you! Goon, Barbarian, do it! Make me fill you with my seed!"

Antaeus gritted his teeth as he was repeatedly impaled on the Greek's prick, but after awhile, the sensations of pain became transmuted into those of pleasure. Herakles sensed the change coming over the Libyan, and snickered mischievously in his face.

"Ho, Libyan, feels good doesn't it? I will make a Greek out of you yet!"

All the Libyan could do was gasp for air as wave after wave of unknown, and undreamed of, pleasures rampaged through him. He flung his arms around Herakles' neck to steady himself and growled as he almost drooled in his ear.

"Damn you, Greek dog, I will make you pay!" but Herakles cut him off.

"You are going to get my payment in a moment!" the Hero of the Greeks panted as he began to thrust with renewed energy into the slick orifice. Antaeus felt the prick inside him begin to swell and grow even harder, signaling that the Greek was close to his climax. This knowledge suddenly provided extra excitement to him, also, as he felt his own hard-on sliding furiously between their sweaty hairy stomachs. Quite unexpectedly, he gave the Greek a fierce grin as he began to meet the upward thrusts with matching downward thrusts of his own. At long last, they were both like two Cretan bulls in raging full heat.

"Fill me with your seed, Greek, and I will cover you with mine!"

Herakles threw his head back and roared with full animal lust as he gave a mighty final thrust of his cock into the hot, tight anal canal he had made his own. Antaeus went glassy-eyed as he felt the Son of Zeus begin to spurt jet after hot jet of his seed into him. The hotness of the Greek's flowing seed inside him sent him over the edge. With a roar of pleasure that fully matched that of the Greek's, his own iron-hard cock swelled up and suddenly shot a veritable fountain of his white manseed up into the air between them. In a second, both of their faces and beards were covered with the sticky, slimy fluid of life. Panting heavily in the inevitable exhaustion that follows sexual release, both men slumped against each other for support. Herakles chuckled lightly as he felt his softening prick slowly pull out of Antaeus' well-used ass.

"Now, Barbarian, will you acknowledge that I have bested you?"

"Aye, Son of Zeus, I readily acknowledge your victory," he smiled sardonically. "I see now why they say one should never turn his back to a Greek!" He paused. "I must admit, though, that you have taught me pleasures today that I didn't know existed—and I thank you for it. Now, put me down, and I swear I will restore the Egyptian's goods."

Herakles nodded his head in silent approval.

The Hero of the Greeks released the Libyan who, to Herakles' amusement, walked rather unsteadily to the gatehouse to get the purloined papyrus rolls. While the Libyan busied himself, Rahotep warily came over to Herakles.

"Son of Zeus, that...um...was quite a display."

"I enjoyed it," Herakles responded with a pleasant, self-satisfied smile. He lazily wiped the Libyan's manseed off his face with his hands. Then, to the Egyptian's utter surprise, he started to chortle with amusement.

The Egyptian stared at the Greek demigod, "I fail to see what is so funny, oh Hero of the Greeks."

By now Herakles was laughing so hard that tears had come to his eyes. He playfully whacked the scandalized Egyptian on his butt with his right hand.

"Don't you see? I feel sorry, Egyptian, for the next male traveler than wanders down this road! Imagine the toll that poor fool will now have to pay!"

"Indeed, I can imagine," Rahotep of Memphis mumbled as he gazed nervously at the still semi-hard cock of the naked Hero of the Greeks. By Holy Mother Isis, he silently and firmly vowed, the next time I go to Carthage, it will definitely be by sea. ☐

Appear Fear

I write this the day after my birthday. I was kinda hoping that after having reached my majority twice, I'd have a renewed perspective of some sort. At 36, I am much the same man I ever was, although the patch of gray on my chest is spreading.

At long last, the hearing finally happened and the verdict is in: my partner, the Rev. Steve Sabin, will be removed from the roster of clergy of the Evangelical Lutheran Church in America as of April 15, 1998. Something to add to the list of death and taxes, I guess. We got tons of coverage, too: AP, CNN, NPR, local and international. The ELCA didn't know what hit 'em.

The hearing was held at the Holiday Inn in Des Moines, near the airport. The occasional low-flying aircraft provided odd punctuation, as if the Voice of God was addressing us. The hearing started at 10:30 a.m. on Sunday, February 2. Bishop Hougen and the ELCA claim ignorance in this matter of scheduling, though it's a "secularizing indignity," as one of our supporters put it, to set the time at the hour normally accorded to worship services.

I was not allowed to observe the hearing. The ELCA would not allow it. I found this out just as the hearing was to begin.

According to Steve and others who observed, the hearing opened with a vicious personal attack on me. Leroy Voigts, attorney for Bishop Phil Hougen, the man who charged Steve with conduct incompatible with the pastoral office, said that comments I made to the press and articles I published "hurt the church." Reports indicate he spent the better part of his opening statement attacking me.

Steve's attorney, Jon Lewis, spent some time trying to determine what a practicing homosexual is. When Lowell Almen, the secretary of the ELCA, the man charged with interpreting its constitution, was asked if he could "help the panel determine what acts constitute being a practicing homosexual," he replied he "could not help the panel determine that. That's a matter the panel will have to decide for themselves." He couldn't say what a "practicing homosexual" was.

When Craig Settlage, the man who wrote the policy that forbids "practicing homosexuals" from the ministry of the ELCA, was questioned, he said, "The policy doesn't specifically address the issue of what behaviors are prohibited," and that "There is no definitive ELCA interpretation of the policy," although he admitted he has a personal opinion of what it means. No one knows what the policy means, but they know they have it.

When Hougen was questioned, he said there were mistakes in the charges, and that some of the charges were not punishable offenses, but "we all know what the problem is."

So the ELCA, without specifying and without even knowing what a practicing homosexual is, maintains a policy to ensure that there ain't none of 'em in its ranks. It maintains it doesn't even need to know or define what a practicing homosexual is because "we all know what the problem is." Hougen also said, "It would be a tragedy to throw Steve off the roster, but it would be a disaster not to." As near as I can tell, "a tragedy" or "a disaster" is the most curious way to wit-ness the Gospel yet devised.

We learned the verdict the day after the hearing ended. Hougen released to the press that Steve would be removed from the roster before Steve had a chance to discuss it with his parishioners. Hougen has no apparent problem with abjuring this aspect of pastoral concern.

The next day, after there had been much media coverage, Hougen called Steve's church and said he didn't release that information at all. This is a difficult lie to pull off when Hougen's face is plastered all over the six-o'clock news. This is a difficult lie to pull off when you have a copy of the fax Hougen sent to various sources, with a clear indication that it originated at his office.

Steve and I are thinking about taking some time away, though it hasn't happened yet. We're still learning how to relax. One man offered his cabin at Rehoboth, a couple offered their condo in South Beach; we received an offer from a guest house in P-town. Some folks in D.C. invited us to speak and preach, but it won't happen for a few more months.

About three years ago, when I first started writing this column, I wrote about my friend John and how he died and how that affected me. There are many striking similarities between what's going on now and what went on then. My tattoo of a Ka-Bar still reminds me to cut away what doesn't matter.

For instance, about a week or so before the hearing, Steve and I were going through a particularly rough day; both of us were very dispirited, feeling empty and scared. Then I got mad. Anger is a great motivator for me as long as it's the right kind of anger—the kind of anger that tears through everything and shows you what's really going on. Steve has a hard time with death, something he acknowledges. In the midst of this day-long despair, I said, "This is like death. Only you're so busy seeing what's dying, you can't see what's being born." That provided the requisite psychic Superglue.

We're still together. Steve's call from God is just as profound as it ever was. My love for him is just as strong, if not stronger, than it has ever been.

The scary part is that this is just beginning. The ELCA may have violated a local discrimination ordinance in choosing to remove Steve from the roster. Seems as how they didn't remove him for a bona fide religious reason. Oops.

There is a saying among my people that goes, "Where there is fear, there is power." Be afraid. Be very afraid.

Armpits are John's thing. Sniffin' 'em, lickin' 'em. "The riper, the better," he says. Hot, sweaty, hairy men turn him on.

Originally from Gettysburg, Pennsylvania, John lives by the Potomac River in Maryland, where he strips & paints airplanes at the local airport.

He likes gettin' his hands dirty in the great outdoors, camping, canoeing... "anything outdoors," he says. On blustery days, he's content to stay inside and refinish antique furniture while listening to Aaron Tippin or some good ol' classic rock.

John's a cat lover, sharing his home with three of 'em. He loves Italian food, and your best shot at makin' him giggle is with a good funny movie. "I love comedies," he says.

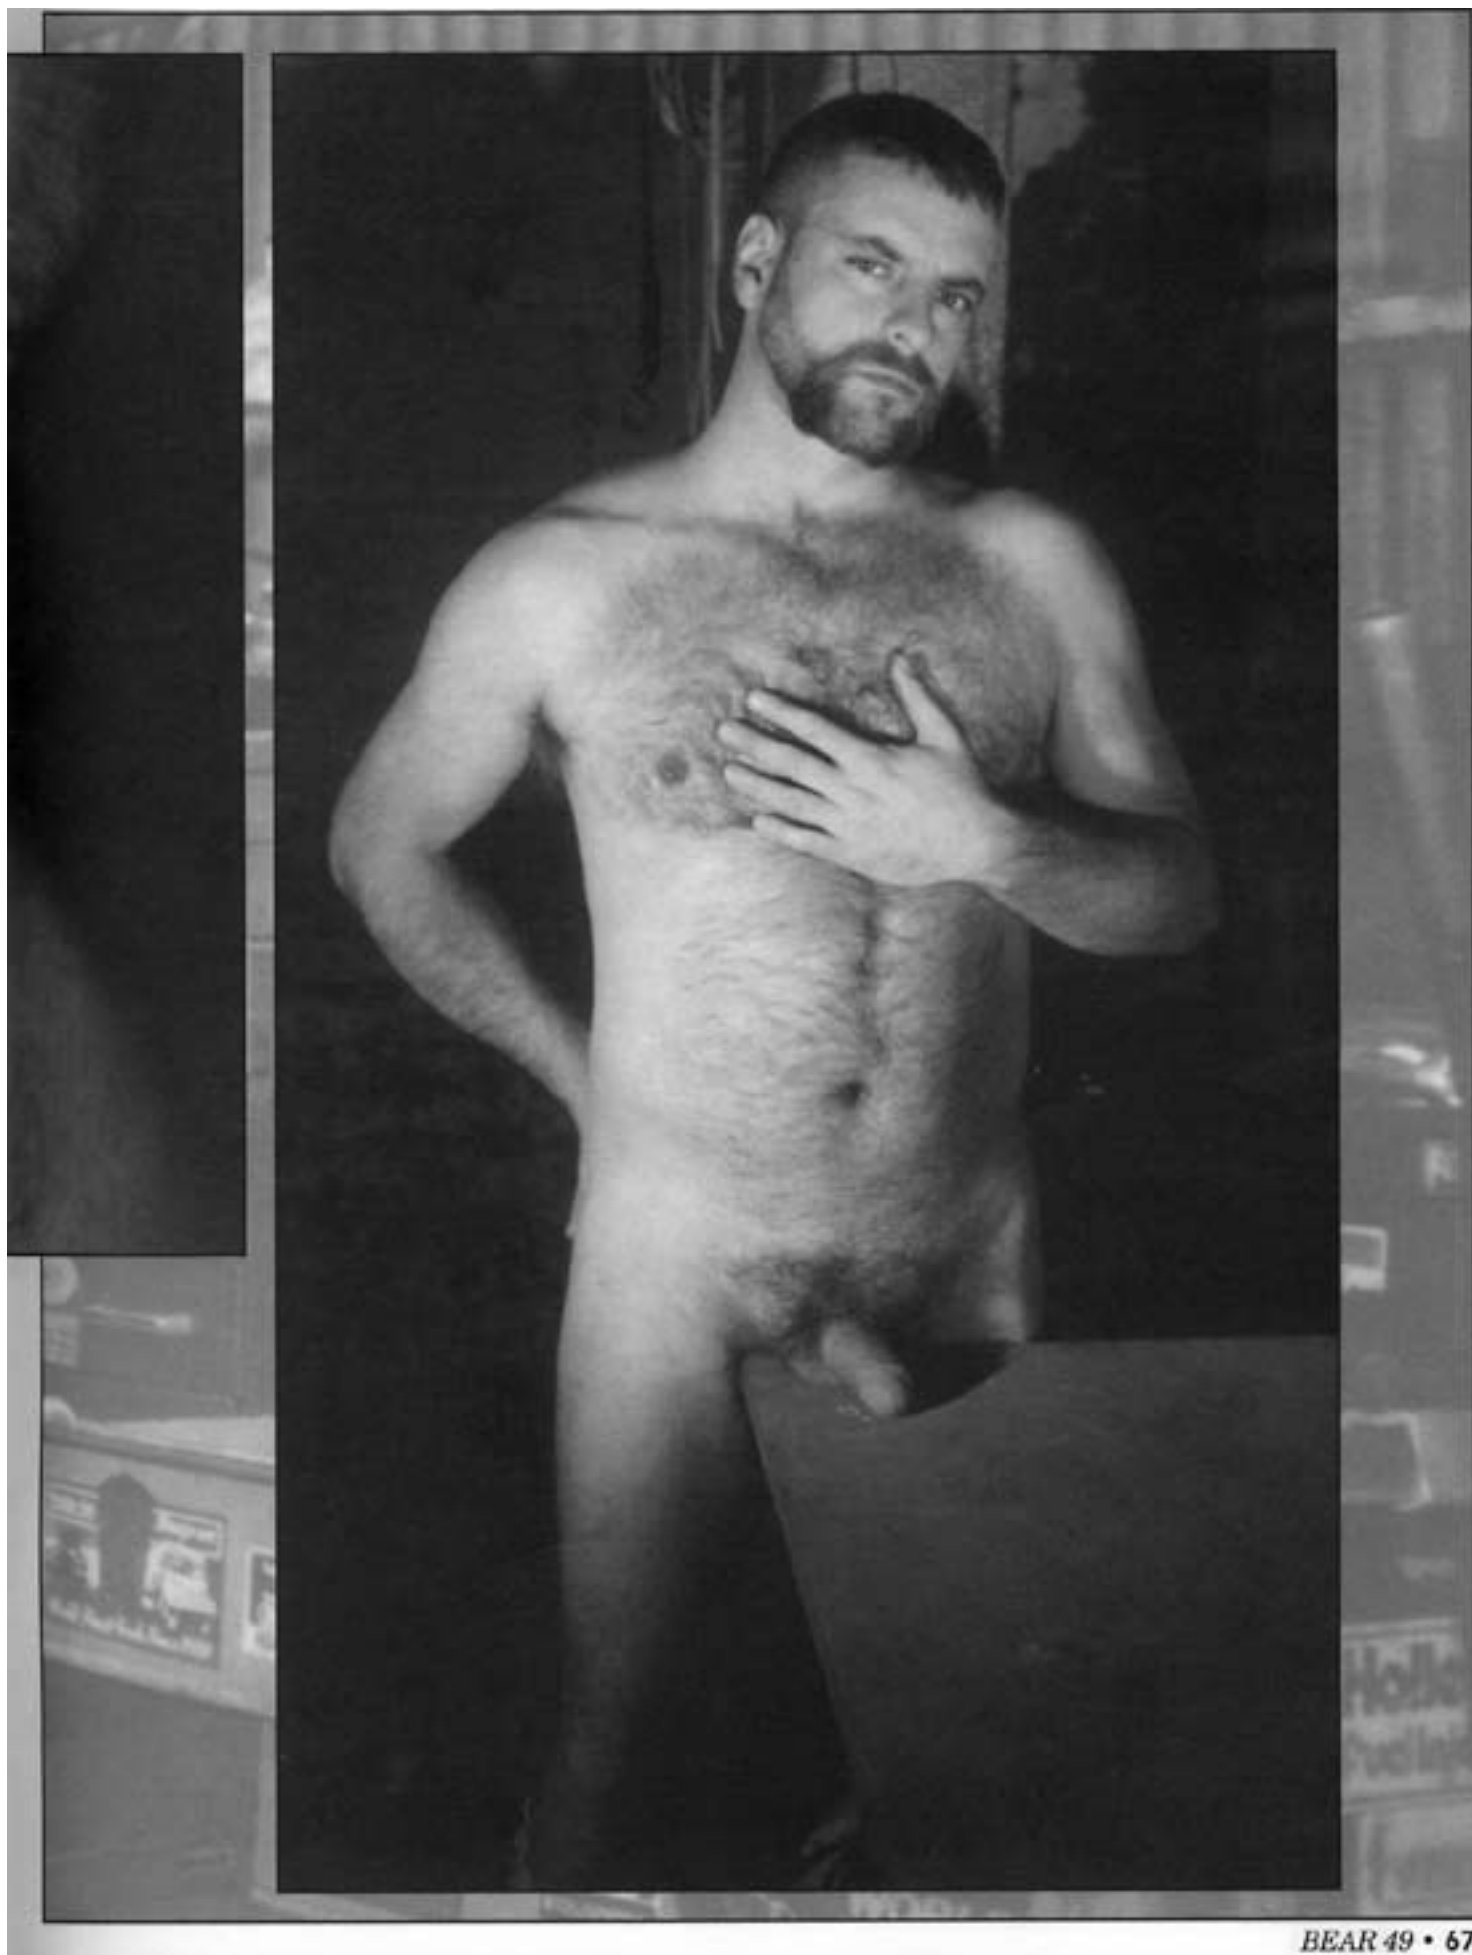

He appears in Brush Creek's soon-to-be released video BEAR: Palm Springs Vacation.

'98

El Niño brought more than rain to San Francisco over President's Day Weekend. More than 700 furry fellas from around the globe converged on San Francisco for International Bear Rendezvous. Hosted by the Bears of San Francisco, the three-day event encompassed numerous events, bear busts, sex parties, and that annual festival of love, Valentine's Day. Given that the Bay Area had been soaked by the wettest winter this century, a bounty of burly bruins was just what was needed to brighten those otherwise soggy days.

Thursday brought the first of the Lone Star's packed nights (which lasted well through Sunday). Official IBR events kicked off Friday with tours, vending and the beginning of a non-stop hospitality suite at the Ramada that turned into potential porn in the wee morning hours.

Sunday night, the Mr. International Bear contest was held, emceed by the world's most famous flagbearer, Lurch. After a humorous interlude by Michael Bruno, and a hilarious audio-challenged set of Dragapella! by San Francisco's own The Kinsey Sicks (I'll never look at Newt Gingrich the same way again), the cream of this year's ursine crop was crowned for 1998. Jeff Boone was handed the Cub title, Loyd Powell came out on top in the Daddy category, the Grizzly title was won by Sherman "Hideee Hooo" Hanke, and the well-carpeted, soft-spoken muscle doc from the UK, Rod Savides, made the sashing of Mr. International Bear true to it's name.

President's Day meant waving goodbye for many, knowing that next year they will return to share in Bears of San Francisco's celebration of hirsute homosexuality.

Real Men. Real Sex. Real Hot.

Brush Creek Media

BEAR: The classic magazine of Naked Hairy Homo Smut that gave the Bear movement its name. Masculinity without the trappings—BEAR serves it up raw in each issue. Bimonthly.

BUNKHOUSE: Studs in spurs and Stetsons hittin' the hay hard. Bunkhouse peeks into the barns and down the backroads where hard-ridin' cowboys and ranchers do it all. Quarterly.

INTERNATIONAL LEATHERMAN: The hottest leather/SM/erotic magazine in existence. Leatherman brings you sizzling men and hot leathersex, plus vital news and information on the leather scene. No nonsense here! Bimonthly.

MACH: Begun in 1980 as "Drummer's big brother," Mach has now joined the Brush Creek family, where it is still Big Brother, and a mean sucker too. No profiles, no personals, no features; everything here is calculated to get you hard and get you off. Quarterly.

FORESKIN QUARTERLY: If you love that overhang covering his cock, then FQ is for you. Inside, you'll find erotic fiction, photos, news and personal ads—all of it by and about natural, uncut men and their admirers. In fact, if you like cock, you'll love FQ. Quarterly.

POWERPLAY: Powerplay explores the sexual underground every three months, giving you access to kinky, over-the-edge mansex—and fantasies beyond your wildest imagination. Powerplay puts you in the middle of the erotic scenes no one else will even dare to show you. Quarterly.

HOMBRES LATINOS: Celebrating sexy Latino men from all over the world through the best erotic fiction and sexiest art around. Packed with photos calientes, Hombres Latinos is the source for gay Latinos and the men who love them. Quarterly.

GBM: GBM is the serious, sexual magazine for gay African-American men and their fans. The lives (and bodies) of gay black men are exposed, explored and celebrated in photos, fiction and features every issue. Quarterly.
